Student Affairs Committee Established by Trustees

A Trustees' Committee on Student Affairs, designed to bring about more effective student participation in the governance of Suffolk University and improve communication, was approved by the Board of Trustees at its February meeting. The action came following a number of student protests on campus and a two-day boycott of classes called by student organizers early in January. Students and trustees held a number of meetings during the winter prior to finalizing the structure of the commit-

St. Maarten Draws 41 Alumni

It was a fun week for the 41 alumni who took advantage of the St. Maarten travel program sponsored by the alumni travel committee. The wide variety of water sports from snorkeling to water skiing or just lazing in the sun was a welcome relief from New England's rainy, damp spring. And, if you had spent a little too much time in the sun, the island offered a variety of alternatives which ranged from shopping to visiting a rum distillery and a seventeenth century fort. Wining, dining, dancing, and gambling in some of the finest restaurants and nightclubs in the Caribbean highlighted the evenings.

If you missed out on the St. Maarten tour, then watch your mailings. The alumni travel committee will announce a number of new tour programs in 1979–1980.

Suffolk University has been selected as a finalist in the Improvement Category of the U.S. Steel Alumni Giving Awards; the selection is based on the achievements of the 1977–1978 Annual Funds.
The College Library

The College Library of Suffolk University contains 90,000 books, 1,100 current periodicals, and a growing number of microfilm, microfiche, and computerized collections. The central library is located in a building which formerly housed the city's power plant. Students enrolled in one of the affiliated institutions may borrow books from any of the others. In addition, the College Library has a cooperative on-line loan service with the Boston Public Library and the Massachusetts State Library.

The downtown location of Suffolk University is a curse and a blessing, a dichotomy reflected in its library. On one hand, the location is central, convenient to its commuting population, and very near important governmental agencies, businesses, and educational and research institutions. The College Library is a member of the Fenway Consortium*, a group of eleven small academic and special libraries in the city of Boston. Students enrolled in one of the affiliated institutions may borrow books from any of the others. In addition, the College Library has exchanged letters of agreement with several downtown special libraries permitting controlled use by Suffolk students. Finally as residents of the city, students have ordinary legal access to the Boston Public Library and the downtown Massachusetts State Library.

On the other hand, there is a very high premium on available space, and its inadequacy is a chronic problem of the school, hampering the operation of every administrative unit. The inadequacy, qualitative and quantitative, of reading space and of book stack space in the library is readily observable.

The library is simply too small for it alone to provide the kind of adequate access for the relatively large clientele involved in a variety of academic programs. Complaints not uncommonly heard are that the library is too crowded and/or noisy to study in, a problem compounded by the fact that there is virtually no choice of study areas in the school. The inadequacy of the collection to gauge since undergraduates tend to make do with books found, generally through a subject search, and not seek specific known items. Such is more demonstrable in the case of periodicals since, once a citation is located in an index, a specific article is requested.

References services took a quantum jump forward last year with the transfer of one full-time position from Technical Processing (thanks to an improved cataloging system) to the Reference Staff, increasing it by nearly fifty percent, and the hiring of bright, young talent. Passive reference service has given way to active, staff-initiated programs of assistance including course-oriented workshops of library instruction and "term paper clinics" for individual students. This year the Reference staff is developing (in cooperation with the English Department) a workbook on the use of the library for freshmen students. A particular emphasis of the Reference Collection is placed upon the availability of indexes, catalogs and descriptions of the most relevant and accessible information resources in the city and beyond. We are trying to foster the ability of students to lay their hands upon the relatively large collection of information in the city and beyond. Cataloging improved dramatically in efficiency and quality with the library's participation in a cooperative on-line computer cataloging system (OCLC) in July, 1977. It is likely that the university's Law Library will join the system soon, an action which should eventually permit the libraries to develop a machine-readable catalog of their combined holdings, a tool which would provide both libraries with an effective collection management tool they now lack. We have found OCLC to be useful for inter-library loan purposes, rudimentary as that mode of retrieval. Such is more demonstrable in the case of periodicals since, once a citation is located in an index, a specific article is requested.

