Larry Moulter, JD ’80: Making Magic Happen in Boston

Suffolk University Magazine
Winter 1995
From the President

Welcome to the first issue of the new Suffolk University Magazine — your gateway to the people, programs, events and ideas of our lively intellectual community. Suffolk University is headed in exciting new directions. Our students now come not only from Massachusetts, but from many other states and more than 70 countries. We have created alliances with a growing number of educational institutions, businesses and non-profit organizations in Boston, the U.S., Europe and Asia. And in courtrooms, corporate boardrooms, laboratories, classrooms and government offices our alumni are changing the world.

The cover story for this issue profiles alumnus Larry Moulter, President of the New Boston Garden Corporation and a 1980 graduate of the Law School. With his dream of a new sports and entertainment complex for Boston and his extraordinary abilities to gather people together around a common goal, Larry Moulter is an important player in the city’s economic resurgence. The photos may well be the first you have seen of the interior of the new arena, scheduled to open this September.

You may have passed another construction site in Boston, on the corner of Tremont and Bromfield Streets, and wondered about the intriguing wall of photos and text surrounding the block. This is the future home of Suffolk University Law School. The text and images on the wall — entitled “The Path of the Law” — trace the legal and political history of Boston. The article beginning on page 9 brings you up to date on the building’s design and construction schedule, along with some interesting background on “The Wall.”

In this and future issues, you will meet the people of Suffolk University — the faculty, students, staff, trustees, volunteers, and alumni who collectively create the “soul” of our institution. Please write to us. We would like to add your stories and thoughts to Suffolk’s unfolding history.

David J. Sargent
President
Features

7 Renewing the Commitment
9 The Path to a New Law School
14 Dare to Dream
17 Larry Moulter: Making Magic Happen in Boston
23 New Developments...

Suffolk University Magazine
David J. Sargent
President
James A. Campbell
Vice President for Development

Editor
Roanne Weisman

Contributors
Lou Connelly
Jack Fitzgerald
Dawn Gyuikeri Burnus
Lori A. McCormick
Midge Wilcke

Design and Production
Anne Callahan
Deborah Levinson
Sam Lopez
Cindy Lucio
John Morawiec

Photography
Greig Cranna
John Gillooly
Rich Paalley
Len Rubenstein

Suffolk magazine is published twice a year by the University's Office of Development. It is produced by the Office of Creative Services/University Media Services and distributed free of charge to alumni, students, friends, parents, faculty and staff. The views expressed in this magazine do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the editor or the official policies of the University.

Please address correspondence to: Suffolk University Office of Development, 8 Ashburton Place, Boston, MA 02108-2770.
In announcing Fenton’s appointment, President Sargent said the University had chosen a man “ideally suited to lead the Law School into the next century.”

Suffolk University Inaugurates First Doctoral Program — New Graduate Offerings in CLAS

There will be many celebrations in the year 2000 — including a special one at Suffolk University. In its Commencement ceremony at the start of the new millennium, the University will bestow a Doctor of Philosophy degree for the first time. Next fall, the future PhD candidates begin a new, five-year doctoral program in Clinical Psychology within the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences (CLAS).

To establish this degree as our initial step into the PhD arena is a positive and natural move for the University,” said CLAS Dean Michael R. Ronayne. The program, based on the “Boulder Model” of clinical psychology, emphasizes the acquisition of strong clinical skills, as well as rigorous training in research and scientific methods.

Degree requirements include the completion of 36 academic credits, practicum experiences, teaching assistantships in undergraduate psychology courses during the first three years, comprehensive examination, internships, and doctoral dissertation — all in addition to the completion of a master’s thesis. (Although there is no master’s degree program, the MA or MS degree is granted once the student has completed 48 credits of course work and an approved master’s thesis.)

In addition to the doctoral program, the College has expanded its graduate course offerings to include a Master of Science in International Economics (MSIE) and a Master of Science in Political Science (MSPS). In their first year, both of the new degree programs are already generating tremendous interest. The MSIE applies economic theory and quantitative methods to the study of international economic issues. The MSPS degree is the only master’s program in the Northeast with a concentration in political sciences.

A New Leader for the Law School

When John E. Fenton, Jr. became Dean of the Suffolk University Law School last July, he continued a family association with the University that dates back to 1924. In that year, his father, John E. Fenton, Sr., graduated from the University Law School’s Evening Division, beginning a distinguished legal and academic career that included the presidency of Suffolk University from 1965-70.

Dean Fenton joined the Suffolk University Law School faculty in 1957, beginning his own distinguished judicial career in 1974. He has served as Chief Justice of the Massachusetts Land Court and then Chief Administrative Justice of the state’s Trial Court. During the period of his judgeships, he continued to teach in the Law School’s Evening Division. In his new position at the Law School, Dean Fenton succeeds Paul R. Sugarman, who has returned to private law practice.

The appointment of Dean Fenton has been universally praised both within Suffolk University and in the legal community. The University has chosen a man “ideally suited to lead the Law School into the next century,” said Suffolk University President David J. Sargent. “Suffolk University is fortunate to have a man of John Fenton’s caliber to lead the Law School,” said James P. Linnehan, Chairman of the University’s Board of Trustees. “His credentials and reputation speak for themselves.”

Shortly after his appointment, Dean Fenton named Professor William T. Corbett as associate dean for academic affairs, and John C. Deliso as associate dean for administrative affairs. Both appointees have long-time associations with the Law School. Corbett has been a faculty member since 1978, and Deliso has served in a number of administrative positions since 1972, including director of admissions, dean of admissions and assistant dean. “These promotions reflect the continuing commitment of the Law School to serve its student body at the highest levels in both the academic and administrative areas,” said Dean Fenton.

In other key appointments at the Law School, James P. Whitters, III was named director of career services and Mary Karen Rogers was named associate director of career services. Whitters was most recently counsel to the Boston law firm of Peabody & Brown. Previously, he had been a partner at Gaston & Snow for the past 22 years. Rogers has been a respected member of the Law School administration for many years, and had served as acting director during the search period.

As the Law School enters a new era of growth, looking toward the construction of its new building, financial support from alumni and friends becomes increasingly important. Kristen Zagarella has been appointed as the new associate director of development for the Law School. She has already begun to reach out to alumni and will be working to increase support for the School’s Annual Fund.

Suffolk Ranked Among Top Ten Commuter Colleges

According to Money magazine, Suffolk University deserves to be in very select company among the nation’s commuter colleges. This fall, the magazine’s 1995 Money Guide edition, entitled “Your Best College Buys Now,” selected Suffolk University as one of the top ten private commuter colleges in the country.
"If you work hard and take your education seriously, especially at a great school like Suffolk University, you will graduate with all the knowledge and skills you need..." Mayor Thomas M. Menino

"We're very gratified to receive this national recognition," said President Sargent. "It has long been the University's mission to provide a quality education at reasonable tuition rates. This selection recognizes Suffolk University as among the best in America in carrying out that mission."

Earlier this year, the University was one of only 300 colleges in America to be spotlighted in the national publication, Barron's Best Buys in College Education.

Transportation Secretary Addresses Big Dig Project

Suffolk University alumni and members of the business community recently had a breakfast meeting with Massachusetts Transportation Secretary James Kerasiotes. The subject was Boston's Central Artery "Big Dig" construction project, including the building of a third harbor tunnel.

In response to ongoing reports of cost overruns on the project, Kerasiotes said that the massive project had by necessity undergone changes in scope and direction since its original inception. Some of these changes reflected objections and concerns raised by environmental groups and neighborhood organizations. Noting that any increases in the total cost projections would be tied to inflation and not to mismanagement, the Secretary termed the project "a mammoth and long-overdue undertaking for the Commonwealth, and one that, when complete, will produce far-reaching benefits for all of its citizens." Following the Secretary's address, many members of the audience toured the construction site of the third harbor tunnel.

Menino Keynotes "Careerfest"

In November, Boston Mayor Thomas M. Menino came to Suffolk University to deliver the keynote address as the Office of Career Services and Cooperative Education kicked off "Careerfest '94." The annual week-long series of activities provides students and alumni with career planning advice and strategies.

The program offered a wide range of presentations and group discussions on various career issues, including corporate restructuring and the emergence of the small entrepreneurial company, the "art" of networking, careers in state and local government, AHANA training and recruitment programs, internships, and graduate school.

Addressing a group of Suffolk University students, Mayor Menino described his own career milestones, including his decision, long after graduating from high school, to earn a college degree. Advised the mayor: "If you work hard and take your education seriously, especially at a great school like Suffolk University, you will graduate with all the knowledge and skills you need to handle anything life throws at you."

Suffolk alumnus Bruce Hartman, BSBA '75, CFO of Filenes, passed along practical career advice as part of the Graduate SOM Executive Speakers Series. The Career Expo also linked students and other attendees with more than 15 working professionals, most of them Suffolk alumni, to discuss career experiences in business, government, and the non-profit sector.

Suffolk, Herald Host Gubernatorial Debate

One week before the September primary elections, Suffolk University and the Boston Herald hosted a debate at the Parker House among the three Democratic candidates for governor: State Representative Mark Roosevelt, State Senator Michael Barrett, and attorney George Bachrach. Roosevelt, of course, went on to capture his party's nomination, only to be defeated by incumbent William Weld in November.

In recent years, the University has collaborated with the Herald in a number of events, including a forum on judicial reform and a 1991 debate among Boston's mayoral candidates. In his welcoming remarks at the Parker House event, President Sargent noted that the University's participation in the debate was reflective of Suffolk's ongoing commitment to an active involvement in the discussion of the issues of the day. President Sargent also pointed out that Herald publisher Patrick J. Purcell received an honorary degree from the University before becoming the newspaper's new owner. "Need I say more," said the president, "about the value of a Suffolk degree?"
"Please don't call us heroes. We were just doing our job."
Sergeant Mike Ryan and Captain John Pagliarulo

Suffolk University Guides
Students Toward College
Suffolk University and the city of Boston recently teamed up to provide Boston high school students and their parents with a helping hand in preparing for college. At a special ceremony on November 3 at West Roxbury High School, Mayor Thomas Menino and Boston School Superintendent Lois Harrison-Jones accepted Suffolk's donation of brochures and videotapes that offer advice and insight on selecting a college or university, financing a college education, and "surviving" freshman year.

The brochures, entitled "Insider's Guides," were written by Marguerite J. Dennis, Suffolk University Dean of Enrollment and Retention Management and a nationally known authority on college selection and financing.

Representing the University at the ceremony, which was broadcast live to classrooms in the high school by students at the school's media center, were President David J. Sargent and Dean Dennis.

The "Insider's Guides" are being distributed to every junior and senior in the city's public schools, as well as every parochial high school in the Boston Archdiocese. Each high school will also be provided with a videotaped version of the material, to be available in guidance offices. In addressing the students, President Sargent said Mayor Menino had made it clear his administration places the highest priority on the educational needs of Boston students. "The mayor has actively sought to help the city's students attend college," he said. "Suffolk University is pleased to assist those students and their families in achieving their educational goals."

