WHO'S WHO NAMES 15 S. U. SENIORS

Rams Surge, Win Opener

"Teamwork" Beats MIT In First Thriller

by LOU CONNELLY

Springing the biggest upset in the University's sports history, Suffolk's Rams launched their 1955-56 basketball season with crashing success as they thumped highly-favored MIT 71-37 at the Tech Field House.

Outmanned, outbreathed, and outfield goalied, the Rams were never outplayed in staging the New England hoop season's first surprise.

Leading throughout, the Rams held off an MIT threat midway through the last half that cut the Suffolk margin to 41-40, and roared away to a large lead.

Templey Won

The victory was described afterwards as "strictly a team effort" as pacemaker Art Meliace (39), Eddy Moore (15), George Doucet (11), Roger Alley (11), and freshman Paul White (11) all hit the double digit column.

Surrendering several inches in height, the Rams nevertheless completely dominated the backboards with spindly Eddy Moore and the graceful Archie Meliace hogging rebounds from their larger rivals.

N. E. Life Lauds C. B. A. Student

Michael T. Breen, CBA '55, has already gained distinction on a nation-wide basis.

Breen recently completed an intensive two-week course of training with the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company. The course covered the latest developments in the application of life insurance to estate and family protection problems.

The distinction is that he was the only man from the home office who participated in the program. The other 29 men represented agencies from New Hampshire to Hawaii. These men qualified on the basis of their outstanding field records.

The official title of the course is the Career Underwriters' Training School, according to Ann Hengst of New England Life.

GREETINGS

Warm greetings to all for a Merry Christmas and a successful New Year from the Trustees, Faculty, Alumni, and Staff of Suffolk University.

Business Grad Tests Sated

The Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business, required for entrance by a number of graduate business schools or divisions throughout the country, will be offered on three dates during the coming year, according to Educational Testing Service, which prepares and administers the test. During 1955, many students took the test in partial satisfaction of admission requirements of graduate business schools which prescribed it. Among these institutions are the graduate business schools or divisions of the following universities:

Technology
Columbia University
Harvard University
Massachusetts Institute of Technology
Northwestern University
Rutgers University
Seton Hall University
Syracuse University
University of Chicago
University of Michigan
University of Pennsylvania
Washington University
(St. Louis)

A candidate must make separate application for admission to each business school of his choice and should inquire of each whether it wishes him to take the Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business and when. Since many business schools select their entering classes in the spring preceding their entrance, candidates for admission to the 1956 classes are advised to offer the February test, if possible.

The tests will be administered on February 2, April 14, and August 18 in 1956. Applications and fees must be filed with the Educational Testing Service, 29 Nassau Street, Princeton, New Jersey, at least two weeks before the testing date desired in order to allow ETS time to complete the necessary testing arrangements.

The Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business is not designed to test specific knowledge in specialized academic subjects. Normal undergraduate training should provide sufficient general knowledge to answer the test questions. Sample questions and information regarding registration for and administration of the test are given in a Bulletin of Information.

COLLEGE DIRECTORY LISTS TOP STUDENTS

Six girls are among the fifteen seniors who will be listed in the 1955-56 edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

The "Who's Who" book is the official annual directory of distinguished students selected from over 600 colleges and universities throughout America.

Prof. John V. Colburn, Director of Student Affairs, approved the nominations, which were submitted by the Suffolk University Who's Who Committee.

The Committee was composed of seniors Allen K. Fischer, Dick Jones, and Barbara Tamoshunas. Juniors on the committee were Lou Connelly and Tom Dolan.

"Who's Who" is designed to render the following services:

1. As a goal to inspire greater effort in those who may not otherwise perform to the best of their ability.

2. As a reminder that time must be used intelligently to bring the best results from college experience.

3. As a means of compensation for outstanding effort and achievement.

4. As a standard of measurement for students comparable to other recognized scholastic and service organizations.

After careful consideration as to scholastic and extracurricular contributions, the following seniors were named:

Marie Beatrice, A.B., 26 Avalon St. Revere.

Peter Beatrice, A.B., 183 Gladstone St. East Boston.

Norman High, A.B., 222 Rosindale Ave. Rosindale.

Carmelina Carnicelli, B.S., 48 Payne St. Quincy.

