Recent Decisions
By KENNETH WILLIAMS
Professor of Law, Southwestern University Law School

A lapse of time is apparent in the reading of the following cases. The plaintiff, in two cases, got a recovery on his written promise, although the court held that it was an unenforceable written promise. The defendant in the first case, a person, got a recovery on his written promise, though it was held that it was not an enforceable written promise. In the latter case, the plaintiff's recovery was held to be enforceable, although it was held that the defendant was not liable for the performance of the contract.

In the case of Jones v. Brown, 25 N.E. 2d 52, 73, 121, 59, a written promise was held to be unenforceable, although it was held that the defendant was not liable for the performance of the contract.

In the case of Davis v. Johnson, 25 N.E. 2d 54, 73, 121, 59, a written promise was held to be unenforceable, although it was held that the defendant was not liable for the performance of the contract.

IN CONCLUSION

In none of the cases were the promises enforceable, although it was held that the defendant was not liable for the performance of the contract.

THANKSGIVING DAY

WARNING AND COURAGE

BY H. ALLAN HARRIS

The Lord is good to all. And his tender mercies are over all them that call upon him. The review of last December's coffee and weather statistics reveals the fact that the weather is temperate and mild in all parts. Just be sure to refresh the tender mercies of the Lord with a good deal of gusto.

AMERICAN AND SCOTTISH LIBRARY LINES

By R. J. B. ROSS

When the first of the eight ball team comes in, the reverent atmosphere is filled with the sound of clanging glasses, clinking pins, and the occasional shout of "strike out!" The game is full of excitement, and the spectators are on the edge of their seats. The team's strategy is flawless, and they manage to keep the score low. The final round is a nail-biter, but the home team emerges victorious, much to the delight of the crowd.
