Student Responsibility

A student's responsibility consists of the study necessary to pass certain grades in certain courses. This is an obligation that the student has toward the institution. It is a responsibility that every student faces. Most students also face additional responsibilities such as work for wages, or a job at a price. These responsibilities are external to education, and are a part of the student's life outside of the campus. The student is responsible for understanding the nature of these obligations and making them a part of his life. A student's life is not only a life of intellectual activity, but also a life of personal responsibility. The student must be aware of the responsibilities that he has towards his studies, and towards his personal obligations. The student must also be aware of the responsibilities that he has towards society. The student must be aware of the responsibilities that he has towards his community, and towards his country. The student must be aware of the responsibilities that he has towards himself. The student must be aware of the responsibilities that he has towards his own personal development.

POEM

By Virginia Salford (CJ '47)

The sun may make me a shade
And the moon may make me a shape
But the light of my heart will never fade
And I hope that it will never age.

The sun may make me a shade
And the moon may make me a shape
But the light of my heart will never fade
And I hope that it will never age.

To my friend and former classmate, Mrs. Alice Williams, who has been a teacher at Whitworth College for thirty years, I offer this poem in appreciation of her dedication and commitment to education.
