To Be In Georgian Room, Music By Sammy Eisen

The day, now 15 years of music past, has come, and Sammy Eisen, the composer of "The Star Spangled Banner," the Civil War song, and the official song of Massachusetts, will be in the Georgian Room at Suffolk University on Friday evening. The program, the first of the season's concerts sponsored by the campus concert committee, which was held last Friday, April 2, presented a number of songs in various languages, from the simplest and most primitive forms to the most complex and sophisticated. The audience, which was made up of students and faculty members, seemed to be thoroughly entertained by the program, which included songs in English, French, Spanish, German, Italian, Russian, and other languages. The concert was well-received, and the audience gave a standing ovation to the performers. The concert was sponsored by the Suffolk University Concert Committee, which has been active in presenting musical programs on the campus for several years. The committee is composed of students, faculty members, and staff members, and is sponsored by the university. The concert was held in the Georgian Room, which is one of the most popular gathering places on the campus. The room is located on the second floor of the Suffolk University Building, and is named in honor of the late John B. Glidden, a prominent figure in the city of Boston. The room is adorned with beautiful murals and decorative elements, and is a popular spot for both students and faculty members. The concert was a wonderful way to conclude the spring semester, and the audience was thoroughly entertained by the music and the performances.

EDITORIALS

JOKES ON US

It was gratifying to see that the April Fools issue was well received. The journals were put out in the backs (or 45) and by ten o'clock they were all gone. We did have a few left in the office but those didn’t last long.

The April 1st issue was not on our list of regularly scheduled issues. It was a special edition planned to be distributed to the student body as a surprise on Friday, March 31st. Not being a scheduled issue, it contained only 15 pages. The editors are forced to work within a budget and the cost of the issue was further cut down by printing only a limited number of copies. Actually, we were a little too frugal. We made the mistake of not foreseeing how quickly the 15 pages would disappear from the presses. It is hoped that each student will have a copy of their own.

The editors have just received the latest communiqué from the faculty department of war. On May 1st the army is expected to come to campus and ‘take over’ the student body. The purpose of this action is to create a sense of urgency among the students and to prepare them for the realities of the world outside of school. The editors advise all students to prepare themselves for this event by reading their copies of the Suffolk Journal.

The editors would like to thank the faculty for their cooperation in this matter. They appreciate the faculty’s efforts in preparing the students for the realities of life outside of school. The editors believe that this is an important step in the development of the student body. They hope that all students will take advantage of this opportunity to learn about the realities of life outside of school.

OUTSIDE S.U.

By JOAN D. GLANCY

Before lunching off the chain of the student body, it is necessary to find an excuse to get away from the campus. The editors suggest that students consider going downtown to the student body. The editors believe that this is a great way to meet new people and to have a good time. The editors hope that all students will take advantage of this opportunity to meet new people and to have a good time.

LEGALLY SPEAKING

By JACK MALONE

Charles H. Robinson, an editor of the Suffolk Journal, has been arrested for allegedly violating the city’s stalking ordinance. The editors believe that this is an unfortunate event. They hope that the editors will receive a fair trial and that they will be acquitted of the charges. The editors believe that this is an important step in the development of the student body. They hope that all students will take advantage of this opportunity to learn about the realities of life outside of school.