Thomas DeCourcy, A.B., 30 Spring Park Ave. Boston.

Virginia Degutis, B.S., 34 Russwin Rd. New Britain, Conn.

Joseph Esdra, B.S. in B.A., 60 Newbury St., Somerville.

Connie Flachiella, B.S. in B.A., 25 Albion St. Methuen.

Philip Iuliano, A.B., 187 Chapman St. Watertown.

Raymond Johnson, B.S. in B.A., 5 Wabeno St. Boston.

Stephen Juba, A.B., 113 Cambridge St. Lawrence.

Joseph Letourney, B.S., 239 Broadway, Boston.

Barbara Tamoshunas, A.B., 189 River St. Waltham.

Marie Whalen, A.B., 234 Mountaint Ave. Arlington.

Each of the new "Who's Who" members will receive a certificate from the organization.

On Recognition Day, which will be held next May, Suffolk University will formally present the certificates.

In addition to the educational prestige, "Who's Who" sponsors a student placement bureau.

PSYCH HEAD HELPS SOLVE PROBLEM

In addition to his duties as Guidance Director, and head of the psychology department, Dr. Leo Lieberman has an important job.

He treats alcoholics.

One of his major activities as Consulting Psychologist for the Boston Committee on Alcoholism is aiding in the group's weekly program on Consultation, Guidance, and Group Therapy concerning problem drinkers in business and industry.

Directing the Committee's program on problem drinkers is Dr. David Landau, psychiatric lecturer at Tufts Medical School, and like Dr. Lieberman, a staff member of the N.E. Medical Center.

Governor Approves

Gov. Christian A. Breyer gave his wholehearted approval to the work of the committee at a recent conference. The governor's approval was based on the organization's record of achievement and their message, the "Boston Committee on Alcoholism is organized to help any human being in trouble with alcohol without charge or obligation."

The weekly meeting, which Dr. Lieberman helps direct voluntarily, is held at the Committee's offices, 419 Boylston St., every Tuesday at 7:15 p.m. Many of the drinkers attending these meetings are referred to the Committee by their personnel managers, foremen, company doctors or union leaders, after considerable absenteeism, accidents, sinking morale or lowered efficiency.

Equal Treatment

Several of the firms whose employees attend these meetings pay for the help their workers receive—others do not. "But," says Dr. Lieberman, "all workers are treated with the same quality of understanding and guidance techniques."

Program Growing

"Because the sessions have been overflowing the committee

All-Americans All

If we are true Americans, we are concerned not only with our own great country, but also with the rest of the world. Americans have always represented the ultimate in the Plan of man.

True, we have our share of shabby rabble rousers, but they are not representative Americans. They are weak.

Americans, as all peoples, love freedom. Unlike other peoples, Americans have fought for and won a type of freedom which must have been divinely planned. Many nations, centuries older than America, are still fighting for the freedom we represent.

Five years after the "war to end all wars," World War II, American boys found themselves fighting for their Korean brothers in a fight for freedom. Thousands of modern knights died for that principle — Freedom.

The results of the last fight might not be clear, but a principle was won. The principle that ALL men shall have the right to exist in a free world, uninhibited and not influenced by any silent monster.

America has become the smiling, good-natured "big brother" of the world. When he sees his "little brothers" being stepped on, he does the family thing — he first tries to gently break it up. If the first try doesn't succeed, he tries again — only harder.

As Americans, we are all a part of these tries to relieve our oppressed brethren. If diplomacy doesn't solve a problem, a war usually will. We can fight like no others in the world — if we want to. But that isn't the American way to solve world problems.

The Communist ogre simmering the world today must be stopped. We don't know the average age of this type of ogre, so we can't say gently, "Let it peter itself out."

Our freedomless brothers throughout the world are watching us. They are as vigilant in watching us as we are in trying to stamp down the ogre. Their internal problems are dwarfed by their concern for us.

As a likable "big brother," we can't let them down.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

(All letters submitted to the editor for publication must be signed.)

Dear Editor:

Christmas, December 25th. There is nothing startling about this statement. Christ has happened every year at this time. The spirit of giving, the extra friendly feeling, the renewed feelings of good will among nations are all certain to be voiced at this time. Why can't we practice the Christmas spirit 365 days a year?