Suffolk Police Give
the Greatest Gift
It is not unusual to read about the accomplishments of Suffolk University faculty and alumni in the media. This past holiday season, however, Boston newspapers focused on a Suffolk department that usually operates out of the limelight: the University Police Department.

On November 30, two Suffolk University police officers helped to save the life of Ed O'Donnell, who suffered a heart attack and collapsed on the sidewalk near Ashburton Place. O'Donnell, 70, an employee of the Boston Fire Department, was walking with Boston District Fire Chief Joseph Fleming. After O'Donnell collapsed, Fleming and a passer-by carried him into the lobby of the Sawyer building. Fleming began cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) as onlookers summoned police and an ambulance.

Seconds later, Captain John Pagliarulo and Sergeant Michael Ryan of the Suffolk University Police Department arrived. Pagliarulo, a CPR instructor, began mouth-to-mouth resuscitation while Ryan took over chest compression from Fire Chief Fleming. At one point, O'Donnell had no pulse, but Pagliarulo and Ryan revived him and kept him stable until emergency medical personnel arrived.

The entire episode, which was captured on videotape by the Sawyer building's security camera, received heavy coverage in the local media. But for the two officers, saving a life was all that mattered. "Please don't call us heroes," was their only comment. "We were just doing our job." For Pagliarulo, 35, the experience had personal meaning. His father had died in March. As he worked to revive O'Donnell, Pagliarulo said, "All I could see was my father."

In a letter to the Suffolk University community, President Sargent wrote, "I am very proud of Captain John Pagliarulo, Sergeant Mike Ryan and the Suffolk University Police for their act of heroism in saving the life of Edward O'Donnell...their intelligence, confidence, compassion and caring in dealing with this crisis was truly commendable and admirable. I thank them on behalf of the Suffolk University community for being such wonderful representatives of the school. I also extend my sincere best wishes to Mr. O'Donnell for a speedy and complete recovery." Ed O'Donnell recovered quickly enough to be home for Christmas. Captain Pagliarulo and Sergeant Ryan are — of course — back on the job.

Marilyn Jurich, English, published two poems: "Final Exam" and "When Tupacs Turn Up Poems," in Western Michigan Review.

Carl Merrill, Biology, authored "Reliability of Chemo-receptor Cell Response: Intensity Coding By Pattern and Response Magnitude with a Comparison of Analytical Methods," which was published in Journal of Comparative Physiology, Vol. 175.

Alexandra D. Todd, Sociology, recently published Double Vision: An East-West Collaboration for Coping with Cancer (Wesleyan/University Press). The book chronicles her son's struggle with and eventual triumph over brain cancer. It is both a memoir of his battle and a report on the nature of cancer care and alternative methods of healing. The book was favorably reviewed in the Reading Previews section of the October 1994 issue of Elle magazine as well as in the Boston Globe and the Chronicle of Higher Education.

Da Zheng, English/ESL, published his work "Chinese Calligraphy and the Cultural Revolution," in The Journal of Popular Culture this past fall.

James P. Angelini, Accounting, co-authored with M. Hutton and R. Copeland on "Potential Adverse Effects of Specialization Within Accounting Firms," which was accepted by Accounting Horizons for its Fall 1994 issue.

Sanjiv Jaggia, Economics, was co-author of "Joint and Separate Score Tests for State Dependence and Unobserved Heterogeneity" which was published in Journal of Economics, Volume 60 (1994).

Robert G. Ruland, Accounting, co-authored with Steven E. Kaplan of Arizona State University, a piece entitled "The Concept of Trust and Institutional Development in Auditing." The work received the Abraham J. Briloff Outstanding Manuscript award at Ernst and Young's Accounting Ethics Symposium in June, 1994. The article will be published in the first issue of the academic journal Research on Accounting Ethics.

Marie Asher was a contributing writer to the book The Public Nature of Private Violence, (Routledge, 1994) by M. Frankel and R. Mykitiuk. The article co-written with Naomi R. Cahit is entitled "Child Abuse: A Problem For Feminist Theory."

Rosanna Cavallaro and Marc G. Perlin have collaborated on Report on the 1993 Superior Court Bench-Bar Conference on Criminal Issues, which was published in April, 1994.

Victoria Dodd published an article entitled "Introduction to Law and Education Symposium" in Volume 39 of the University of South Dakota Law Review.

Joseph W. Glannon had his article "Liability for Public Duties Under the Tort Claims Act: The Legislative Reconsiders the Public Duty Role" published in Volume 79 of Massachusetts Law Review.

Dwight Golann recently revised Massachusetts Courtroom Evidence and Chapter 93 Rights and Remedies (of which he was a co-author). He also published in ABA Dispute Resolution Magazine this past summer.

Charles P. Kindregan, Jr. has produced a series of computer disks distributed by West Publishing Company entitled Massachusetts Family Law Fast Forms. He has also released the 1994 supplements for Family Law, MPS (4 volumes).

Linda Sandstrom Simard co-authored with Judge William G. Young an article entitled "Daubert's Gatekeeper: The Role of the District Judge in Admitting Expert Testimony." The article was published in Volume 88 of the Tulane Law Review.

If you would like to place recent information about a published article or book, please contact the Communications Department at 617-573-8447 or 617-573-8448.
The Rams' victories included a first ever triumph over UMass-Boston, 1-0.

Soccer Tops Suffolk
Sport Scene
Spurred on by the summer spectacle of the World Cup, Suffolk University's soccer team generated headlines of its own in the fall, compiling a 10-4 record under second-year coach Dennis Franzak.

The Rams posted their first winning season in recent years, led by high scorers Miguel Fernandes, an outstanding freshman from Puerto Rico, Pedro Sousa of Portugal and Martins Gustav of Brazil. They also had some outstanding defensive performances from goalkeepers Eric Justus of Brazil and John Stewart of Puerto Rico.

Franzak, a former assistant coach for the Boston Bolts soccer team, recruited some 18 players for the past season's success. The Buffalo native used 23 players throughout the season and praised the attitude, conviction and dedication of his team, which played most of its games on the road.

"They made a lot of sacrifices, playing on the road, even getting up for 6:30 a.m. practices," noted Franzak, who loses only three players from the 1994 squad, including Captain Phil Falzone of Malden.

Suffolk's athletic department has two new faces on its staff. They are women's basketball coach Ed Leyden and women's softball and volleyball coach Christine Carr.

Leyden, who most recently was head women's basketball coach at Tufts University, has a distinguished background in coaching. Before Tufts, he coached at Reading Memorial High School and Revere High School and was named Coach of the Year by the Massachusetts Basketball Coaches Association in 1987 and 1988. A full-time math teacher at Revere High, he is also president of the Eastern New England Umpires Association.

Carr, a graduate of Harvard University, is a former all-scholastic softball and volleyball player at Stoneham High School. As a pitcher for Stoneham, she led that team to three Middlesex League championships. She played both softball and volleyball at Harvard and was All-Ivy League in softball.

She has been serving as a financial intern at Bull HN Worldwide Information Systems in Billerica and an assistant volleyball coach at North Reading High School and assistant softball coach at Phillips Academy in Andover.

In addition to her coaching, Carr will be responsible for administering women's athletic programs at the University.

Leyden succeeds Joe Walsh as women's hoop mentor. Walsh will continue to coach baseball and cross country. Carr succeeds Donna Ruseckas, who accepted a position to direct women's athletics at Massachusetts College of Pharmacy.

Women Athletes Make History
The name Brown made news at Suffolk this year. Maureen "Moe" Brown of Roslindale, became the all-time leading scorer in women's basketball at Suffolk as she totaled 1435 points in a brilliant four-year career. Brown, who was recently named assistant coach to Ed Leyden, averaged 21 points and 6.1 assists per game.

The other Brown, no relation, is Patricia "Pat" Brown, our retired associate law librarian. A former player in the one-time All-American Girls Professional Baseball League, Pat has donated a number of historic mementos to the University's athletic department.

Brown, who played for the Kenosha, Wisconsin Comets, the Chicago Colleens and the Battlecreek, Michigan Belles in the early fifties, was inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y. in 1988.

She presented Athletic Director Jim Nelson with an autographed Hall of Fame baseball, a Pat Brown baseball card and a team photo of the Chicago Colleens. They will be on display with other materials in the University's athletic center in the Ridgeway Building.

"I have a deep, abiding interest and love for Suffolk University," she said. "It's where my roots are and I think it's appropriate for me to donate these items to the school."
Anthony F. Farma has two degrees from the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences; Dennis M. Duggan graduated from the Law School; and Francis M. Vazza received his BSBA from the School of Management. But the three alumni have much more in common than the Suffolk University diplomas hanging on their walls.

Farma, Duggan, and Vazza all serve as Alumni-Trustees of Suffolk University. They represent a growing number of University alumni who have maintained a close relationship with their alma mater after graduation. They share a profound appreciation for the education they received and a strong commitment to contribute their time and energy in service to the University.

"I graduated from the evening Law School, and as a result of that experience, I feel a tremendous amount of loyalty to Suffolk University," said Duggan, JD '78, a litigation partner in the Boston law firm of Peabody & Brown. "I feel that without my law school education, and without a school which afforded me the opportunity to study at night, I wouldn't be doing what I'm doing today."

The first Alumni-Trustee was James F. Linnehan, JD '56, current Chairman of the Board, who was elected in 1976. Since then, 19 alumni have been elected by their fellow graduates to become members of the Board, six of whom were eventually elected to regular terms. Each of the University's three schools is represented by an Alumni-Trustee, elected by alumni of the school to serve a three-year term. These trustees represent their own schools as well as the Suffolk University community.
They share a profound appreciation for the education they received and a strong commitment to contribute their time and energy in service to the University.

Duggan sees his role as a liaison between the Board of Trustees and the alumni. "The Alumni-Trustee program is primarily a way to get people involved at the highest levels of the University and to keep them involved, hearing their ideas and being educated by each other's viewpoints," said Duggan, who has also been president of the Law School Alumni Association, as well as a member of the University Alumni Council. In 1992, he received the Law School Alumni Association's Outstanding Service Award for dedicated service to the Law School.

Farma, BS '77, MEd '82, was elected to the Board by his fellow alumni of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. He also coaches the University's golf team, a job which began as a one-season appointment and has extended to 12 years. He is the president and chief executive officer of Capital Financial Planning, Inc., a third-party administration firm, as well as a personal investment consulting firm.

Farma takes great pride in representing his fellow alumni and sees the Alumni-Trustee program as an opportunity to contribute to the decision-making process at the University. "I once said publicly I could never do enough for Suffolk University because of what Suffolk University has done for me," said Farma. "I've always felt that way."

Vazza, BSBA '63, is a general partner of Vazza Associates of Braintree. The real estate development and management firm has produced approximately three million square feet of first-class office and mixed-use developments in the greater Boston area.

"I was happy to go to Suffolk," said Vazza, "I'm proud to be a graduate of Suffolk, and I felt it was my time to give whatever I could back to my school." Although Vazza is one of the newest alumni members of the Board, he is already impressed by the sense of teamwork he has observed. "Everyone works together, and that's the way it should be."

