COUNCIL INVESTIGATES CANTEEN
AND BOOKSTORE DIFFicultIES

In the beginning of the school year, the Student Council put out a call for help in raising funds for the school. The students were enthusiastic and eager to contribute. The council began by investigating the canteen and bookstore difficulties. They held meetings and brainstormed ideas on how to improve the situation.

YOU AND THE JOURNAL

The JOURNAL, truly speaking, belongs to you, the student. You help support it through the payment of a yearly student activity fee. The news and staff are for the people who put it out for you.

Enthusiastic feature writers in the JOURNAL have been put in the field because they have the aptitude to find something worthy of being written about. Instead of putting the student in the spotlight, as the editors do, they put the features in the spotlight. Sometimes we can even hear a trumpeter's blast to the section in a news story or feature.

As you read these columns, you see how the editor has put you in the spotlight. All of you are the story. But how much attention you are getting with the features in this column? We are experimenting. We are experimenting on making your name visible, with feature columns, with headwords, column heads. We have not tried for your support to be voted on. We have never asked for your support to be voted on. We have never asked for your support to be voted on. We have never asked for your support to be voted on. We have never asked for your support to be voted on. We have never asked for your support to be voted on.

WHAT NO MID-TERM

So many midterms are optional with the instructor. Here, we can't quite make our mind whether this is good or bad. Whether it makes any difference or if it is necessary to have them is a question to be answered. But to those of you who study only for a midterm, we offer you this tip: Be prepared to study for the next test, not just for the midterm. We want you to read.

Now, we will be trying out something new. We will no longer put the grades in the column. This will give you a chance to see just how the JOURNAL, on that day, will be read from page one to page eight, in the same order as in this page 42.

ABOUT OUR FRESHMEN

Let us see what we can get from this year's freshmen. He is a student more, philosophical, more lazy, in short, and still more to the point. He is also for the greatest part, from our high school, and to the point. He is also for the greatest part, from our high school, and to the point. He is also for the greatest part, from our high school, and to the point.

Interesting to note, the number of freshmen in the graduate study are the same as the number of graduates in the previous class. This year, the number of freshmen in the graduate study are the same as the number of graduates in the previous class. The number of freshmen in the graduate study are the same as the number of graduates in the previous class.

The freshmen are not a different group of students, and the fresh grade is not a new grade. There is no group of students, and the grade is not a new grade. There is no group of students, and the grade is not a new grade. There is no group of students, and the grade is not a new grade.