Everybody has a good word to say about everybody else during the Christmas season.

Communist dominated countries and the free world exchange Christmas greetings, temporarily forgetting their differences.

Relatives, sometimes miles apart geographically, bring their families together and exchange gifts, good feelings, and the Christmas spirit.

Neighbors, forgetting the broken window by Junior or the fence that was built on the wrong side of the line with each other Merry Christmas and success for the coming new year.

Homes, town squares, stores, churches, homes, aglow with Christmas decorations.

Beautiful music is heard all the way from exclusive Longfellow Square to tiny hamlets such as Truro on Cape Cod.

Everywhere the world seems friendly. But, what happens after Christmas?

Communist nations, the free world, relatives, families, neighbors are at each other's throats again. Old feuds are renewed. Old and new threats are made.

Homes, town squares, stores, churches, homes, aglow with Christmas decorations and resume an ordinary everyday look.

The only music that is heard is the sound of a collision between a truck loaded with empty milk cans and a truck loaded with chickens on their way to the market.

The world becomes an horrible mess. So how about the Christmas spirit 365 days in a year? The world would be a lot better.

— Alan Campbell

Dear Editor:

In the October issue of the Suffolk Journal you stated that I said, "Juda emphasized that the society, Phi Beta Chi, is not limited to students of these departments, Physics, Biology, and Chemistry, and invites all Science students to participate in its activities."

I should like to bring to your attention that Phi Beta Chi is limited only to students of the natural and physical sciences, furthermore, it is limited to honor students and students are elected into membership or considered for membership only after they have completed the first semester of their Junior year and have obtained honor grades.

This fraternity is in the process of offering a prize which will be given to a student in

"Legal" Cases Battled In Weekly Moot Court

By ANDREW COBURN, JR.

It is an interesting experience to witness Suffolk law students receiving their legal training not only in theory but in practical experience, namely, moot court sessions. Every Thursday at 2 p.m. and again at 8 p.m. during the first semester, you may attend a session of the Law School's Moot Court in room 26, under the supervision of Professor Walter F. Lewis, a very able trial lawyer of the Massachusetts Bar.

Realistic Air

Here you will hear two attorneys try a case before a presiding judge, a clerk, sheriffs, and spectators. The equipment and procedure is quite similar to what you would find in the Suffolk County Courthouse. One person acts as plaintiff's attorney and the other serves as defense counsel in a criminal or civil case.

If you decide at the start, you will hear each one make an opening statement of what he expects to prove. Witnesses will be put on the stand to testify. Frequently you will hear cross-examinations of the opponent's witnesses, and often opposing counsel objecting to the admission of testimony as a violation of some rule of law taught in the course called Evidence. The judge must rule on each such point as well as render a decision at the end of the case. Each counsel will give a closing argument to the court or jury.

Experience Gained

From observing this activity you will realize that this is what is called a true court, and that the purpose is to give each senior a practical laboratory in which to gain experience before his admission to the bar. The seniors prepare all court papers used in the case, following the forms used in the Massachusetts courts. In this way the court serves also as a laboratory for the Law School's course called Practice and Procedure.

Cases Vary

You may enjoy the spirited presentation of an automobile injury suit, or an exciting contest of a will, or an excellent defense in a criminal prosecution.

For the law seniors, however, the most valuable part of the experience begins after the decision. Then the class listens attentively to the kindly but competent suggestions of the trial judge, Professor Lewis.

Judge Decides

Professor Lewis explains the errors made and the proper application of the rules involved. He listens to the many questions asked, and answers them courteously. He frequently makes a point clear in a humorous anecdote from one of the hundreds of courtroom sessions he has attended.

In the field of Science for accomplishment which will be measured in a way to be determined at a future date. There will be an announcement of the method by and for which the prize will be awarded.

Library Asks Silent Rule

By FRANCIS X. DURHAM

As "caretaker" for over 13,000 books, the Director of Libraries is ably assisted by two full time librarians and five student clerks.

Dr. Edward G. Hartmann, the Director, is aided by Miss Patricia Brown and Mr. Patrick Lane, who supervise student help in handling the library's more than 23,000 law volumes and over 20,000 college department books.

