Rosenberg Institute for East Asian Studies at Suffolk University
Annual Report for 2013-2014

Rosenberg Institute

Follow this and additional works at: https://dc.suffolk.edu/rireports

Part of the Asian Studies Commons, and the Higher Education Commons

Recommended Citation
https://dc.suffolk.edu/rireports/4

This Report is brought to you for free and open access by the The Rosenberg Institute for East Asian Studies at Digital Collections @ Suffolk. It has been accepted for inclusion in Rosenberg Institute Annual Reports by an authorized administrator of Digital Collections @ Suffolk. For more information, please contact dct@suffolk.edu.
Overview

The Rosenberg Institute continues to be the beacon for Asian Studies at Suffolk. Members of the Suffolk community and of the general public in the New England area equate Suffolk’s Asian Studies initiatives with the Rosenberg Institute, a point that has been made to the Director many times. Our very well-received Rosenberg Institute Scholar Series was the most active of the Institute offerings.

In the past academic year the Rosenberg Institute successfully mobilized support from several on and off campus organizations. Each organization contributed their own energies and talents and funds to programs that were co-sponsored by the Rosenberg Institute. In this way we take advantage of the synergies of working with like-minded groups, and we save on the costs to Suffolk for our events.

The active on-campus unit was the Asian Studies Program. This is aimed at undergraduate students who want to add an in-depth knowledge of Asia and an Asian language to their skill set. They may declare either an Asian Studies
Major, double major (with another discipline such as Economics, History, Philosophy, etc.), or as a Minor field. Students must meet the credit and course requirements set by the program, and they must pass a final pre-graduation assessment by a panel of members of the Program.

One of the active off-campus bodies this academic year was a member of our community outreach partners, the Chinese Historical Society of New England (CHSNE). A number of Suffolk faculty and staff are present or past members of CHSNE. Suffolk students often have internships, both paid and unpaid, with this organization as part of their training program in Asian Studies.

In the 2013-2014 academic year both of these organizations held several programs of interest to Suffolk and to the general public as well. The Rosenberg Institute assisted in publicizing the events and drawing in an audience. As a result, at each of these events Suffolk students and staff were joined by members of the general public, reinforcing the image of Suffolk as an educational institution deeply rooted in the Boston community and making its resources available to the general public.

Rosenberg Institute Scholar Series

The “core” of our activities continues to be the Rosenberg Institute Scholar Series. These are the most distinguished of our speakers who make a presentation on campus and are available to meet with interested faculty and students before or after their public lecture. It is the centerpiece of our programs, around which we build our other activities. We had seven speakers in our Series this past academic year.
We were able to secure The Poetry Center, housed within the Mildred F. Sawyer Library, as the venue for all of our talks given as part of this Series. The speakers in several cases were international visitors (whose travel costs were paid by other organizations). In each case we had a full house, often with over fifty audience members per talk. In two cases, the diplomatic offices in Boston of Korea and Taiwan generously made the speakers available to Suffolk and reported back to their home governments on our favorable cooperation.

Rosenberg Institute Scholar Series

Fall 2013

The Chinese Exclusion Act: What It Can Teach Us About America. 排華法案

Dr. Ben Railton. He is Associate Professor of English Studies and Coordinator of American Studies at Fitchburg State University. His new book, the title of his talk, highlights how remembering the Chinese Exclusion Act can help us as we consider the issues of legal/illegal immigration and American diversity. The inspiring American stories we discovered shifted our understanding of American identity and communities, past and present. Co-sponsored with the American Studies Minor Program of the History Department and the Asian Studies Program. September 2013.

Between Integration and Coexistence: US and Chinese Strategies of World Order. 中美外交之將來

Asian and Asian-American Studies: Challenges and Opportunities. Dr. Peter Nien-chu Kiang (江念祖), Director of the Asian-American Studies Program at UMass Boston. He has been helping Asian immigrants into New England to build successful lives for them and their families. He brings both intellectual and street-smart knowledge to this topic. October 2013.

