Suffolk Expands Recycling Program

Suffolk is engaged in efforts to be more environmentally friendly, with more opportunities to recycle than ever before.

A Recycling Task Force was established after 900 Suffolk community members signed a petition in support of expanded recycling.

Gordon King, senior director of Facilities Planning and Management, has made recycling one of his priorities since joining the University this past spring. He brought on board Erica Mattison as the University's first recycling coordinator. Mattison, a public administration graduate student, had headed up the petition initiative in the spring.

The expanded program started in late August, and in September, Suffolk-owned buildings sent 12.9 tons of material to be recycled, three times the 4.21 tons of mixed office paper recycled during the same time period in the previous year.

In fiscal year 2006, Suffolk spent $239 per ton for trash hauling services and $142 per ton for recycling hauling services.

"There are many environmental and economic benefits to recycling, and it is important for the University to develop creative ways to reduce waste, offer recycling opportunities and engage in environmentally sustainable practices," said Mattison.

All members of the Suffolk community are encouraged to utilize the bottle and can receptacles available in common areas, such as lounges and dining facilities. As the recycling program moves ahead, receptacles are being added across campus.

For more information about the Suffolk Recycling Program, call 617-973-1145, visit <http://www.suffolk.edu/offices/4919.html>, or e-mail recycle@suffolk.edu. Recycling reports will be available on the Recycling Web page each month. ▶

Rewarding Start to $75M Campaign

The University entered the public phase of its $75 million capital campaign in October, with the announcement of multi-million-dollar donations; a kickoff luncheon for faculty, staff and administrators; a gala event; and a forum that gave perspective to the importance of support for higher education.

"Suffolk has been called the school with a heart in the heart of the city," President David J. Sargent told members of the University gathered at the Parker House for the first of two information lunch sessions.

Suffolk's reputation for caring stems in part from the long tenure of former Bursar Dorothy McNamara, who, when confronted with a student who couldn't afford tuition, would say: "Don't worry Hon; pay when you can," said President Sargent.

While the Dotty Mac approach wasn't sound fiscal policy, it built tremendous loyalty among students and alumni—and the vast majority did eventually pay, according to President Sargent.

A Message to Readers

As we approach the holiday season, we are reminded of traditions, family and old friends. In many ways the Suffolk University community always has been and continues to be a place where friendships are formed and in some cases last a lifetime!

In this issue readers will be reminded of the numbers of dedicated administrators, staff and faculty who have given many years of service, as highlighted by the Deans' Reception. It is amazing to see how some people have given 20, 30 and 40 years to this great institution and continue to do so with pride and professionalism. As we often ask: How does this happen and why? The most consistent response is: Because people believe in our mission. Through all of our changes and growth—new technologies, new buildings, distant campuses—the one constant has been our mission.

You also will read about how we are making history this year in launching our most ambitious capital campaign "The Power to Change" and announcing our first-ever endowed chairs.

This fall, enthusiasm and pride for Suffolk's success was felt throughout the University. It has taken many people from every corner of this campus to accomplish our many recent achievements, from the recently renovated C. Walsh Theatre and new Mildred Sawyer Library to the launch of new Web site, to mention a few.

We can't help but share in this pride as we look at where Suffolk began and where we are today. Hundreds of people over the years have dedicated themselves to serving and educating our students. Everyone in our community sets an example for our students of commitment, hard work and this undeniable belief in our mission. And it is this message that we hear over and over from our alumni.

As we begin to make plans for the holiday season, please mark your calendars for this December 31 as we celebrate First Night with an outdoor ice sculpture in front of the Law School. We invite the entire Suffolk community and their families to join in this tradition as we welcome in another new year.

Happy holidays.

Mike Pearce Named CIO

Mike Pearce, CIO

Mike Pearce, recently named to the new position of chief information officer, has traveled quite a distance—across the entire country—to get where he is today.

"I know the weather is going to be a big change from what I'm used to, but I'm excited about this opportunity," said Pearce, who comes to Boston from Huntington Beach, California. "I really believe in everything that Suffolk stands for, especially its commitment to education and helping others to improve their lives."

Among Pearce's responsibilities will be the development of a technology plan aligned with the University's strategic plan.

"To build our strategy, it is important to understand our customers and their needs," he said. "Our first step will be just that, gathering input from our various customers; faculty, staff and students. We will then look how best we can align our services, practices and organization to support those needs within the University."

Until recently, Pearce served as the deputy chief information officer at the University of Southern California and headed the technical component of the Information Services Division.

He previously had held managerial positions in accounting, finance and information systems. He has led a number of global projects, system implementations, and reengineering initiatives for various companies and spearheaded the worldwide shared services initiatives that resulted in a Shared Service Data Center in Geneva, Switzerland, and Fullerton, California.