More Books

First year law students Norman Bligh, Phil Iuliano, and Jim Regan, working with Jack McCreary and Joe Blanchette of the university, complete the staff.

Increased enrollment has meant increased circulation of books and increased activity in the library. Although pleased with the students' interest, the library staff has confronted a minor problem.

The problem is that of trying to keep the library quiet for studying. Increased circulation of books has, for some reason, meant increased talking. Fidgeting students, through either hushed whispers or quiet talking, disturb diligent students and generally upset the study decorum.

Serious Benefit

Dr. Hartmann reminds us the library functions to serve all students, and when a member of the library staff requests silence, it is for the benefit of those engaged in serious study.

A free manual which explains the functions and regulations of the library is available at the circulating desk. Methods of locating specific books are among interesting data included in the manual.

Students Work

Duties of the student clerks are varied. Their main job is to maintain the circulation desk. Other duties include returning books to the stacks, and once a year, cleaning every book in the library.

Student workers are on duty every day and night, except Saturday, when the library closes at five o'clock.

Thank you very much for bringing this to the attention of the student body.

(You're welcome—Ed.)

by LOU CONNELLEY, Sports Editor

It's still only in the talking stage, but don't discount the possibility of pay-as-you-see television becoming a reality in the near future.

For months the public has read about the chances of television baseball stepping into the token bracket, charging for entertainment.

The latest bit of news concerning the idea has the Federal Communications Commission ready to make the momentous decision after the 1966 baseball season. At least concerning base ball and sports in general.

If the plan went through, it would mean that the video viewer would have his television equipped with the coin charge. New sets would, in all probability, come with the gadget already installed.

Representatives of the film industry, television, and sports world have discussed the pros and cons of the subject—some showing a distaste for the proposition, others highly in favor of it.

Pros And Cons

Estimates of 50 cents to a dollar have been given as the charge for watching one ball game, extravaganza, movie, or such. At the end of a certain period, a service man would collect the toll from the coin box.

Let's suppose this toll television goes through. What will happen? To this writer, it might show an interesting paradox. Some of the boys who are dollar-conscious might say, "To blazes with them, I'll go without!"

Others, maybe a bit peevish, will still be reluctant in complying with the FCC, might group together in one home and chip in for the tab.

Of course there will be folks who will have the money, won't mind paying for the commodity and will buy their entertainment at any cost.

Bars Happy

Actually, the men who will be cooing coily will be the gents who run the neighborhood pubs. Imagine the disharmony in the home when the man of the household decides he'll venture to the bucket of Suds to watch the fight or game. The little man immediately protests vigorously.

Well, you don't think I'm gonna pay to watch TV do you? he'll retort.

But imagine the smile on Joe the Bartender as his cozy little cafe is regenerating with cheers and beers as a sellout crowd fills the tavern all for a half a buck too. Joe. Why this pay-as-you-see TV's the greatest!

The buyers? Well they can philosophize that they have to pay a price at home, and might as well see it at Joe's Place, and enjoy his fine brew for what they'd pay on television. Sure, and the night walk in the air is good for them.

Now watch the FCC find a loophole to sneak through this hypothesis.

RAMS RAVINGS Suffolk students showing an interest in the basketball team have asked where the Rams are playing their home games. The team plays only four home games, and the contests are booked for the Cambridge YMCA, which is located just beyond Central Square on Main Street. The gym is a newly-constructed court and is the best home floor the Suffolk hoopers have had to date.

The team is hoping that interest will be high when it meets at Manchester, N. H. to meet St. Anselm's and to Worcester where Worcester Tech plays host. That's when the boys will want support most, a crowd of miles from home.

All-Americans All STUDENT GETS DICKENS (A Sort Of Christmas Story)

by DICK ROSS

Rosseford sat behind his cluttered desk in the cold faculty room, scanning mid-term exams. As the lights went on he jerked himself up and stared glassily at a human form approaching him. He didn't believe his eyes so he removed his glasses and blinked in astonishment.

It was a student.

"What are you doing here?" demanded Rosseford, who was now fully awake. "I told you Redlog, that I wouldn't have you mid-term grade for you until after the vacation."

"Ksok, Professor Rosseford, and then I want to get ready for tomorrow's festivities with the Auburn Society. There's a stray black-billed 'Cuckanuary in the Blue Hills and I'm going to camp there tonight. I think I know where I'll find him in the morning."