Farma, Duggan, and Vazza all expressed the hope that other alumni will come forward to give something back to their University. When asked for a message to his fellow alumni, Farma said, "The University is going to call on you during the next four, six or ten years. I would hope that you would be ready to answer the call. If you're going to hang that diploma on your wall, you had better be proud of it. There's only one way to be proud of it, and that is to be active."
For those passing by the site of two former Tremont Street buildings, a visual and intellectual feast awaits. Adorning a large wall surrounding the block is a picturesque panorama of the history of the law and the city of Boston. In words and images, fourteen large murals enlighten visitors with colorful descriptions of Boston's legal landmarks and such towering legal figures as Oliver Wendell Holmes. The murals are based on “The Path of the Law,” a publication produced by Edward Bander, Professor of Law Emeritus at Suffolk University.

Perhaps even more interesting is what is happening on the other side of that informative wall. At the midpoint of the decade, Suffolk University has begun what may be the most ambitious project in its history — the construction of a new building for the Law School.

At the beginning of the 1990s, it became clear to President Sargent, the University Trustees, and Law School administrators that the Law School facilities in the Donahue Building on Temple Street would not be adequate for coming generations of students. There are severe space shortages in almost every aspect of the Law School’s operation, including classrooms, faculty offices, library, and conference rooms. In some instances, the School has been forced to use borrowed space in other buildings.
On December 31, 1993, the purchase of the site was completed, an event that was termed "great news for Tremont Street and great news for the revitalization of downtown."

The University began a comprehensive search for a new home for the Law School, and, in the fall of 1992, entered into negotiations to purchase property on Tremont Street owned by Canadian developer Olympia and York. The site, at the corner of Tremont and Bromfield, on the historic Freedom Trail, was occupied by two dilapidated buildings, vacant for a number of years after the economic bust of the late 1980s. The buildings were in such disrepair that renovation was not possible. They would have to be demolished to make way for a new facility.

In July, 1993, then Mayor Raymond L. Flynn joined University and city officials at the site to announce that Suffolk University had agreed in principle to purchase the property. On December 31 of that year, the purchase was completed, an event that was termed "great news for Tremont Street and great news for the revitalization of downtown" by then Boston Redevelopment Authority Director Paul Barrett. Demolition of the buildings began in March, 1994. By July, as final cleanup of the site was being carried out, Suffolk University built the mural-covered wall.
In June 1994, an eight to twelve foot wall was built around the site, topped by 19th century style street lamps.

In July 1994, a series of panels titled, “The Path of the Law” was designed and arranged along the wall.
The name given to the series of historical panels, "The Path of the Law" was the title of a famous speech delivered by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes in Boston on January 8, 1897. Justice Holmes was one of several prominent Boston figures who helped to shape the legal and political history not only of this city, but also of the nation. In creating this historical chronology, Suffolk University Professor of Law Emeritus Edward Bander drew from histories and biographies of the most prominent justices, lawyers, government officials, and other historic figures in our nation's history. He included descriptions of the historic buildings in which they lived and worked, and vivid stories of their most memorable achievements.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr. was named after his father, a doctor, poet and essayist. It was the senior Holmes who described Boston as "the hub of the universe." Justice Holmes spent his early childhood at his family home here at this corner, known then as Montgomery Place. He practiced law in Boston, served on the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts and enjoyed a long and distinguished career as the great dissenter on the United States Supreme Court.

Fredrick Douglass, a former slave, escaped to Boston where he became one of the most influential voices of the anti-slavery movement. Douglass was instrumental in convincing Governor John A. Andrews to form the 54th Massachusetts Colored Infantry, the first unit of black soldiers created during the Civil War. Robert Gould Shaw trained the men and led them in the attack on Fort Wagner, where he died in action and was buried alongside his men.

The Augustus Saint-Gaudens' monument, across from the State House, commemorates Shaw and his regiment.

Images courtesy of the Boston Athenæum.
The design of the building, still in the approval phase, is already drawing rave reviews. As conceived by noted architectural firm Tsoi/Kobus & Associates of Cambridge, the facility is currently projected to have seven stories and contain 243,000 square feet. "We were thrilled," said Brian Delorey of the Boston Redevelopment Authority, commenting on the proposed design. "It is everything you'd want in a building on a street like Tremont, and on a site as important as that."

As one might expect in a project of such magnitude, the University and its architect must go through a lengthy and comprehensive approval process. The University will also embark upon a major capital campaign to help fund the project. If all goes as planned, Suffolk University's vision today will be tomorrow's legal landmark along the Freedom Trail.
Looking to the future: Hull students visit Suffolk

President Sargent and Hull School Superintendent Sheff
Dare to Dream:
Suffolk and Hull look to the future.

Take a quick trip back along Nostalgia Lane for a moment. Conjure up images of American education in the year 1900. The little red schoolhouse. Inkwells for every desk. Stern schoolmasters. Rigid curricula. Hard and fast rules, and education by the numbers—ABC’s and the Three R’s.

Now take a peek ahead at the challenges faced by today’s educators as we careen toward the new century. While we’ve come a long way since the days of McGuffey’s Readers, the new age poses a myriad of new problems, most of which cannot be solved merely by employing the technological marvels at our disposal. This much is obvious: education must undergo some dynamic changes, and progress will ultimately be achieved by the same engines that fueled educational reform for the past 100 years—the best ideas of the best minds we can find. Educators must face up to the need to break down old walls, forge new alliances, and share resources in order to cope with the challenges that will confront them in the 21st century.

Three years ago, Suffolk University and the Hull, Massachusetts school system took an ambitious first step in meeting those challenges head-on, forming an innovative educational bond that has its sights set clearly toward the future. The rationale for this union is simple and compelling: If the University and the community share a vested interest in the students of the future, if these students are given an opportunity to accelerate their educational experiences and enter college with a broader knowledge of the basics, the students’ chances of success in college—and beyond—will be dramatically enhanced.

On June 3, 1992, Suffolk University President David J. Sargent and Hull School Superintendent Claire Sheff announced a “declaration of intent” to form a joint partnership between the University and the town’s school system. The goal of this partnership, aptly named, “Dare to Dream,” is to enrich educational experiences and enhance professional opportunities for students. According to the partnership agreement, both institutions “share a vision that institutions of higher education and public schools can and must work together to educate, encourage, equip and inspire their students, faculties and the community at large; and that by sharing resources, both institutions will benefit in their efforts to fulfill their respective missions.”

The collaboration led to the granting of a charter to the South Shore Charter School at Hull, one of 15 such charters granted for next fall as part of the Commonwealth’s movement toward educational reform. The school is slated to open in the fall of 1995 with an initial population of about 150 students.

Tim Anderson, a member of the school’s board of trustees and a parent of school-aged children, was a moving force for the town in developing ideas for Suffolk to work closely with Hull’s secondary schools. “We are deeply indebted to the University and its faculty,” he acknowledged. “We could not have gotten the charter without Suffolk. As a founding partner in putting this school together, we hope the University enjoys having us as a ‘satellite campus’ in Hull.”

Three core programs encompassed in the initial agreement with Suffolk form the backbone of the South Shore Charter School: the Youth Conservation and
“This partnership has shown what can be accomplished when a university and a community each gives the best of what it has to offer. By accepting and meeting these educational challenges, the students, above all, are showing the very best they have to offer as well.”

Service Corps, the Hull Senior Thesis Competition and the Waxler Journalism Apprenticeships. These programs offer participating students an exciting—and challenging—array of educational experiences, while providing financial incentives toward meeting college costs. A key component of the program enables students to qualify for $1,700 in cash, or, if they choose, a $3,400 scholarship to Suffolk.

Enthusiastic and dedicated members of the Suffolk University faculty guide each program. Walter Johnson, Chairman of the Physics and Engineering Department, has worked with the Youth Conservation and Service Corps on a number of environmental projects, while enlisting the aid of other scientists and his own students. With such assistance, participating Hull students were able to secure a contract with the town to conduct a pollution study at Weir Reservoir.

The Waxler Journalism Apprenticeship Program, cosponsored by the University and the Herbert Waxler Trust, offers a rigorous schedule of assignments with five professional journalists, including Suffolk University Communication and Journalism Professor Vicki Karns. Students enter the program by attending 25 two-hour after-school sessions that include Professor Karns’s college-level introductory journalism course. In exchange for their participation, the students receive a certificate from the Communication and Journalism Department and an opportunity to earn college credit. The program has recently added a second tier, with more experienced students working in their own “public relations firm,” doing work for local businesses and currently crafting a publicity brochure for the Town of Hull.

The Hull Senior Thesis Competition offers a strong challenge, and a strong incentive. Students select a thesis topic and are then connected with a resource teacher and mentor who offers guidance and assistance in the preparation of the paper. The winner of the competition receives an $8,000 scholarship to Suffolk, payable over two years. A senior thesis will be a major component of graduation requirements from the South Shore Charter School.

The "Dare To Dream" ceremony inaugurating the formal Suffolk-Hull partnership two years ago has now become an annual event, allowing the Charter School students to spend a day with the Suffolk community. In line with this year’s theme, “International Day,” Associate Dean David Robbins of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, a frequent international traveler, shared his insight and advice on studying abroad. The students were introduced to "The Information SuperHighway — International Style" in a session hosted by Professor Jonathan Frank of the Computer Information Systems Department. The students also visited with the Taiwan Consular General of the Republic of China, David Dawei Lee.

Associate Dean of Students Elliot Gabriel, a key member of the Suffolk community in the development of the landmark partnership with Hull, summed up the feelings of many: “This partnership has shown what can be accomplished when a university and a community each gives the best of what it has to offer. By accepting and meeting these educational challenges, the students, above all, are showing the very best they have to offer as well.”
Larry Moulter: Making magic happen in Boston

With each daring leap, the high wire artists drew collective gasps of terror and then wild cheers of delight from the transfixed audience far below. Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus was in town, once again weaving its magic spell over the Boston Garden.

In a modest office building next door, Lawrence C. Moulter, JD '80, was making magic of another kind. The Chairman and President of the New Boston Garden Corporation was putting the finishing touches on opening ceremonies for a new showcase indoor sports and entertainment complex for Boston. The $160 million arena will become the largest in New England when it replaces the 66-year-old Boston Garden in September, 1995.*

Even before the construction is complete, the complex is being singled out as one of the most important new structures in Boston. “Tourism as an industry has emerged as a vital part of Boston’s lifeblood,” said Lawrence B. Rasky, president of Rasky & Company, Inc., a Boston public relations firm. “The new center will be a magnet for tourists, drawing people to Boston from all over the country. Already, the National Hockey League has committed to having the 1996 All-Star Game here. For the first time in 30 years, Boston will host the NHL All-Star Weekend. And the Olympic Committee has agreed to bring the nationally televised U.S. Olympic Gymnastic Trials here. Larry Moulter made these things happen.”