Edward J. Bander has supervised the Law School Library since the Fall of 1979. A native of Boston, Bander holds bachelor of arts and bachelor of law degrees from Boston University and a master of science in library science from Simmons College. During his 14 year association with New York University, he taught legal research, paralegal courses, edited the law school's alumni bulletins and served as associate director of the Law Libraries.

A member of the Massachusetts bar and former librarian at the U.S. Court of Appeals in Boston, he was president of both the New England Law Libraries Association and the Law Librarians Association of New York. Bander is also the author of several books, among which is the recently published Legal Research and Education Abridgement by Ballinger Publishing Co., Cambridge. He also authored Mr. Dooley on the Choice of Law.

Bander, has published a Legal Research and Education Abridgement (1978) which describes legal resources and has a subject guide to legal material.

The legal periodical and newspaper holdings are as fine as a collection as there is in the city of Boston. Some 680 journals are sub­scribed to and 25 to 30 are added each year. There is a listing of the library's holdings posted on the fifth floor which is also available in pamphlet form.

The library also has a growing microform collection which includes the following: the entire first series of the National Reporter System (also in hard copy). The Federal Register and CFR (current year in hard copy); U.S. legislative hearings, reports, and documents since 1974 and major law reviews (also in hard copy). The Law Library Microform Consortium, which is a most ambitious undertaking to miniaturize little used, but valuable primary and secondary material, will make possible the efficient storage and utilization of federal and state material once only available at few libraries in this country.

Alumni are fully privileged to make use of this material and Janet Katz, of the professional staff, maintains a union list of material on microform contained in New England's law libraries. The library has recently installed a detection system which, while it deter­ theft, is more valuable for those who absent-mindedly walk out with library property.

The law library has had LEXIS, a legal computer, for two years. This data bank of some twenty states and the Federal govern­ment can do the following: by a judicious mix of words it can locate cases, statutes, regulations. Once you each time a case has been cited in a partic­ular data bank; it can locate cases some of which have not yet been published in the National Reporter System; and can provide the full text of cases. All the librarians are familiar with its use and can assist the user.

LEXIS is not available to alumni because of the academic arrangement LEXIS makes with law schools, but alumni interested in seeing its function can contact Mr. Bander who will fit them into one of the demonstrations pro­vided for all interested Suffolk Law students.

At this time there is an option to add the New York Times information bank to its computer. This will be handled on a trial basis but there would have to be a $5.00 per minute charge for its use. While this cost appears high, you could, for example, search a complete index in two minutes all the references to the Bakke case from the New York Times, Wall Street Journal, Wall Street Journal and some thirty other publica­tions. Alumni are invited to write to the librarian as to the wisdom of adding this feature to our computer.

Expansion plans call for the library to grow from its present 140,000 volumes to 250,000 volumes with a capability of 1,000,000 vol­umes on microfilm. This will necessitate about 18,000 additional feet of shelving. Finan­cial assistance received from the Annual Law School Fund will help obtain these acquisition goals.

The new facilities will permit the growth of the treatise, international, and comparative law sections. It will include a multi media room, conference rooms, and additional copy­ing facilities.

Also, the law librarian is committed to add a complete tax library that will make available in one area the official reports, loose leaf sets, tax periodicals, tax periodical govern­ment documents, and other material. Present plans call for this tax room to be on the 5th floor adjacent to the microfilm collection of tax legislative histories, the LEXIS tax data bank of reports, U.S. T.C., decisions, and legislative history, and the reference col­lection which contains tax bibliographies.

The law school library is also considering to search out ways to make its facility the best in the country so that students and alumni will have something to work with and be proud of.
Florida Alumni Reception:

Mixing Suffolk University and a vacation were Lillian and Alumni-Trustee Michael Linquata, BSBA'50 of Gloucester, MA. Sharing reminiscences is Salvatore Rapisarda, BS'49, MAEd'52.

Representing the Annual Fund for the Colleges were: Dr. Malcolm H. Gottesman, BS'52, MA'56, Florida Chairman and John E. McDonald, BB RA'73, General Chairman of the Annual Fund.

