MORE UNIVERSITY EXPANSION

1972

During the summer, the College of Business Administration was offered the opportunity of moving into new quarters. The university has negotiated to purchase two buildings on Mount Vernon Street. These buildings formerly housed the New England School of Law and should not be confused with the Wright & Potter building which was purchased last spring—the University will not occupy that building for at least a year and

A cornerstone in the history of Suffolk University was laid today for its future growth and development with the acquisition of adjacent property.

Purchased by the University after negotiations which began in May of this year were the 120-year-old First Methodist Church and the Temple Housing from numbers 35-41 Temple Street.

Sellers were the First Methodist Episcopal Society in Boston and the Beacon Hill Community

Southwestern Building Trust, which owns each of the buildings.

Recently

The University moved a step closer to occupancy of the Wright & Potter Building at 32 Dene Street with the December 29 passing of papers making Suffolk the owner of the property. Papers were signed in the President's Conference Room.

Present for the signing were Vice President and Treasurer Francis X. Flannery and Albert W. Rockwood, president of Wyman Trust, the owner of the property, Atty. William K. Mackey, counsel for Wyman Trust, and Kenneth A. Korb, counsel for the university.

Vice President Flannery expressed hope that the University might be able to occupy the building by the end of the year to begin renovations. Under terms of the agreement, the Wright & Potter printing firm holds an extended lease, and the university will not move into the five-story structure until

EDUCATION:

The Crossroad of Ideas

Suffolk is a community of diversities, a pattern of opposites, a melting pot of differences. Yet running through this many-faceted fabric is the single unifying thread: common spirit wrought from struggle and determination. The Beacon, 1975, is a representation of this idea. We would like to dedicate this book to the process of education, the process of self-awareness, social-awareness, national-awareness, international-awareness, . . . universal awareness.

*no man is an island, entire of it self; every man is a piece of the Continent a part of the main ... ;
any man's death diminishes me, because I am involved in Mankind ...*

— John Donne

TRANSITION

Suffolk University, founded by Gleason Archer, began as a Law School in 1906 in Archer's Roxbury flat. The University grew out of the Law School, then in the Archer building, in 1936 with the establishment of the Journalism department and was chartered as an established institution in 1937 as a college of Liberal Arts, a graduate school of Law, a college of Journalism, and a college of Business Administration. By 1953 the university was fully accredited.

The Suffolk community has increased in size acquiring more buildings and many more students. We have climbed the Hill for one to four years coming from Boston, its suburbs, from within and from outside of Massachusetts. And perhaps at some point we've thought of hanging up the time spent here, where skipping class to play cards, to catch up on sleep, to study for a forthcoming quiz or just to satisfy that lethargic feeling would become a permanent absence instead of a sudden decision for one day. But for some reason we came back for more of the routine — the schedule of classes, that early cup of coffee to stimulate the desire to attend them, waiting in the cafe, the lounge or the library filling time before going to work, catching the crowded trains home or stamping a ticket for that discount at the parking garage and trying to beat the rush hour traffic. What was this common spirit and its purpose?

1. The process or the result of educating; the systematic development and cultivation of the normal powers of intellect, feeling, and conduct, so as to render them efficient in some particular form of living or for life in general.

Education, as understood today, connotes all those processes cultivated by a given society as means for the realization in the individual of the ideas of the community as a whole ... It includes not only the narrow concept of instruction, but embraces all forms of the human experience, owing to the recognition of the fact that every stimulus with its corresponding reaction has a definite effect upon character.

2. Training resulting from the pursuit of a complete course in an institution of learning ... Education for efficiency; the training of every citizen, individually and socially, in such a way as to obtain the greatest measure of fitness for life in each member of a group of society, as well as in such a society as a whole.

Every genius is the product of enthusiasm.

In each of us there is a need to fulfill a definite and basic sense of belonging, of attaining a goal, of being secure. Suffolk, in the years we've attended, has given us that security — a breather from the strongly competitive business aspect. It has given us time and a chance to think and develop ideas, where we have competed, not as much with each other as with ourselves for the attainment of a self-fulfillment.

I am as young as tomorrow.

This yearbook explores one year, 1975, which epitomizes the other years of development. There pictures represent the memories that stand out in our minds. "But only in realizing the good and the bad that has gone before can I become what I must be in the days ahead."

And with every encounter, every smile we gave and took, with the discussions – good, bad or indifferent – with the friends and acquaintances that we have made maybe we can look back and say that it was worth it. What we have learned here transcends the technology found in text books; it is a part of living that no one can take away from us. An experience, social and academic, is found in the memories of what we did.