"The Korean Peninsula: Challenge & Opportunity 韓國朝鮮將來如何
Kangho Park, Consul-General of the Republic of Korea in Boston. This area of the world has again been in the news a lot in the 2013-2014 academic year. It sometimes appears the North Korean leader Kim Jongun wants to start a war. Late in 2013 President Obama moved in US ships and missiles, Japan went on alert, and Chinese President Xi Jinping slapped the hand of North Korea and said “Stop this now!” November 2013.

Spring 2014

Democracy in Taiwan and Mainland China 民主主義在台灣在中國. Dr. David J. Lorenzo, National Chengchi University, Taipei. Dr. Lorenzo discussed his exciting new book that explains how Chinese leaders have felt about the idea of democracy in the twentieth century. He looked at several famous Chinese leaders, including Sun Yat-sen, Chiang Kai-shek, and Chiang Ching-kuo, not forgetting Wen Jiabao and various contemporary democracy advocates both inside and outside the CCP. This book tells us that a more orderly form of democratic interaction, usually coupled with heavy government “guidance,” has been preferred.
Australian-Asian Co-productions: A case study of ABC-HBO Asia partnership.  Dr. Robert DeFillippi, Suffolk University, spoke about how many Asian producers of film and TV do not like the American Hollywood model of global production. The Asians want to focus on local themes relevant to their own societies, and they want to focus on programming for younger viewers. The Asian producers want to work with Asian creative talent to bring the films and dramas to market. Professor DeFillippi has been working most recently in Australia, Japan, and Indonesia on his research. Co-sponsored by the Rosenberg Institute for East Asian Studies and the Department of Communication and Journalism. March 2014.

Media in China: more unintended consequences? 傳播? 中國? 結果? Dr. Marcus Breen, Bond University, Queensland, Australia. This presentation highlighted issues that confront Chinese society because of the Internet. For example, the newly informed Chinese masses are demanding access to improved living conditions and sometimes riot, which is an indicator of how the Internet may empower the masses against the state, even while the official state line is that the masses should be empowered. Co-sponsored by the Rosenberg Institute for East Asian Studies and the Department of Communication and Journalism. March 2014.

The final two talks in the Institute Scholar Series were co-sponsored with the Department of Communication and Journalism, being of special interest to students in the department. Those were the talks listed above by Dr. Fellippi and Dr. Breen. Many of the audience members for those talks were students in Communication and Journalism courses. Professor Micky Lee’s help was instrumental in organizing these two talks.

Special Public Event: The China Town Hall Meeting

The China Town Hall Meeting, 中美關係 最近報告 featured a discussion with former Secretary of State Madeleine Albright. This was the seventh annual meeting and the fourth held at Suffolk. Secretary Albright spoke to us via a live webcast from Washington, DC. We gathered in The Suffolk Law School at 6:15pm (the webcast from Washington, DC began at 7:00pm). The speaker brought in by the National Committee was Associate Professor Vanessa Fong from Amherst College. She was an engaging speaker who stimulated the audience to ask many questions and the audience was extremely pleased with her talk.

The meeting was sponsored in Boston by the Rosenberg Institute for East Asian Studies at Suffolk and WorldBoston, in conjunction with the National Committee on United States-China Relations (New York). These National committee events are underwritten by the Starr Foundation. October 2013.

Asian Studies Program

The activities of the Asian Studies Program promote an interest in Asia on the campus and encourage interested students to select an Asian Studies major or minor. Students from other campuses in the area attended these events, though the majority were Suffolk students. This past academic year, several of the lectures in the Institute Scholar Series received assistance from the Asian Studies Program, among them the talks by Dr. Railton and Dr. Kiang.

In addition, the Asian studies Program sponsored the following talks, which were also assisted and promoted by the Rosenberg Institute.

Asian Studies Program Open House. Suffolk students who were in China, Korea, and Japan this past year showed slides about their adventures. Suffolk faculty talked about the Asia-related courses to be offered in the spring 2014 semester. Asian food was served! Sponsored by the Asian Studies Program and the Rosenberg Institute for East Asian Studies. October 2013.