Tuition Increases

The University will increase its full-time tuition $240 per year for its undergraduate colleges and $360 per year for its law school for the 1979-80 academic year.

The increases in the College of Liberal Arts and College of Business Administration, similar to those voted a year ago, will bring tuition to $2580. Day law school tuition increases from $3120 to $3480. Evening law school tuition will go from $2340 to $2610.

President Thomas A. Fulham said the tuition increases "are necessary to maintain qualitative improvements in our academic programs." Fulham added that "despite the severe impact of inflation, tuition increases were held to reasonable levels, equal to those established last year.

"These comparatively modest increases will impose some budgetary restraints but represent an earnest endeavor on the part of the Board of Trustees to keep tuitions within the capabilities of our students."

Fulham noted that Suffolk University tuition remains one of the most reasonable of any private, four-year college or university in New England. The Board of Trustees also voted to increase the costs of full-time day graduate programs in the Colleges $300 to $2910. The board voted a $21 increase to $234 for a three-credit course in the evening undergraduate division.

Francis X. Flannery, vice president and treasurer of Suffolk University, cited increased costs, including salary adjustments, additional staffing and continued inflation as the principal factors for the overall increases.

Two Alumni Honored at Annual Spring Event

The General Alumni Association's Annual Spring function brought over 150 alumni to the Great Hall at Faneuil Hall Marketplace for cocktails, hors d'oeuvres and dancing. Highlighting the evening was the presentation of two Outstanding Alumnus Awards by President of the General Alumni Association, Joseph A. Saponaro, AB'52. The recipients were John J. Norton, BS'55, and Dr. Arthur J. West, II, BS'51, MA'56.

Mr. Norton, one of the founders and past presidents of the General Alumni Association, has until recently, long been active in the alumni programs and has volunteered countless hours of service to his Alma Mater. Dr. West, also a founding member of the alumni association, was recognized for his professional excellence and for his role as an outstanding educator and administrator. He is chairman of the university's biology department, director of the Cobscook Bay marine science facility in Edmunds, Maine, and has been a member of the faculty for 26 years. The older and younger alumni alike enjoyed the unique atmosphere of the marketplace, the chance to renew old acquaintances, and meet fellow alumni.

Reunions

Reunion events are being planned for the Fall for the College of Liberal Arts & Sciences and the College of Business Administration Classes of 1969 and 1954. If you are interested in participating on the committees, please contact the Alumni Office.

4th Annual Fund Appeal for the Colleges Ends June 30th

"I am most pleased with the end of April statistics on the Annual Fund for the Colleges," said John E. McDonald, BSBA'71. "The progress clearly reflects the determined effort which has been extended by so many fellow alumni volunteers."

"As we enter the final stretch of the campaign, I again appeal to each alumnus who has not yet helped. Our achievable goals will be realized only with their assistance. The university and the students will benefit greatly from your participation."

New Course in Chemistry Offered

Those alumni working in the "Sciences" may be interested in knowing that the chemistry department is offering a new course, Introduction to Toxicology in the spring of 1980.

Introduction to Toxicology will cover such topics as general principles and methodology of toxicology including biological and chemical factors influencing toxicity, methods of testing and data analysis. Examples from the following areas will be discussed: pesticides and herbicides, food additives, teratology, air pollution and carcinogenesis. The course is limited to persons taking for three semester hours of graduate or undergraduate credit. However, there is a course prerequisite, Introductory Biochemistry (or equivalent experience) which will be offered in the Fall of 1979.

For further information, please write or call chemistry department chairperson, Dr. Maria Bonaventura at Suffolk University, (617) 733-4700, Extension 252.
The Annual Alumni Golf Day is scheduled for Monday, June 18. Join in the fun.

abilities are encouraged to attend. Last year the field was comprised of high handicappers, beginners, and low handicap golfers. All details have been mailed to you. Should you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact the Alumni Office (617) 723-4700, Extension 131.

A small group of alumni golfers and members of the Suffolk University Golf Team participated in the first alumni golf weekend held at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina. They spent three fun-filled days at the ocean front Yachtman’s Resort Inn.