Pearce received his master's degree in finance from West Coast University in Los Angeles and his bachelor's degree in accounting from Cal State Long Beach. He serves on customer, industry and technology advisory boards throughout the nation. ▀

Rewarding Start to $75M Campaign

Supporting students in need continues to be an important aspect of Suffolk University's mission. "The Power to Change: The Campaign for Suffolk University" will help make that support a reality.

"I am happy to tell you that today we have passed the half-way mark due to the tremendous efforts of Kathryn Battillo and her staff," said President Sargent before outlining the campaign goals, as follows:

- Student life and learning—$26 million. "We must make sure the traditional Suffolk student is not priced out of the University."
- Evolving campus—$24 million. Sargent noted the addition of residence halls, 73 Tremont library and the new Law School. "In the future we see the need for more and better residence halls, athletic facilities and libraries."
- Academic Excellence—$16 million. "We must make sure the present faculty, which is enormously talented, continues to prosper and grow, and we will do everything we can to promote teaching excellence and innovation."
- Increased annual fund—$9 million. To be prepared for unanticipated expenses.

Battillo, vice president for Advancement, reported on the growth of major gift fundraising at the University during the past four years, with an increase in both numbers of donors and levels of gifts. She said there have been multimillion-dollar, "transforming gifts" in three categories addressed in the campaign.

Battillo emphasized the importance of every donation of any amount, saying: "The Annual Fund is the lifeblood of the University, and all donations are valued at any level."

Later in the week, "Reviving the American Dream: The Crisis of Access in Higher Education" brought together a panel of writers, scholars and government leaders in the second of a series of Suffolk Centennial Forums addressing societal issues.

The week was capped off with a black-tie gala at the Boston Public Library. President Sargent told an audience of more than 300 people that the University has raised more than $40 million and is well on its way to completing the $75 million campaign in 2009.

"It's an ambitious goal," said President Sargent. "A successful campaign of $75 million will nearly double our endowment, but the true benefit to Suffolk will be immeasurable. These vital funds will ensure that we stand solidly behind the core values that have always set Suffolk apart."

Major campaign commitments were detailed at the gala:

- The creation at the Law School of the Jerome Lyle Rappaport Center for Law and Public Policy through a $5 million gift that will establish the first endowed chair in the history of the University.

Theresa A. Fenton, her husband, The Honorable John E. Fenton, Jr., and Vice President of Advancement, Kathryn M. Battillo celebrate the black-tie campaign event with style and grace. (Photo by John Gillooly)

- The creation of the Carol Sawyer Parks Chair in Entrepreneurship at Sawyer Business School, a $1.5 million gift that will create the second endowed chair at the University.
- A $2 million commitment by Nathan R. Miller to establish a Centennial Scholarship fund for Boston public school students called the Nathan R. Miller Boston Scholars program.
- The public unveiling of the Rosalie K. Stahl Center, 73 Tremont Street, a new property in the heart of the Suffolk campus. ▮

$10K Grant to Train Student Poll Workers

The University was awarded a $10,000 grant from the Center for Election Integrity to partner with the city of Boston to recruit and train students as poll workers for Election Day, November 7.

"Through participation in this project, students learn how democracy actually works, while engaging on the importance of civic and volunteer participation in their communities," said Rachael V. Cobb, assistant professor of Government.

Many poll workers have been unable to continue their service in recent years, and nationally the average age of a poll worker is 72. The introduction of new voting machines and procedures has increased the need for tech-savvy workers.

"There is always a big need for college students serving as poll workers," said Cobb. "If we get 100 students to work the polls on Election Day, and 10 of them decide to do it again over the years, that's a huge success."

"Partnering with Suffolk University on this project presents a win-win opportunity, as the city will be able to tap into Suffolk's diverse student population, while concomitantly promoting civic engagement, education and interest among the students," said Helen Wong, Language Coordinator, Boston Election Department, who organized the training sessions on the Suffolk campus.

The Center for Election Integrity is based at Cleveland State University in Cleveland, Ohio. Suffolk will also pilot the Center's guidebook outlining how to effectively mobilize student poll workers. ▮

C. Walsh Theatre Renovation Takes Center Stage

Phase one of the C. Walsh Theatre renovations are complete, and, based on early reviews, the project deserves a standing ovation.

"We have received an overwhelming positive response from everyone within the Suffolk community and beyond," said Theatre Department General Manager Jim Kaufman. "Students, faculty and staff have been excited and impressed with everything the University has accomplished. I even had a mother and daughter from Germany stop in to the theater recently on their visit to Suffolk, and they kept commenting on how beautiful it is."

Renovations include new first-floor seating, house lighting and carpeting; improved infrastructure for sound, light and media use; an expanded lobby with a level floor; and a new, accessible bathroom, control room and storage area.

"The renovation not only provides a stunning showcase for a wide range of University activities and performances, but has created the technical infrastructure to allow us to meet the demands of the University's ambitious educational mission," said Theatre Department Chair Marilyn Plotkins. ▶
