Suffolk Men Make Splendid Showing In Examination For the Bar

High Percentage of Alumni Passing Justices' Rapid Scholaric Requirements Maintained By Faculty

The examinations for the admission of attorneys to practice before the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts in Boston, held by the justices of the circuit court of appeals, are conducted in a manner that is in itself an examination of the candidates' legal knowledge and ability. The candidates are required to pass a series of written tests, which cover a wide range of legal topics, including constitutional law, property law, and evidence. The examination is designed to test the candidates' ability to apply legal principles to real-world situations.

The Suffolk College of Law has a long history of producing outstanding graduates who are well-prepared for the legal profession. The college has maintained a high percentage of its alumni passing the examination for admission to the bar, reflecting the quality of its education and the dedication of its faculty.

Dean Archer's Column

THE SDJOHN \\ STRIKE

Security has long been a concern for businesses and individuals alike. In recent years, the threat of theft and vandalism has become even more significant due to the rise in modern technology. Companies are now taking steps to ensure the safety of their employees and assets.

The Suffolk College of Law is committed to educating its students in all aspects of the legal profession. The school offers a comprehensive curriculum that covers a wide range of legal topics, including cybersecurity, intellectual property, and data privacy.

This week, the Suffolk Law Journal will be publishing an article on the importance of cybersecurity in the legal profession. The article will highlight the potential risks and benefits of modern technology, and discuss strategies for protecting against cyber threats.

TONIGHT!
The Suffolk Players Present TERRY BUSBEE'S PRIZE WINNER

"STORM SIGNAL" and "THE VALIANT"

By Robert B. Hall

SUFFOLK THEATRE 8:30 P.M.
Tickets on Sale at Box Office

TRUSTEES DEFEND DEAN ARCHER

The report by the Suffolk College of Law's student newspaper, The Suffolk Journal, has sparked a debate among the college's faculty and trustees. The newspaper has accused Dean Archer of mishandling the school's finances, and calls for his resignation.

Dean Archer has defended his administration, stating that the school is in financial sound footing. He has also argued that the recent controversy is a result of a misunderstanding of the school's financial situation.

The Suffolk College of Law is a private institution, and its decisions are made by the trustees, who are elected by the school's alumni. The trustees have expressed confidence in Dean Archer's leadership and have called for a thorough investigation into the allegations.

In an interview with the Suffolk Journal, Dean Archer stated, "I take full responsibility for the financial decisions made during my tenure. However, I believe the allegations are not founded on accurate information, and I hope to clear my name and the school's name in the coming days."
THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS

In the Year One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirty Six

By the Authority of the Governor and General Court assembled, and to the Senate of the same, in council,

The Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and to the Senate of the same, in council, SECTION 1. The name of the Suffolk Law School is changed to Suffolk University School of Law.

SECTION 2. Suffolk University shall include the departments now known as Suffolk Law School, Suffolk Graduate School of Law, Suffolk College of Arts and Sciences, and a new department to be known as Suffolk College of Business Administration.

The said university shall be governed by a board of trustees, to consist of fifteen members, to be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, and to hold office for a term of four years. Each member of the board shall be a resident of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and no member shall be elected for more than two consecutive terms. The Governor shall appoint a chairperson and a secretary, who shall serve without compensation. The board shall have the power to make such rules and regulations as it may deem necessary for the proper management of the university.

SECTION 3. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

In the House of Representatives, April 12, 1935.

SUFFOLK UNIVERSITY CORPORATION

Board of Trustees

"Edward L. Abbott, Worcester, President of the Board of Trustees of the University of Massachusetts, and the Board of Trustees of the University of Massachusetts, hereby do certify that the said act and all acts in connection with the same, have been duly and effectually done and performed and all acts, deeds and things done and performed have been and are hereby declared to be legal and valid and the same are hereby confirmed and approved for all purposes and effects to all intents and purposes as if such acts were done and performed in the manner and form provided by law and are hereby declared to be valid and effectual as fully and effectually as if the same had been done and performed in the manner and form provided by law.

In testimony whereof, the said Board of Trustees of the University of Massachusetts, have caused the same to be signed and sealed, in my presence, the day of January, 1935.

[Signature]

J. N. B.
EDITORIAL

Preparatory work was begun the other day preparatory to the dedication of the new building to the Law School. There was a ring of youth in Dean Archibald's voice as he recited the dedication prayers. "This is the day," he said, "the day we set apart to dedicate the new home of the Law School to the beneficent influences which it is our hope and prayer shall come to bear upon the destinies of the State."

There is something about the men who build that is always a source of interest to the end of the law. The architect comes first, of course. He is the one who plans and lays the stone. The craftsmen are next. They are the ones who put the finishing touches to the work. Then comes the student, who uses the building as a means of learning. He is the one who will be able to use the building to the fullest extent.