In addition to bringing more people, sports and entertainment to Boston, Moulter and his colleagues hope that the new facility will become a strong force for change and growth in the city. “Business and community leaders are beginning to understand that you can’t have kids being shot in Roxbury and the projects without having an effect on suburbia,” said Moulter during a recent interview. “Among the people I do business with, I’m seeing a realization that we are all connected and the recognition that we all have a responsibility to help our city.” For his part, Moulter is making sure that staff at the new arena will not only reflect the varied racial and ethnic fabric of Boston, but also undergo rigorous training in diversity awareness and sensitivity to the needs of all patrons.

In addition, Moulter is working to bring performers from various cultures and ethnic groups to Boston.

“I’ve always felt a special kinship to the Boston Garden,” said Moulter. “I’ve been a season ticket holder since 1979. In fact, my partially obstructed seat is still in use today. I remember sneaking into my first Jimi Hendrix concert when I was a college freshman. I even had my first date with my wife at the Garden.” Moulter compares the magic of the Garden to Hollywood’s “silver screen.”

*The bulk of the financing for the new arena is a multi-year loan provided by three leading New England banks: Bank of Boston, Bank of New England, and Shawmut National Corporation. As this publication went to press, Fleet Financial Group had just announced a merger with Shawmut National Corporation. The name of the new arena was still undecided at press time.
With 19,600 seats, the new arena will accommodate 5,000 more people than any arena in New England. In anticipation of the September, 1995 opening, several events have already been booked. These include the 1996 National Hockey League All-Star Game—the first time in 30 years that Boston will host an NHL All Star Weekend.
“When we finally shut the lights off in the Boston Garden, we’re going to turn them on in the new arena and open up a world of opportunity for Boston.”

“When you walk into this building, things are mysterious and enthralling and engaging. Parents bring their children to ice shows or the circus, fans come to watch the Bruins or Celtics. We want to preserve that magic.”

For the past year, Moulter and his staff have been working with outside producers to create the elaborately staged show that will open the new arena next September. “I think the public will be pleased and surprised when they see what we have planned for the opening,” said Moulter. He politely but firmly declined to divulge the nature of the surprise, saying only, “We want people to walk away from the evening saying what a great building this will be for Boston.”

A Triumph of Consensus-Building

The past three decades are littered with stories of those who tried and failed to negotiate the building of a new sports and entertainment facility to replace the aging Boston Garden. Larry Moulter’s success has been hailed by many as a triumph of consensus-building the likes of which Boston has rarely seen. “He knows all the politicians, in the city as well as the state... as well as members of the business community. They all trust him,” said sports journalist Will McDonough during a recent dinner honoring Moulter. “They felt that if somehow you could pull this thing together, get all the various egos to work together, that he’s the guy to get it done.”

The new complex is being built behind the old Boston Garden, which will eventually be replaced by a landscaped plaza and concourse for the MBTA, creating a dramatic new look for the North Station area known as the Bulfinch Triangle. “For 66 years, the Boston Garden has been a dominant source of industry for the North Station and Bulfinch Triangle areas,” said Moulter. “Because we’ll be doing more events, the new arena will anchor a resurgence of growth.”

With 19,600 seats, the new facility will accommodate 5,000 more people than any arena in New England. “That added size is very attractive to musicians, booking agents, and managers, and will mean more and varied acts coming to Boston,” said Moulter. In anticipation of the opening, more businesses and restaurants are already moving into the area, with a corresponding rise in property values.

In the six years since Larry Moulter took over the helm of the Boston Garden, he has transformed both the perception and the reality of the venerable arena, increasing the number and variety of shows appealing to a wider audience. “Larry brought music and the big shows back to Boston,” said McDonough. Well-known groups, including the Grateful Dead, U2 and Aerosmith, now perform regularly at the Garden, thanks to Moulter’s efforts, and there are more events for families as well. In addition to the Circus, Walt Disney’s World on Ice, and the Tour of World Figure Skating Champions, the Garden is hosting hockey and basketball open houses and a special Hall of Fame Ceremony to commemorate its final year. “Our goal has been to create a complete entertainment paradise, one that is user friendly not just to adults but to kids as well,” said Moulter.

“Larry has shown us that you can build big projects in this city,” said Lawrence B. Rasky. “He gave us new confidence in ourselves. This building will be the cornerstone of the next wave of greatness for Boston.”

An Early Love of Politics

The man who has achieved the seemingly impossible in Boston grew up in an Italian neighborhood in New Haven, Connecticut, the son of a nurse and a letter carrier. Moulter studied civil engineering as an undergraduate in Boston, but discovered an early love of politics and the political process. After doing graduate work at Syracuse University, he returned to Boston, working as Chief of Staff for Suffolk County Sheriff Dennis Kearney, and then for Lt. Gov. Thomas O’Neill III.

While still working for Lt. Gov. O’Neill, Moulter enrolled in the evening program at Suffolk University Law School, receiving his J.D. in 1980. “I never had the notion that I was going to be a practicing lawyer,” said Moulter. “I wanted the analytical framework, the thinking style of a legal education.” Suffolk University filled the bill more than I ever imagined. It had many graduates who were in the world of politics and government, the world I was in at the time. Each teacher brought something special to the classroom. At the Law School, especially in the evening program, you tend to get a more dedicated pursuer of the law. The intellectual exchanges and the differing perspectives were very useful to me."

Moulter’s consensus-building skills, honed during his involvement in politics and, later, as a literary agent for sports and entertainment figures, stood him in good stead during the negotiations for the new complex. “I like to mobilize people around common objectives and strategies,” said Moulter. “You have to be able to walk away from the bargaining table with the feeling that everybody got what he or she wanted, at least in part.”

Not Saying “No” Enough

“When it comes to charitable and volunteer work, my wife says I don’t know how to say no,” said Moulter in response to a question about his community involvement. “It’s difficult to balance everything. My most important job is to be a good husband and father. Last night, I left a tribute to Mohammed Ali early so I could get home in time to help my nine-year-old with his homework.” Whenever possible, Moulter makes breakfast for his children and takes them to school before heading downtown. When he does have to attend fundraising events in the evenings, Moulter explains the purpose of each event to his three children. “I want them to know I’m doing something to help poor people or children, and not think I’m just out having a good time.”

“There’s a group of about 25 people in the city who carry every charity,” said journalist McDonough. “Larry’s always in there, on the boards, giving up things in the Boston Garden for charity. He himself raises hundreds of thousands of dollars with things he does for charity every year. There are few people in Boston who can say that.”

This past October, Moulter was given a Community Leadership Award by Franciscan Children’s Hospital and Rehabilitation Center in Boston. “The dinner and award ceremony raised more than $100,000 for the Hospital — the biggest fundraiser we have ever had,” said Hospital CEO Paul DellaRocco. “Larry Moulter not only agreed to accept the award, he also worked hard to make the event a success for us. He tapped into his network of friends and acquaintances, spreading the word about the very special work we do here for children.”

Five hundred people attended the award dinner, including U.S. Senator John Kerry, many well-known sports and entertainment personalities, and Boston’s business leaders. “It is unusual to have that many people attend a fundraising event in the 1990s,” said Judi Kaplan Elkin, director of development and public affairs for the Hospital. “That so many were eager to come is a testimonial to the kind of man Larry Moulter is. After the dinner, he even wrote personal thank you notes to each and every guest.”

In addition to lending his name and support to worthy causes, Moulter opens the Boston Garden to many charitable organizations each year. “I take a lot of pride in the fact that we are more involved in the community than ever before,” said Moulter. The Boston Garden and the Celtics recently hosted a Day of Diversity for 10,000 Boston public high school students to increase awareness of the need for racial tolerance in the city. Moulter also organized a learn-to-skate day for The Boys and Girls Clubs of Boston, giving inner-city youngsters — most of whom had never been on skates before — the chance to learn from Boston Bruins coaches.

Inclusion and Diversity

Diversity is a theme that often recurs in Larry Moulter’s conversation. “In the past, people have perceived the Boston Garden as a white, Irish, male bastion,” he said. “Unfortunately, that perception has had some reality.” A large part of Moulter’s efforts in preparing for the opening of the new arena focus on increasing the diversity of the staff, the audience, and the performers. “For the first time, we will have a building that is truly inclusive,” he said.

Moulter is hiring a workforce that is representative of the racial and ethnic groups of the city. But hiring alone is not enough, according to Moulter. “We train all of our staff to be more responsive to diverse customers, and we condition our business people to go out and find promoters and entertainers that are attractive to a broad audience,” he said. Recently, Moulter took 60 senior and mid-management staff members off-site for two days. “We talked about diversity in the workforce, what that workforce is going to look like in the year 2000, and what that means for Boston and our new sports and entertainment complex,” said Moulter. “Even though the public doesn’t see this kind of training and discussion, hopefully they’ll see it indirectly, through a better sense of cooperation, courtesy, and hospitality when they come to events.”

The Beginning of a Legacy

Six years ago, Larry Moulter told an interviewer that Boston was a good place to do business. Asked whether he still believes that, he became reflective. “Boston is in transition, much like we are nationally,” he said. “We are reexamining those institutions and values that were set up in response to World War II and the Cold War, and we’re finding that some of the ways we do business, educate our kids, jail our prisoners are just not appropriate any more.”

Moulter sees evidence that Boston is going through a period of growth, pointing to the Central Artery, the Third Harbor Tunnel, and the recent construction of several new downtown office buildings. “There may not appear to be a lot of activity during a transition period,” suggests Moulter, “but that’s because people are trying to determine what resources are available now. We’re trying to find out what we can look to government to do, what the private sector can do, and how we can get moving as a community.”

It is Larry Moulter’s dream that the new facility will represent a coming together for Boston and the surrounding communities, that it will belong to everyone, and that people of all ages, ethnic origins, racial backgrounds and economic status will feel equally welcome. “Larry may go on to other things,” said Will McDonough. “But no matter what he does next, the new center will be his legacy to Boston.” When asked how he feels about the end of the Boston Garden era, Moulter describes a mixture of nostalgia and excitement. “When we finally shut the lights off in the Boston Garden,” he said, “we’re going to turn them on in the new arena and open up a world of opportunity for Boston.”
The mission of the alumni associations is to promote the interests of both the University and alumni through cultural, social and professional activities.

Law School Alumni Meet the New Dean and Honor Their Colleagues

More than 200 Suffolk University Law School alumni and their guests attended a reception on November 29, 1994, to welcome new Law School Dean John E. Fenton, Jr. The event, held at the Omni Biltmore Hotel in Providence, was sponsored by the Law School with the help of law alumni in Rhode Island.

Several other social events have been planned to introduce Dean Fenton to Law School alumni around the country. Please consult the Calendar section on page 25 of this magazine for a list of planned receptions and locations.

On December 1, 1994, 350 Law School alumni gathered at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel for the annual Law Alumni Dinner. The event included the presentation of Outstanding Alumni Awards to William F. Kennedy, Jr., JD '79, for his dedicated service to the Law School, and to Senator W. Paul White, JD '73, in recognition of his distinguished public service.

Alumni at the Arts

More than 500 alumni took advantage of several special Suffolk University evenings at the theater recently. These included The Nutcracker, presented by the Boston Ballet at the Wang Center for the Performing Arts; a Holiday Pops concert at Symphony Hall; and a performance of Jesus Christ Superstar, also held at the Wang Center.