Careers in Asia. The Careers Office at Suffolk University presented a speaker who had experience working in Asia. Students interested in a career working in Asia asked questions and talked about their plans. Co-sponsored by the Asian Studies Program and the Rosenberg Institute and the Careers Office of Suffolk University. October 2013.

Destination Tibet: Visit to the Roof of the World. Our intrepid colleague Professor Jonathan Haughton spent summer 2013 teaching in Shanghai, then took a trip to Tibet. He coped with the high altitude and the tensions between Chinese and Tibetans. He showed the astounding slides he took and talked about what he saw, setting his comments in an historical context. He has been traveling in Asia for decades, so gave an informed commentary. Co-sponsored by the Asian Studies Program and the Rosenberg Institute. November 2013.
Women, Career and Education in Modern China. We asked three female professors at Suffolk, each with a Chinese cultural background, to speak to us about their female perspectives on education and travel to America. The speakers were Micky Lee from Communication and Journalism; Kate Li from Information Systems and Operations Management, and Susan Wang, Visiting Scholar from China. Co-sponsored by the Rosenberg Institute and the Asian Studies Program. February 2014.

Nowruz, a spring festival of Persian origin that has been celebrated for over 3,000 years. This traditional Persian (Iranian) New Year celebration was explained by visiting scholar Mahdi Farhani Monfared from the Department of History. The audience also enjoyed some Persian food and pastries baked by Dr. Monfared’s wife as well as the colorful power point talk about the antecedents of the celebration. March 2014.

---

Cooperation with Other Organizations

Year of the Horse 2014 Chinese Lunar New Year Celebration 馬到成功. In addition to a talent show performed by Chinese students in Boston, the evening ended with a full course Chinese meal catered in the student cafeteria in the Donahue Building. President and Mrs. McCarthy joined other faculty, staff and students from Suffolk at this gala event. The activities were organized by the undergraduate Chinese Student Association and the Taiwan Student Association. The Welsh Theater on campus, holding 250 persons, was sold out for the event. (Dr. Suleski is faculty advisor to the Chinese Student Association.) Co-sponsored by the Rosenberg Institute and the International Student Office. February 2014.

Disappearing Chinatowns. Dr. Andrew Leong is co-author of a report prepared by the Asian-American Legal Defense Fund. It examines the situation for Chinatowns in New York City, Philadelphia and Boston. Our Chinatown in Boston is a good example. The building owners are absentee families who don’t live in the area. They are happy to sell their property to a developer who puts up high-rise condos, which many of the workers and residents of Chinatown cannot afford. The restaurants close and jobs are lost, so the workers and patrons move on to other locations. The Chinatowns begin to disappear. We can see this happening in Boston’s Chinatown, now being surrounded by buildings much higher than the historic buildings of three or five stories. A meal of Chinese food was served. Co-sponsored by Diversity Services, the Suffolk Asian-American Association, and the Rosenberg Institute. April 2014.

The First Chinese American: The Remarkable Life of Wong Chin Foo. Author Scott Seligman talked about his new book. The book tells the story of an early advocate for the Chinese communities in the United States in the late 1800s. Held at the Kwong Kow Chinese School Auditorium, 87 Tyler Street in Boston Chinatown, with many members of the local Chinese community present. This talk was organized by the Chinese Historical Society of New England (CHSNE) and co-sponsored by: The MA Cultural Council, the Asian Resource Workshop, the Wong Family Benevolent Association, the Asian Studies Program at Suffolk University, and the Rosenberg Institute for East Asian Studies. April 2014.
The first Boston screening of The Iron Road was shown at Suffolk’s Modern Theatre. A story about the Canadian transcontinental railroad, the exploitation of workers, the danger, the anti-Chinese feelings, plus a romantic drama. It was part of the Boston Asian-American Film Festival (AARW), and was co-sponsored by the Chinese Historical Society of New England (CHSNE) and the Rosenberg Institute for East Asian Studies at Suffolk, along with Bridgewater State University. All Suffolk-affiliated people were admitted free.