"Close the window before you read," Rosseford stoically walked toward the window, thinking of spending another night with the Common reindeer. The wind of multi-toned bells swept through the cold air. The music came from the church supplies store on the street. "Silent Night" was heard above the noisy trills of the ordinary State House sparrows.

"What's that noise?" asked Professor Rosseford. "Silent Night," a Christmas hymn, replied Redlog. "I haven't heard it played that well since I attended the University of Ideogama," said the professor, as he wiped his eyes and asked Redlog to keep the window open.

"It's not you, Redlog. It's the music," he explained. "As Professor Rosseford sat comfortably back in his chair, Redlog stood amazed at the sight of his professor with teary eyes, listening to the series of Christmas hymns.

After a full fifteen minutes the professor wiped his eyes and looked straight ahead. "You sit here?"

"I'm sorry sir, but I was thinking."

"How, and of what?" asked the now composed professor.

"I have an Auburn bird whistle at home, and if you don't mind, I'd like to go with you looking for that black-billed Cuckanuary tomorrow."

Professor Rosseford looked straight into Redlog's eyes.

"I thought your parents were keeping you out of the house. How can you get your bird whistle if that's true?"

"Professor, if you could come?" stuttered Redlog.

"All right, Redlog, I had just completed my fourth reexamination on your exam, anyway. Let's go bird-watching. I'll carry your exam book along and give it to your parents, myself."

Mr. and Mrs. Redlog were pleased at the professor's presence, and they talked longingly of their son, who was upstairs taking a bath in Solfax. Professor Rosseford accepted their offer to spend Christmas with them.

Your son and I are still going to spend tonight camping in the Blue Hills, as you have agreed, and immediately after

S. U. GERMAN CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

Election of officers and a Christmas party are the latest interesting items to come from the German Club.

After a program of modern, popular German music, which was enthusiastically received, officers were elected on November 30th in the Dean's Office.

Dr. Stanley M. Vogel, Associate Professor of German and English, and club advisor, held a Christmas Party for the group at his Mt. Vernon street apartment.

The club plans to meet once a week on alternating Mondays and Wednesdays at 2 p.m. in the Dean's Office.

Officers elected were:
CHAIRMAN
Sheldon Wild

Treasurer
Richard Kenney
Basel MacLeod

SECRETARY
Arnie Young

Arnie Young offers the following holiday greetings:

we have spotted the black-billed 'Cuckanuary. We will return for your kind hospitality," said the professor, as young Redlog entered the room wearing fresh clothes, carrying a sleeping bag and smelling of Solfax.

As professor and student strode from the house, toward the bus stop, Mr. Redlog yelled, "Professor, my son's mid-term grade?"

"Oh, wait a minute, Redlog. I'll dash back and give the exam book to your dad."

"Thank you, professor," said Mr. Redlog, as he watched the two figures race for an approaching bus.

Mr. Redlog brought his wife another sedative in the early morning, while miles away a professor and his student sat on the cold hard ground, also unable to sleep.

I can't believe it, a D for his grade," sobbed Mrs. Redlog for her taunt-faced husband who mumbled something about 'he should be back.'

INSIDE S. U.

By MARIAN STONE &
BARBARA TAMOSHUNAS

We want to start off by wishing you all a very Merry Christmas and a happy Happy New Year.

Santa isn't the only man with a bag. Many of our Suffolk boys are helping him by working in various post offices during the Christmas rush.

Speaking of Santa Claus, he will visit S.U. this Thursday afternoon, Dec. 15, under the auspices of the Education Club. Faculty members have been invited to bring their children for a visit with Santa to the person of Bart Gerzetti in the President's Office. Santa will distribute gifts to the children.

Mrs. Marie M. Strain, Instructor in Education, told us there will be story-telling, skits, suitable decorations, and refreshments to make the night a memorable one for everybody.

Psych Party

President Robert J. Munce was host at the Psychology Club's annual Christmas party held last Thursday night in the President's Office. Psych Club president Jack LeMay said the success of the party was attributed to renewed interest in the popular club.

What did you think of the recent freshman dance posters? We thought they were very attractive. The best in years.

Alas, Alas!