Check the Calendar listings regularly for news of upcoming special artistic offerings for Suffolk University alumni. These evenings are a wonderful way to get together with your fellow alumni and attend some of the best musical and theatrical events in Boston — all at a reasonable cost!

University Alumni Council Honors Outgoing Directors

Several alumni completing their terms on the Alumni Association Boards of Directors were honored at a University Alumni Council reception. The event, held December 14, 1994 at the Omni Parker House, recognized the following alumni for their commitment to Suffolk University:

General Alumni Association:
Elizabeth Avery, BS '88; Teresa Coffey-Gordon, BSBA '84, MBA '85; Robert J. LeBlanc, BSBA '66;

Law School Alumni Association:
John J. Flanagan, JD '84; William F. Kennedy, Jr., JD '79; Karen M. Logozzo, JD '87;

School of Management Graduate Alumni Association:
Donald H. Belcher, MBA '88; Robert L. Geary, MBA '82; Kathryn E. Kougias, BS '82, MBA '89; John W. Licorish, MBA '72; Michael Wallace, MPA '91.
New Developments

Change is in the air on the Suffolk University campus these days. The University is poised at the threshold of the largest capital campaign in its history. Trustees and alumni are already coming forward with volunteer and financial support. Plans are underway to determine the needs of the University in the next century.

Coordinating all of these activities is the University’s Office of Development. In the fall of 1993, President David J. Sargent appointed James A. Campbell as the new Vice President for Development. In his first year, Campbell has set the stage for significantly elevating the level of voluntary gift support to the University.

With the support of the Development Office, the University’s Board of Trustees is leading the planning and early fundraising efforts. In anticipation of the Campaign, several substantial early gifts from Trustees as well as other members of the Suffolk University community have ended the year on an encouraging note. To date, nearly $3 million has been contributed or pledged.

In the early planning stages of the campaign, Campbell has enlarged the Development Office staff, assembling additional professionals in the areas of fundraising, alumni relations, and communications. Deborah L. MacFail, the Director of Development, oversees the Annual Giving Program — one of the most important sources of operating support for the University’s three schools. Diane Y. Spence, Director of Special Gifts, assists donors with gift planning, (Please see related story in this section). Christine Weisiger, Director of Corporate and Foundation Relations, solicits gifts from private philanthropic organizations.

There are three major components to the upcoming campaign: “bricks and mortar” funding to help defray construction costs of a new building for the Law School; new science and computer equipment throughout the University; and improvements to the University’s library system. Completion of the new building will alleviate the severe space shortages now existing not only in the Law School, but also in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and the School of Management as well. The latter two schools will be able to take advantage of the space that will be made available when the Law School moves into its new home.

It Can Pay to Plan

A gift to Suffolk University does not always mean simply writing a check. For many people, it makes economic sense to use gift-planning options. These include bequests, gift annuities, pooled income funds, charitable trusts, gifts of securities and real estate, and endowment giving. Gifts can be made to benefit Suffolk University now or later.

Diane Y. Spence, Director of Special Gifts, is available to help potential donors create personal gift plans. In addition to supporting the University in the most effective way, the benefits of a carefully planned gift include increased tax advantages, the possibility of life income for oneself or others, and the ability to direct support to a particular purpose.

For information about planned gifts to Suffolk University, call Diane Y. Spence at 617-573-8444.

Gifts of Note

Suffolk University Receives $30,000 from Alden Trust for Library Automation

In response to a challenge grant of $30,000 from the George I. Alden Trust of Worcester, Suffolk University alumni, faculty, and staff of the Law School helped raise more than $95,000 for the library automation project. The Alden Trust, which is one of only a few private philanthropies that gives grants for capital projects (e.g., bricks and mortar, equipment, hardware), often makes 3-to-1 challenge grants to encourage increased giving from college and university constituencies.

This fall, Law School faculty, staff, and reunion classes received a brochure describing the Alden Challenge and encouraging contributions. Generous responses from individuals, as well as grants from the Alice Willard Durr Foundation, the GTE Foundation, and the law firm of Foley, Hoag & Eliot helped Suffolk raise more than the required $90,000 to match Alden’s challenge.

Many thanks to all who helped!

A Creative Contribution from the Polaroid Foundation

The Polaroid Foundation will contribute $10,000 worth of museum replicas to Suffolk University thanks to William J. O’Neill, Jr., Executive Vice President of Polaroid Corporation. A graduate of the Suffolk University Law School, O’Neill is also a member of the University’s Board of Trustees.

The museum replicas are nearly flawless copies of original paintings. Advanced imaging technology developed by Polaroid now makes it possible for the finest works of art in the world to be photographically reproduced, complete with brushstroke and texture detail. Up to ten of these replicas — with a Boston theme — will be chosen for display in the University’s Trustee Conference Room.

Many thanks to all who helped!
Emmanuel Music, with artistic director Craig Smith, continues its Brahms series at the C. Walsh Theatre on Mar. 12 and Apr. 30 at 4pm. Tickets: $15 per concert. Telephone: 617-573-8680.

Collage New Music, with music director David Hoose, presents a work by Kraft on Apr. 9 at 4pm and works by Harbison, Primasch, Maw and Powell on May 7 at 4pm at the C. Walsh Theatre. Tickets: $12 per concert. Telephone: 617-573-8680.

The Alumni Relations Office has arranged for special alumni nights at the following events. Unless otherwise noted, for more information, please contact Jean Neenan, director of alumni relations, at 617-573-8457.

Alumni night at the smash musical Les Misérables is Apr. 27 at 8pm at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston. Tickets: $65.

The CLAS/SOM Awards Reception, recognizing CLAS and SOM alumni who have brought honor to themselves and the University through professional and civic contributions, takes place on May 11 at 6pm at the Boston Harbor Hotel.

Suffolk University Alumni Association presents Alpine Adventure, 15 days/13 nights in Switzerland and Bavaria, plus an optional six-night extension to Salzburg and Vienna for under $100 a day.

Suffolk University Law School hosts a reception for Law School alumni on Mar. 23 from 6pm-7:30pm at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, Ambassador Room, 7th Floor, 1515 West Third Avenue, Cleveland, OH. RSVP by March 8 to Nicole York at 617-573-8157.

Suffolk University alumni Evening at the Pops takes place on June 16 (details in separate mailing).

Alumni night at the Red Sox takes place July 21 (see further details in separate mailing).

The Alumni Job Fair Consortium presents Career Night, a job fair and career seminar for Suffolk University’s alumni, on May 18 from 4pm-8pm at the Hynes Convention Center. Registration: $10 in advance. Telephone: 617-573-8480.

Locations

C. Walsh Theatre, Suffolk University, 55 Temple Street, Boston
The Law School has planned a series of events to introduce its new dean, John E. Fenton, Jr. All information is subject to change. For an update, call Jean Neenan at 617-573-8457.

The series schedule is as follows:

Tuesday, April 18
(Worcester, MA region)
Worcester Marriott
10 Lincoln Square
Worcester, MA 01608
508-791-1600
6pm-7:30pm
Host: Jeanne Hession

Tuesday, April 25
(Hartford, CT region)
Gaetano's Restaurant
1 Civic Center Plaza
Hartford, CT 06103
203-249-1629
12pm-1:30pm
Host: Duncan Mackay

Monday, June 8
(Manchester, NH region)
Manchester Country Club
180 South River Road
Bedford, NH 03110
603-624-4036
6pm-8pm
Host: Robert Walsh

Tuesday, April 25
(Springfield, MA region)
Sheraton Springfield
1 Springfield Center
Springfield, MA 01144
413-781-1010
5:30pm-7pm
Host: Raipher Pellegrino

Monday, June 8
(Portland, ME region)
Eastland Plaza, formerly called Sonesta Hotel Portland
157 High Street
Portland, ME 04101
207-775-5411
12pm-2pm
Host: S. Catherine Longley

Fires in the Mirror,
Anna Devere Smith's play about the Crown Heights riots of 1991, runs Apr. 6-Apr. 8 at 8pm at the C. Walsh Theatre. Tickets: $9 regular, $4 students. Telephone: 573-8680.

Prometheus Dance performs works by choreographer Diane Arvanites-Noya at the C. Walsh Theatre May 19-May 20 at 8pm and May 21 at 2pm. Tickets: $15. Telephone: 573-8680.

The Boston Music Theatre Project presents Joan of Arc, a staged reading of a new musical based on the legend of St. Joan, on June 5 at 7:30pm at the C. Walsh Theatre. Telephone: 573-8680.
52: Richard M. Rosenberg, DCS '91 (Honorary), BSJ, chairman and chief executive officer of BankAmerica Corporation, was a keynote speaker at a forum hosted by Suffolk University at the Omni Parker House in Boston. Rosenberg discussed the challenges and opportunities to banking in the emerging global economy.

58: Robert Grant, MA, BA '57, a principal in the Stoneham school system for the past 25 years, has recently retired. Grant, who began his career as an English teacher in Stoneham, had served as principal of the Robin Hood School in Stoneham since 1983.

69: Richard Valentine, BA, recently spoke in Braintree at a DARE assembly for fifth graders and their parents. Valentine is a professional race car driver and runs the MBA Group, a Braintree-based business that provides professional services to owners of small- and medium-sized businesses.

71: Harry N. Tingley, Jr., MAE, has been appointed vice president of the Massachusetts Business Educators Association. He is head of the business department at Marshfield High School.

72: Dennis White, MEd, has been named producer of WCVB-TV’s “Eye Opener” news show. White was previously senior producer at WHDH-TV in Boston.

74: Donald Beaudette, MEd, has been elected superintendent of the Norwell school system. Prior to this appointment, he had served as superintendent of schools in Newport, RI.

76: Lawrence A. Carafna, Jr., MEd, recently received the Paul E. Elker Award for excellence in teaching at Newton North High School. Carafna, a math teacher, was elected by a committee comprising students, teachers, former teachers, and administrators.

82: Harry Marchetti, BS, has been named head football coach for the Whittier Tech Wildcats in Haverhill.

85: Christopher P. Bright, BS, a member of the Revere Fire Department, recently opened a general law practice in Revere.

91: Andrea J. McDonough, BA, has joined the faculty at Wayland High School as an English teacher.
87: Stephanie V. D'Alleva, BS, recently joined Lakeview Associates in Connecticut to assist with media relations and placement. Lakeview Associates is a corporate communications consultancy.

88: Joseph F. Crosby, BS, was promoted to senior administrative assistant jail, budget at the Suffolk County Sheriff's Department.

Dante Santone, BS, has opened Santone Chiropractic in Methuen.

89: Jeffrey S. Appel, MEd, has been named director of development at Berkshire School. He will oversee the school's development program including alumni relations, annual giving, communications and research.

Nancy A. Buckley, MS, BS '80, has been appointed business education teacher, at Harwich High School.

Frank Leonard, BS, has recently received a juris doctor degree from New England School of Law.

Susan Pratt, MS, has been named treasurer of the Board of Directors of the Massachusetts Business Educators Association.