Sending Suffolk Students to Asia

Among the goals of the Rosenberg Institute at Suffolk is to encourage students to travel for study abroad in Asia. As part of this effort a generous gift from our benefactor Mr. Richard M. Rosenberg in the fall of 2013 allowed us to establish the Richard M. Rosenberg Asian Studies Scholarship early in 2014. To be eligible for consideration, applicants need to be a fulltime Suffolk student, with a GPA of 3.0 or above, having declared a Major or Minor in Asian Studies. Applicants submit a resume and a short essay of about 500 words, stating their academic interests and plan of study abroad.

The first student, Hannah Lyn Duhaime was awarded a scholarship of $2,000 to assist her in the spring 2014 semester in Kyoto on the campus of our partner school Ristumeikan University. Hannah has maintained a GPA of 3.85 and is majoring in Advertising with a Minor in Asian Studies.

Suffolk continues to send its students to study in Asia, often for a single semester. In the 2012-2013 academic year we had four students studying in China; five students studying in Japan, and four students who went to Korea. The students in China received scholarships from the Fulbright Program. The students in Japan were at our partner school Sophia University in Tokyo and after returning to the Suffolk campus they organized a Japan Student Association which in the 2013-2014 academic year held a number of activities at which Japanese was the language of communication. The students in Korea each received a scholarship from the Jongha Scholarship Foundation organized by KCC Corporation in Seoul. Dr. Henry Kim of the Economics Department assisted Dr. Suleski and Dr. Zheng in these programs.

Rosenberg Institute Hosts visiting Scholar from China.

In the 2013-2014 academic year, the Rosenberg Institute welcomed Dr. Liu Xiaoli 劉曉麗 as a visiting scholar for a one year appointment. The invitation letter was issued by Dean Greenberg and Dr. Liu was invited to be housed in the Department of History by department chair Dr. Robert Allison.

Dr. Liu is a specialist on the recovered literature of the Manchukuo. This was a puppet state set up by the Japanese from 1932 to 1945 when they occupied Northeast China. Its traces are highly visible in northeast China still today: the major rail lines run on beds laid out by the Japanese; striking buildings put up on those days are used today for hotels, banks, and hospitals; large-scale coal mining operations expanded by the Japanese are still in use today.

Dr. Liu has been rediscovering literature produced during that period, stories and essays about the life and times of Manchukuo that had disappeared from public notice for nearly seventy years. When Manchukuo suddenly collapsed at the end of the war, most of the literature written in Chinese and in Japanese was “lost,” because it had appeared serialized in newspapers and magazines. But few libraries had collected the newspapers or magazines. Through careful research of library holdings and used book markets, Dr. Liu has been able to retrieve and “re-create” much of this literature, which will appear in Chinese in a series of thirty-five volumes edited by Dr. Liu. Since Manchuria is also a specialization of Dr. Suleski, Dr. Liu wanted to be based at Suffolk.

Dr. Liu was given an Outstanding Young Scholar award by the Chinese Ministry of Education in 2009. She teaches at East China Normal University in Shanghai, one of China’s outstanding schools. Her expenses at Suffolk were completely covered by the Chinese government.

Suffolk and Harvard Co-sponsor a one-day workshop on the importance of Manchukuo.

In this case, the Rosenberg Institute joined with the Weatherhead Center for International Affairs at Harvard to put on the workshop which featured several well-known scholars in the field, plus graduate students from Harvard and Yale. Dr. Liu Xiaoli made a presentation about her research, and Dr. Suleski chaired a panel of experts. The workshop was titled The Making and Unmaking of Manchukuo. It took place on the Harvard campus in April 2014. Scholars from Suffolk also attended. The Fairbank Center for Chinese Studies at Harvard, Dr. Suleski’s previous employer, also joined to provide funds for the gathering and the current Center Director Dr. Mark Elliott, chaired the workshop.
Heaven the Equalizer. Rosenberg Institute Sponsored an Exhibition of Chinese Paintings. See poster below.
Heaven the Equalizer
Linxiang Li’s Chinese Paintings
天鈞——李林祥中國畫作品展
Dates:
22 April to 29 May, 2014
Location:
Sawyer Library, Suffolk University
73 Tremont Street, Boston