Behind Ralph Tombaugh, junior, one finds friend, behind him, the chief of police. The job is not an easy one. The architect, however, is the one who plans and lays the stone. The craftsmen are next. They are the ones who put the finishing touches to the work. Then comes the student, who uses the building as a means of learning. He is the one who will be able to use the building to the fullest extent.

In a word, the building is a monument to the wisdom of the architect, the skill of the craftsman, and the dedication of the student. It is a symbol of the strength and beauty of the law. It is a reminder of the importance of education. It is a tribute to the men who have dedicated their lives to the advancement of knowledge.

Verbum Sapienitis

The fact of the matter is, if I half at all the grading I have been doing for the past few weeks, I do not think that the grades I have been giving are all that they are supposed to be. I have been grading papers and assignments, and I must say that there are some that I would like to see improved.

I have had a few students come to me and ask for help with their papers. I have been trying my best to help them, but I would like to see them do better. They have been working hard, but I think they could do better. I have been trying to help them, but I think they could do better.

I have been trying to help them, but I think they could do better. I have been trying to help them, but I think they could do better. I have been trying to help them, but I think they could do better.

The Sit-Down Strike

(Continued from Page 1)

The sit-down strike is a refusal to work until the demands of the workers are met. It is a form of industrial action that has been used by workers in many different industries. The sit-down strike is a form of direct action that is used to achieve economic goals.

The sit-down strike is a refusal to work until the demands of the workers are met. It is a form of industrial action that has been used by workers in many different industries. The sit-down strike is a form of direct action that is used to achieve economic goals.

The sit-down strike is a refusal to work until the demands of the workers are met. It is a form of industrial action that has been used by workers in many different industries. The sit-down strike is a form of direct action that is used to achieve economic goals.
The Roving Reporter 'Listens In'

Among those present at the meeting were Richard Davis, Thomas H. Rice, and George F. O'Connell. In addition, there were several other students who were attending the meeting.

The meeting was held in the Alumni Director's Office on April 10th.

The Roving Reporter

Thirteen Thalians and a guest from the alumni association were present.

The guest was introduced by the chairman of the meeting, John J. Purdy.

Mr. Purdy welcomed the attendees and explained the purpose of the meeting.

The discussion then turned to the current state of the alumni association and the activities planned for the upcoming year.

The meeting adjourned at 5:00 p.m.

J. E. Purdy Co., Inc.

Photographers and Limners

Can you find out what your last photograph said about your story?

Call us for a lunch-time appointment

160 Tremont Street

Boston
Cruising the Corridors

FASHION VIGNETTES

It is amusing to observe the change of expression that comes over a student's face as he enters one of the main halls of the college. The air is filled with the chatter of students, the clanging of metal, and the sound of footsteps. The tension of the day seems to fade as students immerse themselves in the world of fashion.

LIBRARY NOTES

The library is a sanctuary of knowledge, a place where students can escape the chaos of daily life. With rows of books stretching far into the distance, the library is a symbol of the power of learning. It is a place where students can find solace and inspiration, and where ideas can come to life.

CONFESS

Confession is a place where students can share their thoughts and feelings in a safe and private environment. It is a place where students can find comfort and support, and where they can reflect on their lives and experiences. It is a place where students can find the courage to face their fears and to overcome their struggles.

WE LOVE ONCE

Love is the most powerful force that binds us together. It is a feeling that cannot be explained, but that is felt in the heart. Love is a feeling that can change us, and that can give us strength. It is a feeling that can make us do things that we never thought we could do.

A SONNET SEQUENCE

Through the halls of learning, we journey together. We embrace the challenges of life with open hearts and minds. We are students, we are learners, we are life's greatest teachers.

THE OUTLOOK JOURNAL

April 10, 1909
Confidentially Speaking...

One thing which has been a great point of interest in the past few days is the news that Mrs. S. H. Barnum has given birth to a baby girl. This is a wonderful event for the Barnum family and a great joy for the community at large. Mrs. Barnum and the baby are both doing well, and we wish them all the best of luck in the future.

The Jester's Scythe

Four hundred and forty thousand people were thrilled by the great British comedy team of the Jester's Scythe. Their act was a sensation, and the audience was in stitches from beginning to end. The Jester's Scythe is a team of skilled performers, and their act is always a hit. They are known for their wit and their timing, and they never fail to entertain.

Suffolk Bookstore

Is at Four Streets

The Suffolk Bookstore is located at Four Streets. We have a wide selection of books for all tastes and interests. Our knowledgeable staff is always happy to help you find the perfect book. Whether you're looking for a new novel, a classic, or a work of non-fiction, we have it all. Come by and see us today!
THE LAW
and
The Lawyer

By Wm. H. Franklin, Esq.

A gift of a remainder interest in property to another who will take the property for a period of years, is subject to the rules of the Massachusetts statute on gifts, which states that a gift of a remainder interest is not a gift but a promise, and the donee is not the owner of the property
immediately, but only after the lapse of the period of years
for which the remainder interest is held.