90: Lisa Carberg, BSJ, has been named co-anchor of the 6pm and 11pm news for WSAV News 3 in Savannah, GA.

Lois A. Doherty, MS, has been named president of the Massachusetts Business Educators Association. She is an instructor at Aquinas College in Milton.

Kelly A. Jackson, BS, received a juris doctor degree from the Massachusetts School of Law in Andover.

91: Timothy J. Cahill, BA, was recently appointed campaign manager for Representative Robert Lawless, who is running for district attorney of Cape Cod and the Islands.

Margaret Meehan, BA, was recently appointed community relations manager for Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts. She will be the company's representative for many community and social service initiatives with external organizations and businesses.

Christine Santapaola, BA, has been appointed the new assistant manager of the Stevens (Haines) Square Branch of the Medford Savings Bank.

93: Jennifer Brady, BS, has been appointed to the Abington Housing Authority. She is a legislative aid to State Representative Michael Sullivan.

John F. Maceira, BA, recently graduated from The Basic School at Marine Corps Combat Development Command in Quantico, VA.

Robert K. Major, MEd, has been appointed academic counselor of undergraduate studies at Babson College in Wellesley.

Anthony P. Stephanik, BA, recently reported for naval duty aboard the destroyer tender USS Samuel Gompers, homeported in Alameda, CA.

94: Paul D. Castro, BA, recently reported for duty with Marine Aircraft Group 49, 4th Marine Aircraft Wing, Naval Air Station, in South Weymouth.

Update your classmates on your new jobs, geographic moves, family additions, and other important changes by writing to Class Notes, c/o Suffolk University Alumni Association, 8 Ashburton Place, Boston, MA 02108.

You may also e-mail information to alumni@admin.suffolk.edu. (When corresponding by e-mail, please include your name and phone number so that we can confirm this information with you.)

Please note that information submitted may not appear in the next magazine, as deadlines are set three months prior to publication. Submissions are edited to meet space limitations.

Did you know...
Until 1795, Beacon Hill was known as Sentry Hill, where a sentry stood guard to light a torch and warn Boston residents in case of attack.
Did you know... Fenway Park is the oldest professional sports arena in the country. It was built in 1912.
78: Patrick J. Callaghan, MBA, has been promoted to vice president and general manager of the bakery business unit of Pepperidge Farm, Inc. in Norwalk, CT. Prior to his promotion, Callaghan was vice president, general manager of the frozen business unit.

George T. Dowd, Jr., EMBA, has been named vice president of U.S. operations by Kennedy & Donkin Quality Inc., in Braintree. Dowd is a former group vice president of National Technical Systems and president of S & W Technical Services, Inc.

Arthur Guardia, MBA, BSBA ’77, is the controller of Dataqip, Inc. in Wilmington.

Kenneth C. Mermer, MBA, was recently appointed to the New England Health Council. Mermer is a constituent agency head for Combined Jewish Philanthropies and is director of The Recuperative Center. He was also named to a three-year term on the Board of Registration of Nursing Home Administrators by Governor William F. Weld.

Timothy O’Leary, BSBA, has been appointed vice president, sales for Bank of Boston Corporation’s Worldwide Custody Division.

Robert Pacheco, MBA, BSBA ’72, has joined Century 21 Walker Bros. as a sales associate. He is also professor of real estate and business administration at Massasoit Community College.

80: George F. Bacigalupo, MBA, has been named senior vice president of credit administration for First New Hampshire Bank. He had previously served as senior vice president of First New Hampshire Bank’s asset-based lending group in Manchester, NH.

Ken Marchurs, MBA, has been promoted to Massachusetts deputy state auditor in charge of administrative operations. Marchurs has been the deputy auditor for the Division of Local Mandates for the past seven years.

Susan N. Morrison, BSBA, recently received a juris doctor degree from New England School of Law.

Kenneth Morse, MBA, has been promoted to executive vice president of J. Polep Distribution in Chicopee.

Paul F. Passeri, MBA, has been elected commercial loan vice president of Century Bank and Trust Company. He will be responsible for business development and commercial lending in the greater Malden area.

Thomas Gillen, MBA, has been promoted to senior vice president and team leader of Century Bank & Trust Company.

John D. O’Brien, MBA, was recently honored as Democrat of the Year by the Merrimack Valley Democrats.

Robert A. Barrio, MPA, recently joined the Masonic Charity Foundation of Connecticut as vice president of finance and chief financial officer. He previously served as senior vice president and chief financial officer at The William Backus Hospital in Norwich, CT.

Athea Garrison, BSBA, was recently appointed a member of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council. Garrison is a state representative from the 5th Suffolk District Dorchester, Roxbury.

John J. Murphy, BSBA, has been promoted to vice president at the Federal Home Loan Bank of Boston. Previously, he was assistant vice president and director of bank operations.

David Newton, MBA, has been appointed as chief economic advisor for HISPANIC Business Magazine. Newton is an associate professor of finance and entrepreneurship at Weston College in Santa Barbara, CA.

Joseph T. Nickley, Jr., MBA, was recently ordained as permanent deacon of the Catholic Church. He is president and general manager of Time Out Sports, Inc., a family-owned business.

Jonathan Stone, MBA, is president of the newly launched Andover Marketing Group. The company offers senior-level marketing and program expertise in a variety of industries. Stone previously served as marketing manager for Performance Software.

81: George M. Apkin, MBA, BSBA ’77, is co-owner of Butler Wholesale Products, a grocery and related products wholesale business in Adams.

John Cice, MBA, has joined the faculty of Walnut Hill School in Natick. Cice is a pianist and conductor, as well as a sales director of Systech Corporation.

William P. Masterson, MBA, has been promoted to director of field sales at Braun, Inc., in Lynnfield. He is responsible for the development and execution of sales force activities throughout the United States.

Did you know...

Many streets on Beacon Hill—Willow Street, Chestnut Street, Myrtle Street, Fruit Street, and others—are named for the trees and gardens Anglican minister William Blaxton planted when he lived there in 1623.

Steven Venuti, MBA, BSBA ’78, was recently promoted to first vice president, finance and accounting, for Cambridge Savings Bank in Burlington.

84: Michael Collins, MBA, recently joined Mount Auburn Hospital’s staff as director of patient financial services. Collins most recently was director of financial operations for Symmes Hospital.

Robert K. Maxon, MBA, of PRC Engineering Systems Inc. in McLean, VA, is the project manager for a technical engineering project at the River Bend Nuclear Station in St. Francisville, LA.

Donald Washburn, BSBA, has been promoted to senior vice president of MassBank for Savings. He has been with MassBank, former Melrose Saving Bank, since 1973.

85: Catherine Arkine, MBA, has been promoted to vice president of the asset team of the Boston Financial Group, where she was formerly an asset manager.
Therese Jarmusik, MPA, was recently named principal of St. Patrick School in Stoneham. She most recently was a seventh grade teacher at Mt. Carmel School in Methuen.

Janice Pagano, MBA, BSBA ‘80, was recently appointed to assistant principal at the Carroll School in Peabody. She has a 28-year teaching history with Peabody public schools.

Daniel Sarno, BSBA, has been promoted to assistant ombudsman and manager of consumer affairs at Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts.

David W. Smith, BSBA, has been appointed to the Massasoit Community College board of trustees.

James T. Walsh, MBA, has been promoted to vice president, general manager, northern region, of Shaw’s Supermarkets.

James Haskell, MPA, has been named executive director of Salem’s Community Development Corporation.

Donna Herrmann, MBA, has been named managing director of Sedgwick Environmental Services. She has been associated with Sedgwick for 15 years.

Kevin O’Brien, BSBA, has joined the staff of S.H. Smith & Company’s Boston office as senior account executive.

Karl N. Werner, MBA, has joined The Whitman Companies as senior engineer. The Whitman Companies is an environmental engineering and consulting firm in East Brunswick, NJ.

Carol Boughter, BS, has joined the direct marketing firm Parrish, Wickersham & Partners as a traffic manager.

George (Chip) Forrest, BSBA, has been appointed head baseball coach at Stonehill College. He previously coached baseball at Boston College.

Charles Rockwood, BSBA, has been promoted to financial analyst III for Barnett Banks, Inc., in Jacksonville, FL. Rockwood joined Barnett in 1991 as a senior auditor.

Donna Skuncik, BSBA, has been promoted from retail specialist to retail coordinator for Toomey-DeLong, Inc. in Framingham.

Leonard V. Suida, MBA, has been elected a member of Meridian Mutual Holding Company, the parent corporation of East Boston Savings Bank. Suida has served as treasurer of East Boston Savings Bank and Meridian Mutual Holding Company for the past year.

Mark W. Van Dorpe, MBA, received a juris doctor degree from New England School of Law.

Nicole Fajors, BSBA, recently received a masters in business administration degree from Harvard Business School and has joined the Proctor and Gamble Company as an assistant brand manager working on the “Oil of Olay” brand of products.

Dennis Cataldo, BSBA, of Cataldo Ambulance Company, was recently recognized by the American Cancer Society for his outstanding service and special dedication to the organization. Cataldo, a cancer survivor, has served as a volunteer for the organization’s Somerville unit for the past two years.

Christopher Clark, MPA, was recently appointed assistant town administrator for Walpole.

Colleen Conway, MBA, has joined REW Home Health Care Agency, Inc. in the newly created position of quality improvement director.

Philip S. Imbrescia, BSBA, recently received a juris doctor degree from New England School of Law.

William Heitin, MBA, has been promoted to senior associate in the business assurance/audit practice of the Boston Office of Coopers & Lybrand, an international accounting and consulting firm.

Richard J. LaFond, MBA, has been appointed executive secretary for the town of Abington.

Donna H. West, BSBA, has been promoted to senior vice president of MassBank for Savings. West is also a member of the community banking committee of the Massachusetts Bankers Association.

Timothy J. Burge, BSBA, has completed Basic Training School in the United States Army. He is stationed at Fort Lee, VA to finish specialized training in the career field of petroleum supply specialist.

Peter V. Cerbone, MPA, has been appointed director of financial services at Visiting Nurse and Community Health Foundation of Arlington and Lexington. He is a member of the Healthcare Financial Management Association.

Michael A. Russ, MBA, was recently promoted to senior finance officer of The Baybanks Associates, Inc. He will be responsible for financial reporting and budget development.

Craig C. Hall, MPA, has been elected to a three-year term on the board of directors of the Suffolk University School of Management Graduate Alumni Association. He is also involved in the formation of a Massachusetts Chapter of the Democratic Leadership Council.

Did you know...

In 1924, an electric sign advertising “Suffolk Law School” stood on top of the Archer Building. The sign was changed to read “Suffolk University” in 1937, and was finally removed in 1946.
28: Henry E. Quarles, LLB '78 (Honorary), JD, was awarded the Robert J. Morris Lifetime Achievement Award by the Massachusetts Black Lawyers Association. Quarles was honored for his 62 years of legal practice, during which he traveled across the state representing people of color.

39: Gleason L. Archer, JD, recently spoke on "The Difficulties of Unbelief" at Grace Community Church in Lowell. Archer is the author of "Is The Old Testament Reliable?", "Encyclopedia of Bible Difficulties" and "Does Pacifism Have a Scriptural Basis."