Sponsors: Rosenberg Institute for East Asian Studies
Mildred F. Sawyer Library; Suffolk University
In April and May 2014, the Rosenberg Institute joined with the Mildred F. Sawyer Library to sponsor an exhibition of paintings by shanghai artist Li Linxiang 李林祥. The exhibition was titled Heaven the Equalizer (tiangou 天鈎). Li uses traditional rice paper, inks and brushes, but his creations tend to be very symbolic, prompting an intellectual response from the viewer. The five creations hung in the large display cabinet at the entrance to the Sawyer Library were all mounted on traditional-style scrolls. Li has exhibited in Canada, Europe and Australia, but this was his first exhibition in the United States.

An Opening Reception was held in April 2914, at which many of the top officers of Suffolk were present to congratulate the artist. Among these were President James McCarthy, Interim Provost Bernard Keenan, Vice-Provost Jeffry Pokorak, Dean Kenneth Greenberg, History Chair Robert Allison, Library Director Sharon Britten, and Dr. Suleski of the Rosenberg Institute. Artist Li presented a traditional style scroll of mountains and rivers to the Rosenberg Institute. The scroll was accepted on behalf of the Institute by President McCarthy, and it is now on loan hanging in the president’s office. (Artist Li Linxiang is the husband of our visiting scholar Liu Xiaoli, so he paid his own expenses to Boston since his purpose was to visit his wife and daughter for two months.) A news story about the opening reception was put on the front page of the Suffolk University Homepage. A photo from the opening Reception is below.
Photo shows left to right: Dean Greenberg, Interim Provost Keenan, President McCarthy, Vice-Provost Pokorak, Artist Li Linxiang, History Chair Allison, Institute Director Suleski, Library Director Britton.

Visitors to the Rosenberg Institute in 2013-2014

Dr. Suleski is always pleased to welcome professional visitors to the Institute, where they learn about our programs and also relate the projects they are working on. They offer advice about possible projects and directions we might take. In no small measure, they help to spread the word about the active programs of the Rosenberg Institute to their own institutions.

Arthur J. Coury. Dr. Coury is a specialist in the fields of biomedical research and bioengineering. He has had a distinguished career with many publications and patents. He has been appointed a visiting professor at Sichuan University in Chengdu China, and he had various questions about dealing with his Chinese colleagues and government entities. July 2013.

Bert Stern. Dr. Stern taught English and creative writing at Wabash College for nearly forty years. He also taught at Peking University in the 1980s, where he met the then elderly Robert Winter, an American who was in China from the 1920s until his death in the 1980s. Not a communist, not a political radical, Winter was a vigorous man of strong opinions and a strong sense of adventure. Dr. Stern has written a book about Winter. We discussed the materials he used and aspects of the editing yet to be done. July 2013.

Tanaka Shigeko 田中惠子. Mrs. Tanaka is a Vice-President of the Asiatic Society of Japan. She is also a specialist in the history of Hizen 肥前 porcelain produced in Japan and exported in the middle of the 1600s. Her research has uncovered how these objects made their way to Mexico, Spain, Portugal, and England, where they are now held by museums and private collectors. We discussed her visit to Boston to inspect pottery collections in New England. August 2013.

Dwight Clark. Mr. Clark is the founder of Volunteers in Asia, headquartered at Stanford University. VIA exchanges university students between the United States, Japan, Singapore, Burma, and Taiwan. The group is now celebrating their 50th anniversary, and all activities continue. We discussed different models for sending students abroad. October 2013.

Vanessa Fong. Dr. Fong teaches at Amherst College. She has published on China’s One Child Policy, and the effects it has in psychological terms on both the parents and their children, and how it influences decisions they make about their child’s future. She was a speaker at our China Town Hall meeting held at the Suffolk Law School. October 2013.