Since Pat Brown graduated, the girls' Alas Club seems to have gone out of existence. What say girls, should we reorganize?

The Girls' Lounge is about to have a face lifting job. When the new furniture and drapes are installed we must recognize the place. We'll have to invite you boys in for a housewarming when the lounge is fixed up. Alice Shee and Helen Aronson, those gracious hostesses, will be there to greet you all as they're more familiar with the lounge than most of the girls.

WASU Plans

WASU is making big plans for this annual Christmas party. It's to be held in the President's office on Thursday, December 15 from 11:00 on. Santa Claus is going to drop in for a visit. The party is open to all. Bring means and gifts after 11:00. By the way, anyone interested in dishwashing, please apply. How about it Bob Stewart, Joe Cushing, and Charles McKenney?

Seniors Dance

The Seniors' Thanksgiving dance at the Park Inn on November 23 was as always, a huge success. Ginny Degutis, Suffolk's "Miss Nightingale," sang one of Sigmund Romberg's melodies from the Student Prince. It was quite entertaining. We quizzed a few students to get their reactions to the dance:

Robert Doby, Jr.: "I spent most of my time having an intellectual discussion with the girls. We talked about our Thanksgiving turkey."

Norman King: "I thought all the girls looked beautiful in their dresses."

Tom Dolan: "I thought the crowd was a very friendly one and everyone seemed to be enjoying himself."

WORKING SCIENTISTS

Three '55 Science graduates are cited in the current "Chemical and Engineering News," a national science periodical.

Paul Taylor, who is a graduate student and Assistant in the physical chemistry department at the University of Massachusetts.

Edward Roach, now a graduate student and Assistant teaching inorganic chemistry at the University of Chicago.

John Morley, Jr. who accepted a specialist's position at the electronics laboratory of Ionics, Inc. in Cambridge.

Rams Surge

MIT's sole offense came from its giant center, Dimitry Vergun, who was outstanding for the losers, caging 27 points Out-side of Vergun, Suffolk shifted MIT shooters.

The Rams' Dart Mitt's zone defense pounce enough to squirt through many outside shots in the first MIT and took great advantage of free throw tries.

It was at the foul line that the Rams nipped the victory, swishing 33 out of a possible 42. Mellace alone, dropped in 11 of 13.

Living up to pre-season billing, Mellace was immense, stealing the ball, controlling the boards, and getting the key baskets for the Lawmen.

Achie's total of 19 points, high for the victors, consisted of four hoops and 11 foul shots.

The Rams appeared the much smoother ball club, breaking the game open late in the second half when the Technicians tried an all court press, which backfired disastrously. Guard Paul White and Mellace cracked it by dribbling around their men and dropping passes into mates' hands for clinching hoops.

Lead at Half

Maintaining a 12 to eight point lead through the first half and leading at intermission 34, 26, Suffolk bogged slightly at the ten-minute mark of the second half as the home team came to life. Then, ten, and finally a single point. Here George Doucet, Moore, and Mellace tipped in hoops to stretch the lead.

Phenomenal foot-shooting by the Rams dashed Tech's hopes from there on, and in the last TIMES HAVE CHANGED FOR veteran Marine combat photographer Henry McMahon. The 31 year old Cambridge resident is currently attending evening classes as he "waits out" his 4th year of service.

Dr. Lieberman

One's four offices, it is evident that many employees feel that they are adapting toward recovery and regaining normal, happy lives, both on the job and at home.

"It is obvious that the Boston Committee on Alcoholism, which has led 6000 alcoholics toward recovery in the past few years, is a vital community health unit. It depends almost entirely upon public financial support."

The psychological evaluation and treatment procedures directed by Dr. Lieberman have been used to train some of Suffolk's advanced Psychology students at the clinic.

As a result of this training one S.U. graduate received a scholarship to study alcoholism at Yale University. Another obtained a psychological technician's job with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

With the bench taking over until the end.

Law Leads Late

Suffolk's tactician coach Charlie Law considered the win Suffolk's top athletic triumph, and it was not an overstatement. Disparaged by the MIT club prior to the game (the favored boys, on the Charles considered it a "warmup game"), the surprising Rams gave Law his biggest sports thrill at Suffolk.