The golfers began their golfing holiday at Myrtle Beach National which was designed by Arnold Palmer. On Saturday they played Bay Tree Plantation, a 54-hole layout which has been the site of many major golf tournaments. Sunday, the golfers were found at Raccoon Run, one of the longest courses in the Myrtle Beach area. The enthusiasm and friendship created among these golfers has encouraged the Alumni Office to begin planning another golf vacation for early 1980.

National Mime Week

Celebration Held at Suffolk University Theatre

The Boston Mime Festival took place April 5–8 at Suffolk University Theatre. The four day event started with a showcase evening: “The Beast of the Fest,” featuring the new works of Boston’s premier companies and soloists. Daytime programs included participatory workshops, Master classes, and children matinees. Full evening performances by the major companies highlighted the rest of the week.

The Festival, a first for the city, provided Bostonians with an unprecedented opportunity to be entertained by one of the fastest growing art forms in the country. Performing companies included: Pocket Mime Theatre, Studebaker Mime Theatre, Helium Mime Show, National Mime Theatre with Kenyon Martin, Trent Arterberry, John Collins’ Sunshine Mime, David Zucker, and other soloists.

Congress declared April 1–7 as National Mime Week, Boston, along with twenty major cities across the country, celebrated the week-long event with a festival of exhibitions, performances, and workshops.

The National Mime Week was established in large part due to the efforts of Senator Hayakawa of California and the Mime Guild of Los Angeles. Suffolk University theatre is proud to have been part of this unique national celebration of mime.

Suffolk Joins Public TV Group

Suffolk University has joined the Lowell Institute Cooperative Broadcasting Council, an association of 16 educational and cultural institutions, dedicated to fostering educational broadcasting and telecasting.

The association supports the needs of the WGBH Educational Foundation, operators of public broadcast stations—WGBH Channel 2 and WGBX Channel 44 in Boston, WGBY Channel 57, Springfield and WGBH Radio in Boston. In 1977, the Council contributions totaled $267,000 or about 4% of the station’s unrestricted funds.

“We are delighted to participate with the most distinguished public service broadcasting organization in the country,” Suffolk President Thomas A. Fulham said.

In addition to University membership in the association, Fulham becomes a member ex-officio of the Board of Trustees of the WGBH Educational Foundation along with the chief executive officer of the other 15 institutions of higher learning or culture, the president of WGBH and eight other trustees.

Other member institutions are Boston College, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Boston University, Brandeis, Harvard, Lowell Institute, MIT, Museum of Fine Arts, Museum of Science, New England Conservatory of Music, Northeastern, Simmons, Tufts, Univ. of Mass. and Wellesley.

John Griffin, DSC’52, long recognized as the Father of the College of Business Administration and Graduate School of Administration, was honored as an Outstanding Alumnus at the first annual MBA/MPA Alumni Association Dinner-dance on April 27 at the Hanscom Airforce Base Officers’ Club in Bedford. Mr. Griffin has served on Suffolk University’s Board of Trustees for over forty-one years, the last twenty-one years of which have been spent as Secretary of the University.

All thoroughly enjoyed the witty discussions of political commentator Dick Flavin, who served as guest speaker at the dinner.

Adding to the enjoyment of the evening was the music provided by “Sounds Unlimited,” a five-piece band with a female vocalist.

As a result of questionnaires and follow-up calls, 82% of the Class of 1978 were contacted for job statistics. Of the 401 respondents, 334 are employed, 39 indicate they are seeking employment, and 8 indicate that they are not actively seeking employment. Of the 354 members employed, 133 are in private practice—large, medium, and small firms; 15 are employed in non-legal interest work; 27 are in industry, either in legally related or non-legally related work; 89 are in government employment—federal and state; 29 hold judicial clerkships; four are serving in the armed forces as Judge Advocates; and 25 are in the academic field, either teaching or engaged in post graduate work.

Of interest is the geographic spread of the graduates. Massachusetts, as expected, accounts for an overwhelming 252 of those responding. In addition to the remaining New England states, the 1978 graduates are employed in New York, Washington, DC, California, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Arizona, Louisiana, North Carolina, Illinois, Louisiana, Ohio, Nevada, and Oregon.