Richard M. Rosenberg. Mr. Rosenberg is our benefactor, who paid a day-long visit to the Suffolk campus. While here, he was able to meet a number of the students who had studied in Asia on programs arranged by the Rosenberg Institute. He was in town to be inducted into the prestigious American Academy of Arts and Sciences. While on campus he met President McCarthy, Dean Greenberg, and other campus leaders. October 2013.

Farhani Monfared. Dr. Monfared is an Iranian scholar currently teaching in the History Department of Suffolk as part of the Scholar in Crises Program. He was threatened for his political views in Iran, and is now being welcomed by American universities under this program. We discussed the courses he is teaching about the Mongol Empire, our Asian Studies program, and his plans for courses in the spring 2014 semester. November 2013.

Martin Alintuck. Mr. Alintuck has worked as an international executive in China and Japan. He was in charge of the American Pavilion in Shanghai during the recent World Expo in 2010. He is teaching at the Sawyer Business School this semester. We had a lot of experiences to share about living and working in Asia. November 2013.
Zhou Xuanyun 周玄雲. Mr. Zhou is a Daoist Master (fashi 法士) who was ordained in China in the Correct Way (zhengyi zhengyi) Branch. He has been living in the States for the past four years. I raised many questions about contemporary Daoist practices based on the ceremonies I have seen while traveling in China. November 2013.

Ryan Shaffer. Mr. Shaffer is Associate Director of Programs at the Maureen and Mike Mansfield Foundation, in the Washington, D.C. office. We discussed some of the projects Mr. Shaffer is working on, including the US-Japan Nuclear Working Group, along with the programs to educate government officials from the United States about Japan, and the dialogues promoted between mid-career scholars from the US and Japan on current issues facing both nations. February 2014.

Stanley Chen. Actually Mr. Chen did not come to the Institute, but I went to visit him. He lives in a retirement community in Canton, MA and does not travel easily. He comes from a very prominent family in China that for a number of generations has been connected to the top leadership. He was interested in the work of the Rosenberg Institute and wanted to meet me. He supports five students at UMASS Boston with full scholarships. He said he’d like to speak with a friend to see if this friend would be interested in helping Suffolk students. He was honored by BCNC, one of our Institute outreach partners. February 2014.

Thay V Thao. Thay (pronounced Thai) took my Intro to Asian Studies course when he was a freshman, and now he graduated in May 2014. He has become active in the Alternative Spring Break programs run by Suffolk in which our students and some faculty visit poor communities in the US or in Venezuela to rebuild homes etc. He plans to enter the Peace Corps in a year, but plans to take the coming year by traveling to Asia to teach and learn about local customs. We met to talk about possibilities and how he might go about locating a suitable job in Asia. March 2014.

Peter Kornicki. Dr. Kornicki teaches at the University of Cambridge in England. He is a specialist on Japanese literature and book publishing, particularly in the pre-modern era. Dr. Suleski has published about manuscript culture in China (hand-written materials widely used by the common people), so we had much to talk about. Dr. Kornicki is visiting Harvard. March 2014.

Lu Keli 路克利. Dr. Lu is a professor at Renmin University (remin daxue 人民大学) in Beijing and teaches about Chinese political history. He translated my Fifty Year History of the Fairbank Center at Harvard into Chinese. He reported to me that this has become a best-seller in China, having sold over 20,000 copies so far. April 2014.

Asai Ryohei 浅井良平. Mr. Asai is an MBA graduate from Suffolk’s Business School. He returned to Tokyo and is now working in IT support in marketing for Sapporo Beer. He was an organizer of the Suffolk Asian Student’s Business Club in the past, and their annual business conference received support from the Rosenberg Institute. May 2014.
Community Outreach Partners

In order to spread word of Suffolk and its Asian Studies programs throughout the wider Boston and New England area, The Rosenberg Institute has identified several local non-profit community-based organizations that deal with Asia. These are designated as part of the Institute’s Community Outreach Partners. An overview of these programs follows.