A gift of a remainder interest is a promise to give the property to the donee at some future time, and the promisor is the owner of the property during the period
of years for which the remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is indefinite, the gift is not a
gift, but a promise, and the promisor is the owner of the
property during the period of years for which the
remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is definite, the gift is a gift, and
the donee is the owner of the property immediately.

If the period of years is indefinite, the gift is not a
gift, but a promise, and the promisor is the owner of the
property during the period of years for which the
remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is definite, the gift is a gift, and
the donee is the owner of the property immediately.

If the period of years is indefinite, the gift is not a
gift, but a promise, and the promisor is the owner of the
property during the period of years for which the
remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is definite, the gift is a gift, and
the donee is the owner of the property immediately.

The Law
and
The Lawyer

By Wm. H. Franklin, Esq.

A gift of a remainder interest in property to another who will take the property for a period of years, is subject to the rules of the Massachusetts statute on gifts, which states that a gift of a remainder interest is not a gift but a promise, and the donee is not the owner of the property
immediately, but only after the lapse of the period of years
for which the remainder interest is held.

A gift of a remainder interest is a promise to give the property to the donee at some future time, and the
promisor is the owner of the property during the period
of years for which the remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is indefinite, the gift is not a
gift, but a promise, and the promisor is the owner of the
property during the period of years for which the
remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is definite, the gift is a gift, and
the donee is the owner of the property immediately.

If the period of years is indefinite, the gift is not a
gift, but a promise, and the promisor is the owner of the
property during the period of years for which the
remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is definite, the gift is a gift, and
the donee is the owner of the property immediately.

If the period of years is indefinite, the gift is not a
gift, but a promise, and the promisor is the owner of the
property during the period of years for which the
remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is definite, the gift is a gift, and
the donee is the owner of the property immediately.

The Law
and
The Lawyer

By Wm. H. Franklin, Esq.

A gift of a remainder interest in property to another who will take the property for a period of years, is subject to the rules of the Massachusetts statute on gifts, which states that a gift of a remainder interest is not a gift but a promise, and the donee is not the owner of the property
immediately, but only after the lapse of the period of years
for which the remainder interest is held.

A gift of a remainder interest is a promise to give the property to the donee at some future time, and the
promisor is the owner of the property during the period
of years for which the remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is indefinite, the gift is not a
gift, but a promise, and the promisor is the owner of the
property during the period of years for which the
remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is definite, the gift is a gift, and
the donee is the owner of the property immediately.

If the period of years is indefinite, the gift is not a
gift, but a promise, and the promisor is the owner of the
property during the period of years for which the
remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is definite, the gift is a gift, and
the donee is the owner of the property immediately.

If the period of years is indefinite, the gift is not a
gift, but a promise, and the promisor is the owner of the
property during the period of years for which the
remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is definite, the gift is a gift, and
the donee is the owner of the property immediately.

The Law
and
The Lawyer

By Wm. H. Franklin, Esq.

A gift of a remainder interest in property to another who will take the property for a period of years, is subject to the rules of the Massachusetts statute on gifts, which states that a gift of a remainder interest is not a gift but a promise, and the donee is not the owner of the property
immediately, but only after the lapse of the period of years
for which the remainder interest is held.

A gift of a remainder interest is a promise to give the property to the donee at some future time, and the
promisor is the owner of the property during the period
of years for which the remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is indefinite, the gift is not a
gift, but a promise, and the promisor is the owner of the
property during the period of years for which the
remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is definite, the gift is a gift, and
the donee is the owner of the property immediately.

If the period of years is indefinite, the gift is not a
gift, but a promise, and the promisor is the owner of the
property during the period of years for which the
remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is definite, the gift is a gift, and
the donee is the owner of the property immediately.

If the period of years is indefinite, the gift is not a
gift, but a promise, and the promisor is the owner of the
property during the period of years for which the
remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is definite, the gift is a gift, and
the donee is the owner of the property immediately.

The Law
and
The Lawyer

By Wm. H. Franklin, Esq.

A gift of a remainder interest in property to another who will take the property for a period of years, is subject to the rules of the Massachusetts statute on gifts, which states that a gift of a remainder interest is not a gift but a promise, and the donee is not the owner of the property
immediately, but only after the lapse of the period of years
for which the remainder interest is held.

A gift of a remainder interest is a promise to give the property to the donee at some future time, and the
promisor is the owner of the property during the period
of years for which the remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is indefinite, the gift is not a
gift, but a promise, and the promisor is the owner of the
property during the period of years for which the
remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is definite, the gift is a gift, and
the donee is the owner of the property immediately.

If the period of years is indefinite, the gift is not a
gift, but a promise, and the promisor is the owner of the
property during the period of years for which the
remainder interest is held.

If the period of years is definite, the gift is a gift, and
the donee is the owner of the property immediately.