50: The Hon. Francis P. Cullen, JD, has joined the new Trial Court in Taunton. He is co-founder and president of Anawon Trust, N.A. & Stackpole.

57: The Hon. Frederick V. Giigun, JD, has recently retired. Giigun was appointed judge pro tem of the 4th District Court in Woburn. He was also appointed as judge of the 4th District Court in Concord, where he served as acting presiding justice from 1988 to 1993. Giigun recently replaced outgoing First Justice Francis P. Cullen, JD '50, who recently retired.

58: John C. Spillane, JD, has joined the CMS Insurance Agency, Inc., a division of Cook & Company in Marshfield, as vice president for workers' compensation. He is a licensed insurance advisor and serves as treasurer of the Boston Catholic Cemetery Association.

65: Cornelius J. O'Driscoll, JD, has been elected a fellow of the Arizona Bar Foundation. He was also appointed judge pro tem of the Phoenix Municipal Court.

66: Patricia P. McGovern, LLB '88 (Honorary), JD, BA '62, has been selected by the Northern Essex Community College board of trustees to receive the college's annual leadership award. McGovern served in the Massachusetts Senate for 12 years and was the first woman to chair the Senate Ways and Means Committee.

68: Larry J. Hirsch, JD, was recently appointed to the board of directors of Washington Trust Bancorp. He also serves as a trustee of Westerly Hospital and is the owner and operator of Westerly Jewelry in Westerly, CT.

69: Thomas B. Concannon, JD, was recently sworn in as acting mayor of Newton. Prior to his appointment, he had served as president of the board of aldermen for Newton.

70: Joseph A. Keough, JD, a former municipal court judge in Pawtucket, RI, has been named the first chairman of that city's planned juvenile hearing board.

71: Michael DeMarco, JD, BA '68, has been named to the board of directors of the National Board of Community Service Programs for Children with Disabilities.

Did you know... Four former New England Patriot players hold law degrees from Suffolk: Nick Buoniconti, JD '68 (shown at left); the late Ross O'Hanley, JD '69; Doug Dumler, JD '79; and Art McMahon, JD '75. Another ex-Pat, tackle Ray "Sugar Bear" Hamilton, holds a master's in public administration from Suffolk (1977).
72: John F. Nicholls, JD, was honored by the Barre Elks Club at its 12th annual Community Service Recognition Night. Nicholls, a member and former president of the Barre Rotary Club, is the chairman of the board of trustees of the Vermont State Colleges and a partner in the firm of Abare, Nicholls & Parker.

73: Dawn Marie Driscoll, JD, was awarded an honorary doctor of commercial science degree from Bentley College Graduate School of Business. She co-authored Members of the Club, a book which emphasizes the importance of networking for female professionals interested in breaking into the upper echelons of corporate power.

Robert S. Heppe, Jr., JD, has joined the Worcester firm of Mirick, O'Connell, DeMalle & Lougee as an associate practicing in the areas of estate planning and probate administration.

Timothy S. Hillman, JD, has been appointed first justice of both Gardner and Winchendon District Courts, marking the first time that one judge has been appointed to serve as first justice in two district courts at once.

John F. Leyden, JD, a member of the law firm Sullivan & Leyden, P.C. in Wayland, NY has been named to the board of directors for Noyes Memorial Hospital.

Dana E. Marcus, JD, has been named partner in the law firm McCormick & Murphy in Great Barrington.

Regina L. Quinlan, JD, Massachusetts Superior Court justice, was the 1994 commencement speaker at Regis College.

William S. Ruby, JD, has joined Biernbaum, Inclima & Meyer, a law firm in Rochester, NY. He will practice in the area of personal injury and medical malpractice litigation.

74: Robert P. Feingold, JD, has joined the firm of Gordon, Moore, Primason & Bradley in Swampscott. Feingold is a member of the Family Law Section of the Massachusetts Bar Association and the Massachusetts Academy of Trial Attorneys.

Richard S. Goldman, JD, a partner in the law firm of Drinker, Biddle & Reath in Princeton, NJ, has been named a recipient of the "Meritorious Service Award" by the Hun School in Princeton.

A. John Pappalardo, JD, a former United States attorney for the District of Massachusetts, has joined the Boston law firm of Dwyer, Collora & Gertner.

Robert D. Parrillo, JD, recently received an Award of Merit from the Rhode Island Bar Association for outstanding service to the Rhode Island Bar Association and the profession.

Charles Stanford, JD, has been promoted to vice president of legal and business affairs, production and multimedia, at Capital Cities, ABC, Inc. in New York City.

William J. Sweeney, Jr., JD, partner in the New Britain, CT law firm of Silver, Webb, Sweeney & Griffin, was recently elected president of the Connecticut Trial Lawyers Association. Sweeney, who concentrates on civil litigation, is also a special master in the U.S. District Court and is a state trial referee in the state superior court.

75: Colonel George Blaisdel, JD, superintendent of the North Andover public schools, is retiring from the Army National Guard after 37 years of service. He has been awarded numerous medals, including the Meritorious Service Medal and the Army Commendation Medal.

Robert W. Gardner, Jr., JD, was recently named to the Massachusetts Government Land Bank's board of directors. He is a senior partner in the Ayer law firm of Gardner, Brown & Williams and serves as Ayer town counsel.

Brian J. Grearson, JD, has been elected a director of the Granite Mutual Insurance Company of Barre, VT.

James H. Greene, JD, was recently named chairman of the board of the Health and Hospitals Department for the city of Boston. He has served as a member of the Zoning Board of Appeals and is on the board of the Boston Industrial Finance Authority.

Judith A. Pickett, JD, town counsel for Littleton and special counsel to the Planning Board in Dracut, has been re-elected to a term on the executive committee of the City Solicitors and Town Counsel Association for the 1994-1995 year. She is a partner in the Boston law firm of Pickett & Miyares.

Leslie Reizes, JD, was recently elected chair of the New York State Bar Association's International Law and Practice Section. Reizes is a partner in the Wavelry, NY firm of Friedlander, Friedlander, Reizes & Joch.

Kenneth J. Vacovec, JD, a senior partner in the Newton law firm Vacovec, Mayotte & Singer, has been elected vice president of the Massachusetts Bar Association.

76: Charles F. Barr, JD, was promoted to vice president, general counsel and corporate secretary for General Re Corp.

Christine McEvoy, JD, was recently appointed a superior court judge for Massachusetts. Prior to her appointment, she served as a judge for the Concord District Court.

77: David C. Jenkins, JD, BA '74, is an associate with the law firm of Grady & Dwyer in Boston.

Carol A. DiMento, JD, has been appointed to the Board of Overseers for the Supreme Judicial Court Historical Society. She is partner in the Swampscott law firm of DiMento & DiMento and is the current president of the Essex County Bar Association.

James Perkoski, JD, recently returned to private practice after serving for more than 15 years as a special district attorney for Attleboro District Court.

Gregory C. Flynn, JD, has been named presiding justice at Waltham District Court.

Lisa A. Roberts, JD, has joined the Boston law firm of Conn, Kavanaugh, Rosenthal, Peich & Ford.

78: Mary Clare Decker, JD, was named vice president, general counsel and corporate secretary for The PW Group in Boston.
James C. Donnelly, JD, vice president of WICOR, Inc. in Milwaukee, WI, has been promoted to president and chief executive officer of Sta-Rite Industries, a WICOR subsidiary and international manufacturer of pumps and water processing systems.

Milo T. Peck, JD, assistant professor of accounting at Fairfield University, was recently named "Teacher of the Year" by Alpha Sigma Nu, the university's chapter of the national Jesuit honor society. He was also inducted into Alpha Sigma Nu as an honorary member.

Joseph J. Czerwonka, JD, has been appointed town counsel for West Newbury.

John J. Czerwonka, JD, has been appointed to the Greater Fall River Vocational School District's Diman Board. Czerwonka is a member of the Fall River, Bristol County and Massachusetts Bar associations.

Joseph Marzilli, JD, was promoted from assistant treasurer to treasurer of Simplex Time Recorder Co. in Gardner.

Oliver C. Mitchell, JD, a former assistant district attorney and assistant United States attorney, is a legal commentator for New England Cable News Network. He is a member of the Boston law firm Goldstein & Manello.

Lawrence J. Murphy, JD, has been appointed town counsel for West Newbury.

Ann C. Palmer, JD, received the Massachusetts Bar Association's Community Service Award for her volunteer service to organizations such as the Barnstable County District Court Bar Advocates and the Barnstable County Probate and Family Court Lawyer of the Day Program.

Celeste Alicia Beron, JD, has joined the law firm of Petree & Weymouth in Winston-Salem, NC.

Laureen D'Ambrè, JD, a Rhode Island child advocate, recently received the Suffolk University Law School Outstanding Alumni Achievement Award.

Rocco V. DiFazio, JD, has been named a Paul Harris Fellow by the Weymouth Rotary Club. A partner in the Weymouth law firm of DiFazio & DiFazio, he has been named a partner in the Boston law firm of Keohane & Keegan. Werlin specializes in telecommunications, energy and transportation law.

Robert N. Werlin, JD, former chairman of the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities, has become a partner in the Boston law firm of Keohane & Keegan. Werlin specializes in telecommunications, energy and transportation law.

Anthony J. Bucci, Jr., JD, has been named a partner in the Providence, RI, firm Licht & Semonoff. He is active in the firm's real estate law and corporate and tax law groups.

David Cherry, JD, a partner in the Boston law firm of Arwood & Cherry, has been selected for the second year in a row to be listed in the 1995-1996 edition of Best Lawyers in America. He was also recently elected secretary of the Massachusetts Chapter of the American Academy of Matrimonial Lawyers.

Aida A. Gennis, JD, was recently appointed to the Massachusetts Board of Education's Parent and Community Advisory Council.

Susan K. Howard, JD, a defense lawyer in the "Framingham Eight" domestic violence cases, attended Salem State College's first Women's History Month dinner, where she addressed the issue of violence against women.

Elizabeth Quigley, JD, has merged her Great Barrington law practice with the firm Denmark, Rumph & Quigley of Pittsfield.

Martin J. Dunn, JD, has been named a staff attorney in the Massachusetts Senate Counsel's office. Dunn is a former Democratic state senator and mayor of Holyoke.

Christine Sandor Filip, JD, president of The Success Group—a marketing and public relations company for professionals in Manhattan, NY—has been selected by the New York State Bar Association to write a marketing book for smaller law firms.

Michael S. Varadian, JD, has been named senior vice president, managed care division, for First Health Services Corporation in Richmond, VA.

Rita Tirocchi Afonso, JD, has joined Fidelity Personal Trust Services as vice president and senior fiduciary officer.

Leslie J. Cook, JD, has been named assistant vice president and associate state counsel for the First American Title Insurance Company.

Stephen G. Finn, JD, has joined the firm of Ledoux, Whipple & King, PC, in Salem. He will practice real estate law.