In September 2013, for the fourth year in a row, through the Rosenberg Institute, Suffolk provided a welcoming meeting space to the Taiwan diplomatic office in Boston, the Taipei Economic and Cultural Office (TECO), for their annual gathering titled Taiwan Student Leaders in America 台灣留學生交流會. Outstanding students from Taiwan studying the in United States were brought to the Suffolk campus for a full day of exchanging ideas and experiences. The costs were completely covered by TECO.

The Rosenberg Institute continues to endorse the Chinese Historical Society of New England (CHSNE) as one of our community outreach partners. Suffolk faculty serve on the board of this organization. The Society’s annual dinner was held in September 2013 at the China Pearl Restaurant in Boston’s Chinatown. Suffolk faculty were invited to join the Rosenberg Institute table, where they met many leaders of the Boston Chinatown community, including several whose children attend Suffolk or have graduated from Suffolk.

Primary Source is a non-profit organization advocating for teaching about Asia in the junior high and high school curriculum. They have achieved a notable success in New England, which ranks as one of the best regions in the country in terms of offering courses and study units about Asia. The Rosenberg Institute endorses Primary Source as one of our Community Outreach Partners.

In December 2013 Suffolk University and the Rosenberg Institute hosted 12 students and faculty from Brookline High School. They were welcomed by Dan Wu from International Student Advising and Study Abroad, who is a graduate of BHS. Ronald Suleski of the Rosenberg Institute also welcomed the students to our campus. Suffolk Student Ambassadors then took everyone on a tour of the Suffolk campus. Eight of these students were from the Gaoxin School in Xian China, staying with host families in Brookline. Five of the students were from BHS. They were studying Chinese and in the spring 2014 semester they went to China with their Chinese student friends and lived with their host families in China.

In March 2014 the Boston Chinatown Community Center (BCNC) annual Chinese New Year banquet was held at the Empire Garden Restaurant in Chinatown. The Rosenberg Institute endorses their activities, which are widely recognized in the Boston area. A delegation from Suffolk including Dr. Suleski attended their annual banquet. They have provided internship opportunities for Suffolk students, and in the past have hired Suffolk students for their staff.

Middlesex Community College is an outstanding community college located in Lowell, MA. They are particularly active in bringing programs about Asia to their campus. On a number of occasions they have asked the Rosenberg Institute to help publicize their activities, and Dr. Suleski was pleased to assist. They have helped spread the word about the Suffolk and the Rosenberg Institute into the Lowell area. Suffolk regularly received transfer students from Middlesex Community College.
Contractual Matters

The Rosenberg Institute and its programs are all conducted according to the Terms of Agreement signed in July 2007 between Mr. Richard M. Rosenberg and Suffolk University. This Report is submitted in accordance with the original Terms of Agreement.

The Rosenberg Institute Scholar Series is conducted according to the Terms of Agreement as signed in July 2007 and as modified by the Memorandum by Dean Greenberg agreed to in Fall 2008, which provided for individual lectures to be offered on campus throughout the academic year.

During the 2013-2014 academic year being reported here Suffolk again withdrew money from the earnings of the endowment fund to cover the Institute’s operating budget. Suffolk University has been careful to honor the specific terms listed in the original agreement with Barbara and Richard M. Rosenberg, and in fact has gone beyond the original terms by hiring Dr. Suleski as a full-time (rather than as a part-time) administrator. Suffolk has also made available an office for the Institute, the support services of Suffolk, such as media and communications assistance, student work-study help, etc.

The Rosenberg Institute cooperates with the Asian Studies Program, which is a student-focused program of academic study and activities centering on Asia. This cooperation allows the activities of the Rosenberg Institute to reach the widest possible audience of students and faculty on campus. The activities of the Asian Studies Program were covered entirely by Suffolk University funds. In addition, the Rosenberg Institute cooperated in the 2013-2014 academic year with on-campus student-oriented programs such as the Study Abroad Office, the Career Services Office, the Diversity Office, and the Department of Communication and Journalism.

End July 2014