MESSAGE FOR YEARBOOK - 1975

In this day when the validity of higher education is being questioned as a necessity for lifetime occupation, it is well to remember that employment alone should not be the sole benefit to the individual from the educational process. The ability to investigate intelligently the social and ecological environments in which we live, the opportunity to enjoy and profit from the wisdom of the ages as recorded in the libraries of the world, and the insight to seek enjoyment from within, are more enduring than occupational advancement.

I do hope that the Class of 1975 will seek continuously to enrich itself through either formal or informal educational processes in order to enjoy the peace and freedom that knowledge and understanding can impart.

June 6, 1975

Dear Members of the Class of 1975:

During your stay at Suffolk, the faculty, the administration and other students have provided a social and academic setting designed to establish a foundation for learning. It is only a foundation that must be built upon by each individual student for the remainder of life.

but the fruit is sweet." ARISTOTLE

"The Department of Student Activities is committed to the 'total development' of the individual student. All activities of the Department are geared to encourage and facilitate this development. The Department plays, therefore, an important educative role within the University." (The Log) As Director of Student Activities Jim Peterson accepted many responsibilities; a liason between administration and students, coordinator of events, director of clubs and organizations, and much more. His position, an important one at Suffolk, demanded time and efficiency. On behalf of the students, the Beacon wishes to express our deepest appreciation to Jim for his past four years of devotion and dedication.

Admission to the Gold Key Society is by no means easily gained by all busy students, nor by all friendly students, nor by all helpful students. To qualify for the honor, one must exemplify a rigid set of standards which includes not only scholarship and leadership, but also such intangibles as attitude, responsibility, integrity and devotion to the principals for which Suffolk University stands. The Society looks for a worker--the worker who will not only help when asked, but will take the initiative without being asked.

SUFFOLK UNIVERSITY 1974-75 RAMS

Suffolk's battling basketball team has completed the most successful season in the school's history leaving behind it a flock of stirring memories. The never-quit Rams, runnerup to Brandeis University in the NCAA Division III Northeast Tournament, finished with a 19-7 record, most victories ever for a Suffolk team, and the first winning season for Suffolk in seven years.

But more important, the 1974-75 Rams caught the imagination of their followers more than any previous Suffolk team. Some 300 fans, including faculty, administration and students turned out for each of Suffolk's two games in the tournament at Brandeis.

CROSS COUNTRY

The cross country team began four years ago competing in approximately four races. Each year the team has grown to the effect that the members now compete in nine races and four invitationals. Jeff Strungis, captain of the team, has been a running member since the team's existence. According to Coach Nelson, "Jeff has personified the cross country athlete which is evidenced by his receiving the school's student athlete award. More cross country runners have been dean's list students than any other athletic team."

Disenchanted with the aftermath of the Nixon era and the administrators involved in the Watergate scandal, students voiced opposition toward the possible appearance of John Dean as a guest speaker. However, when a vote was taken, the majority of students agreed with the SGA position that those unwilling to accept Dean don't have to come. And the decision was made . . .

Fulham Flannery Mentioned

by Mark C. Rogers

At the public hearing on House Bill 5421 the Trustee Bill many accusations were made against President Thomas Fulham and Vice President and Treasurer Francis X. Flannery. The charges ranged from voting themselves into their respective jobs to lying to students about the deadline for making nominations for the Board of Trustees.

When told about the allegations and asked if he would like to respond to them, Mr. Flannery said, "I don't think they are worthy of comment. Just that there were many inaccuracies in that story (the story concerning the hearing published in the early afternoon edition of the Boston Globe on Tuesday).

Flannery was just as unwilling to comment on what he thought the errors were saying," I wouldn't want to get into a battle with the likes of Mr. O'Donnell."

President Fulham was more willing to answer the allegation made against him and the rest of the Board, "As far as the charge of nepotism and cronyism, there is just no way to take that up. Usually problems of that nature are individuals."

The one point of the article that Fulham did agree with was the fact which could open doors for state intervention in other institutions.

Fulham stated that the suspension of trustee John P. Chase by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission was a misleading statement. He explained that Chase was suspended from "association with any investment advisors for a period of 30 days. This is a very, very mild slap on the wrist." Fulham said, "As I heard one judiciary say, it's like having a who have honorary degrees and that "They forgot to mention that that was over a period of 30 years and no one votes to cite himself, that's ridiculous."

According to Fulham, the same thing holds true for he and Vice President Flannery. "The Vice President was not elected by himself. They always abstain from a vote like that. I was in Mr. Flannery's office when I was O'Donnell cited Suffolk's Vice President-Treasurer Francis Flannery as an example of the "self-perpetuating" system, stating that he entered the University as a bookkeeper less than 10 years ago and one year later was earning $12,000. He currently nets $47,000 per year.

Next he reviewed the case of Trustee John P. Chase. He said it was reported in the April 1, 1975 issue of the Wall St. Journal that Chase had been suspended from