Barbara Harris, JD, won the 9th annual Rhode Island Bar Journal writing award for her article, "Attorney's Fees for Bankruptcy Counsel: Entering the Twilight Zone." It was published in the Feb. 1994 issue of the Bar Journal, the official publication of the Rhode Island Bar Association.

Denise McClintic, JD, is now vice president and trust officer for Charter Trust Company in Concord, NH. Previously she was vice president and general counsel of Lake Sunapee Saving's New London branch.

Patricia McCorry, JD, a Plymouth attorney and real estate sales associate for DeWolfe New England Real Estate's Duxbury office, has been appointed alumni representative member of Cape Cod Community College's board of trustees.

Susan M. Smith, JD, has been named a partner in the firm of McCormick & Murphy in Great Barrington.

Robert F. Weir, JD, was recently admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court.

Richard C. Arrighi, JD, has joined the law firm of Hinckley, Allen & Snyder in Boston. He is a partner in the real estate department and practices real estate development and finance with a focus on tax issues.

Lori Ganciulli, JD, and Stephen M. Ouellette, JD, announce the formation of their law practice in Beverly. Ganciulli was formerly associated with the Boston firm of Shapiro, Israel & Weiner. Ouellette formerly practiced in Gloucester and Boston.

Leo J. Corcoran, JD, executive director of Caritas Communities, Inc., recently gave the annual Milton Visiting Nurse's Susan B. Abell Lecture at Milton Academy. His topic was "Caritas Communities: A Fellowship of Caring."

Did you know... Not every Suffolk University building is located on historic Beacon Hill. We also have the Robert S. Friedman science laboratory at Cobscook Bay in Edmund, Maine. Summer programs at the laboratory allow students to study the vast array of marine life in the bay.
85: Nancy Aldrich, JD, announces the formation of the law firm Aldrich & Aldrich in Westport, CT.
Barry R. Buck, JD, recently received an MBA degree from Columbia University's Graduate School of Business. He is now an associate at the New York-based executive compensation consultants Pearl Meyer & Partners.
Brian G. Callahan, JD, BS '82, has been appointed to the Board of Governors for the Association of Trial Lawyers of America. He will serve as governor for Massachusetts's New Lawyers Division.
State Senator William R. Keating, JD, was awarded the Israel Unity Award from the Greater Boston West Roxbury, recently spoke on social litigation and administrative joined the Worcester firm Millott Thomas J. Scannell, on Criminal Justice.

86: David R. Friedman, JD, has been named a partner in the law firm of Bowditch & Deewy, serving in the firm's Worcester office.
Francis T. Talty, JD, MPA '79, has been elected president of the Greater Lowell Bar Association. He is an adjunct instructor of politics and law at the University of Massachusetts-Lowell.

87: Dana E. Casher, JD, of Krulewich & Associates in Boston has been elected treasurer of the New England region of the Commercial Law League of America.
Samuel D. Daune, JD, who specializes in providing risk management and insurance planning for medium-sized businesses, has been appointed branch manager for Brewer & Lord's Essex County office.
William N. Erickson, JD, has been named a partner in the Boston office of Robbins, Kaplan, Miller & Ciresi. He will practice business litigation, environmental law and personal injury.
Kevin Kenneally, JD, an attorney in the general trial department of Burns & Levinson in Boston, has been elected for a two-year term to the House of Delegates of the American Bar Association. He currently holds a two-year appointment to the American Bar Endowment, which oversees all ABA-sponsored insurance programs.
Daniel Pokaski, JD, is retiring after serving 12 years as the clerk of criminal business for Suffolk Superior Court.

88: Theodore L. DiSalvo, JD, announces the opening of Kogan & DiSalvo, PA in Boca Raton, FL. The firm concentrates its practice in civil litigation with an emphasis on personal injury and insurance issues.
Jane Durkin Samuel, JD, has been named a partner in the firm of Landrum & Shouse in Lexington, KY.

89: Susan P. Walt, JD, recently lectured on "Medicaid and Long Term Care Planning" at the Lynnfield Senior Center in observance of Elder Law Week.

90: Ennio Cataldo, JD, has opened a general law practice in Medford, where he will specialize in small business, entertainment and sports law.
Gregory P. Noone, JD, a lieutenant in the United States Navy's Judge Advocate General Corp, recently reported for duty as an instructor at the Naval Justice School in Newport, RI. He will teach trial advocacy, evidence and criminal law.
Leigh P. Perkins, JD, has been named associate editor of Lawyers Weekly USA. Perkins was formerly a litigation associate in the Boston law firm Goodwin, Proctor & Hoar.

Andrew C. Liazos, JD, has joined the Boston office of the international law firm of McDermott, Will & Emery as an associate in the firm's banking and real estate practice groups. He is based in the firm's Providence, RI office.

91: Joseph L. Schwartz, JD, has been named an associate in the Morristown, New Jersey law firm of Riker, Danzig, Scherer, Hyland & Perretti.
In Memoriam

Thomas M. O’Brien, JD, general counsel for Massachusetts Industrial Finance Agency, has been named chief of staff for the city of Boston’s Economic Development Office.

Lynne F. Riley, JD, has opened a law office in Boston with Marisa A. Campagna, BS ’81. The firm will concentrate in bankruptcy, litigation and civil rights cases.

92: Susan C. LaRose, JD, has been appointed director of legal and legislative affairs for the Rhode Island Association of Realtors.

Theresa M. Lord, JD, BS ’89, an attorney with the law office of Thomas F. Williams in Quincy, has been named to the board of trustees of Quincy College.

93: Israela Adah Brill, JD, is an associate at the Rhode Island law firm of Cass Law Associates.

Peter J. Cura, JD, has joined Bowditch & Dewey’s Framingham office. He will practice in real estate law and corporate and business matters.

Norene Farr, JD, is with the firm of James A. Normand, PA in Manchester, NH.

Salvatore J. Frontiero, JD, has opened a general practice law firm, Frisoli, Frontiero & Graves, in Stoneham.

Gene J. Guimond, JD, is an associate with the Norwell law firm of Haufler Associates. He is concentrating in civil litigation, estate planning and property law.

Joy L. Milan, JD, has joined the firm of Timby, Brown & Timby in Philadelphia, PA. She will concentrate her practice on the defense of workers’ compensation claims.

Anne Marie Paskalis, JD, is working for the Immigration and Naturalization Service at the Department of Justice, in Washington, D.C.

94: Eric J. Gross, JD, has been named director of Child Care Services at East Boston Social Centers.

Marcus G. Beebe, JD ’42
John H. Berkland, BSBA ’49
James T. Boviard, MBA ’87
John B. Brennan, JD ’41
Alfred Lian Bunai, JD ’34, LLM ’36
Andrew W. Bulger, BSBA ’70, MBA ’73
Carolyn Ann (Baker) Byrne, MA ’57
Giancomo Cacciature, JD ’40
Andrew H. Card, Sr., JD ’58
James Chalas, BS ’50
David P. Cichon, BA ’73
Harry J. Clarke, BSBA ’65
Wayne D. Cohen, BA ’66, JD ’70
Dr. Oliver Cope, DHL ’89
Emma Cummings, JD ’42
Eugene L. Cuneo, JD ’25
Maurice H. Daly, JD ’41
Normand D’Amour, JD ’73
Gregg A. Delaporta, JD ’80
Emerson M. Doliber, JD ’42
Joseph A. Fato, BSBA ’58
John H. Forbush, JD ’40
Andrew S. Foxwell, BS ’70, MED ’73
Gary M. Fratto, BS ’75
William J. Galarneaux, JD ’55
John J. Giuliani, Jr., JD ’76
Sandra A. Goldston, BS ’59
Margaret M. Horner, MAE ’55
Lloyd T. Horton, Sr., LLM ’51
Henry R. Howe, MBA ’73
Shirley J. Jackson, BSBA ’76
Stanley Whittred Jarvis, Jr., BA ’51
Charles J. Keller, JD ’50
Richard E. Knowles, JD ’34
Jonathan P. Ladd, BSBA ’68
Thomas J. Lane, JD ’25
Dominic J. Latino, BA ’51

Suffolk University expresses sympathy to the families and friends of these alumni.

Suffolk Magazine 35
Introducing a New Membership Benefit

Suffolk University is pleased to announce a new membership benefit available exclusively to alumni, students and friends of the University... the Suffolk University MasterCard®. As one of the nation’s leading credit card issuers, MBNA America® is renowned for providing superior benefits, backed by peerless service. The Alumni Association worked closely with MBNA to develop a credit card program that fits the unique needs of our alumni and students.

With the Suffolk University MasterCard® you will help support the University with every purchase—at no additional cost to you.

The Suffolk University MasterCard program carries benefits customized for alumni, students and is superior to virtually any bank card available today. The convenience of the MasterCard’s universal acceptance is enhanced by MBNA’s 24-hour, personalized Customer Satisfaction, where you can get a credit line increase decision in 30 minutes or simply check your balance - day or night.

Look for a mailing of complete information about the new MasterCard, including application soon. We encourage you to study the card’s benefits and features as described in the mail piece and apply for the new Suffolk University MasterCard®.

MBNA® and MBNA America® are federally registered service marks of MBNA America Bank, N.A., used pursuant to license. MasterCard® is a federally registered service mark of MasterCard International, Inc., used pursuant to license 1994® MBNA America Bank, N.A.
Of Books and Benefactors
A Family Tradition of Service and Support

Lou and Lucille Peters are related to Suffolk University on both sides of the family. Nearly thirty years ago, Lou and his brothers, Oscar, Ted and Stephen, took over the management of the University's bookstore. Lou's children and their spouses are now continuing a tradition of proficient management and reliable service that spans two generations.

Lucille's connection goes back even further. Her father, Christopher O'Byrne, graduated from the Law School in 1924.

The Peters family continues to own and operate Campus Stores of Massachusetts, which manages the bookstore operations of several Massachusetts and New Hampshire colleges and universities. The family is particularly proud of the operation at Suffolk University. The Bookstore now has expanded quarters in the new Ridgeway Building on Cambridge Street, and offers books, supplies and services to the University community as well as the surrounding neighborhood.

Lou, who served as president of Campus Stores of Massachusetts from 1985 to 1991, has passed the management responsibilities to his children and their spouses. (See photos and captions).

Lou and Lucille have become steadfast supporters of Suffolk University. They contribute most often to scholarship awards for Law School students. In May 1994, Lou and Lucille established an endowed scholarship fund, in memory of his brother, Stephen, who gave twelve years of devoted bookstore service to the Law School. The Peters's will includes a bequest provision that will augment this fund in the future.

Motivated by their parents' example, the next generation also wanted to do something more for Suffolk University. Eric and Joyce Cressman and the other family owners of the company decided this fall to create the Suffolk Bookstore Scholarship Fund, which will provide assistance to evening students. To encourage others to join with them in 'giving back' to Suffolk, they have donated $15,000 as a challenge grant, matching dollar for dollar new and increased gifts from alumni for this fund. "Campus Stores has always been a family business and Suffolk University has always been an important part of Campus Stores' success," Eric explains. "We are very happy to establish this scholarship fund in appreciation for the opportunity to work with and serve Suffolk."