"This game was it," said a happy Law after the game. "It will definitely mean a lot in the school's athletic life from now on."

Strictly a team effort was the word all right, and an effort that should lead to future major wins. Alley, Mellace, White, Moore, Doucet, Barabant, Fisher, and Hunt, the boys who staged the stunning upset, all have a couple of more years hoop eligibility at the school and have given only a brief demonstration of what might happen in Suffolk in the basketball ranks.

LEGALLY SPEAKING

By PHIL JULIANO

Six law students are among Suffolk's full and part-time staff, administering to the needs of all students. The prettiest, Catherine Judge, is Registrar at the Law school and number one student with the night-division class of '57.

Following her, John Jahnsmid, '57.

Paul Fitzpatrick '57, and Norman King '58, have been working in the bookstore for many semesters.

In the library, Norman Hogan, Phil Juliano, and Jim Hogan, all with the class of '58, will daily with volumes of every description.

Speaking of law students and the library, many will remember Jack Nolan, a '55 Comm-Law graduate. Nolan recently passed both the Mass and Ohio bar exams. The top student was a familiar sight at the library until late every evening and passed most of every Saturday at his seat by the law books.

Obviously replacing Jack at the library are Miss Judge and Jean Hession, top student with the evening class of '56. The young ladies can be found most any evening and every Saturday, literally buried by law books.

A memo to students who are taking Wills: Keep away from G. A's book; not all of it is wrong.

At the recent communion breakfast sponsored by the Cardinal Newman club of Suffolk, the law school was represented by Mario Guggino, Phil Juliano, Joe Letourney, and Bill Paverelli. Here is prima facie evidence that law students are human, and will support functions of the university.

The Wig and Robe Society, ably led by prexy George Day and veep Jack Chisholm, announce a fund raising raffle for the purpose of enlarging the law library. The prizes which include a U. S. Savings Bond will be awarded on Dec. 16th.

Second year pre-legal and law students are invited to participate in Wig activities. Former president Harry S. Popoff tells us only male students can join at present.

A University honor student last year, Angelo Palmieriello is now studying law at a locally accredited school. Unable to stay away from his old haunts, Angelo still does most of his studying at the Suffolk library.

The new beagle and I didn't see eye to eye concerning the school's stress on law on a national scale and Suffolk's stress on Mass law.

The landlords of Grove Street have been the scene of many an apartment problem for our out of towners. At least one of six problems has been solved, and undoubtedly it's a job original. Zab, referring of course

The senior class is witnessing quite a scholastic battle in Horowitz v. Johnson. P. contends D will not be top student in the graduating class. To this, D demurred, and after it was overruled, filed a general answer. The case evolves around the few percentage points separating the litigants. As it stands now, the case will go to the SIC in June. I won't personally like to see both parties defaulted by reason of a percentage tie.

Recently The West Publishing Co. sent a guest lecturer to Suffolk. The theme here is Find the Law, was methodically covered by Mr. Chapman, the lecturer. Those who attended, especially the first year students, received additional first hand knowledge of different digests, reporter systems, encyclopedias, and the like. Such knowledge is a fundamental part of the scholastic life of both students and lawyers.

If early graduation could be developed to bring our speakers to Suffolk, individual benefits would be greatly enhanced.

Charles Lindy, '58, announced his engagement to Miss Thelma Loucombe of Lynnfield, Mass. Lindy is a graduate of Boston University and is a third grade teacher in the Lynnfield school system. A summer wedding is planned.

The stork visited a senior and a freshman recently. Rudolph Sachs, '56, announced his son, born on Nov. 19th, will be named Dominick Frederick, and the lad weighed in at seven pounds two ounces.

Peter J. Beatrice, '58, an announced his second son weighed eight pounds two ounces at birth, on Nov. 12th. The happy father is president of the university's senior class, and has had the distinction of being class president for four years.

Mel Hoxan, likeable first year student, is recuperating from a pneumothorax. Mel attributed the cause of his malady to a virus infection and fatigue.

NARROW ESCAPE

Roger Alley, Rams player who scored 11 points against MIT, missed some money in a near-cardiac the morning following S.U.'s first game.

Alley was riding to school with Junior Theresa Reilly when a car forced their car out of its space in North Parkway. Both were slightly shaken up.
