Final Deadline
Last September when the whole town was suffolk students, The Suffolk Journal included our work, various accomplishments, and information as well as meet eight deadlines appropriately. With this our final effort, we have reached that final goal, and we hope we have entertained, informed, and interested you.

Last week we submitted a huge challenge, and although we published some interesting and well written opinions, we found it difficult to keep the balance. It was either too many people who wanted to write a column on current events, or too few people who had something to say about the events.

In retrospect, our first twelve issues proved how well we prepared ourselves for this project. We found ourselves with more people than we could use, and had to ask some of them to step down from the editorial board to give time to the more important matters. We also found that the number of contributors was not enough to fill our quota.

We have tried to keep suffolk students informed not only with our work, but also by the way we present it. We try to make our work interesting and readable, but it has been hard to find time to do so.

The Journal enjoyed a virtual metamorphosis last year and this year, beginning with a change in the administration. The new administration has taken time to look at the present and future of the Journal, and has made changes in the way they operate it. It is hoped that this cooperation will help us continue to improve the Journal.

Next year, the Journal will be held by a fellow who was not a part of the previous team. His predecessor, who is now a student at Suffolk College, will continue to take an active role in the editorial board. He will be our first editor in chief, and the students will have the opportunity to take a larger role in the future.

Our new Editor in Chief, Jonathan D. K. Jones, who is now a student at Suffolk College, has taken the position of Editor in Chief for the upcoming year. His predecessor, Jay B. Smith, has submitted his resignation, and the editorial board will now be in the hands of the students.

Jones has been preparing for this position since last year, and has done a great deal of work with the previous editor, Gary L. Elkins, who is now a student at Suffolk College. Jones is the son of a Suffolk graduate, and has been a part of the editorial board since his freshman year. Drama Club Presents 'Picnic' May 24, 25

The Suffolk Drama Club kicks off the broad way hit 'Picnic' with a masquerade ball and an open show. Sunday afternoon the club will present their outdoor performance. The cast includes more than forty students and is headed by Theodore Rankin of the Rocks Club. The cast members range from Sophomores to Graduates.

An Editorial

If nothing else, the recent Suffolk class elections proved one thing: Candidates know how to advertise. And what a battle for the student body Presidency was. If anything, the elections were an advertisement for the student body.

But aside from the good advertising, the elections were a good form of education. The candidates learned how to campaign, how to advertise, how to run a campaign, and how to get their message across. And the voters learned how to make a decision.

For example, in the freshmen class, the candidate for President was clearly the better choice. He was the only one who campaigned, and he advertised his message well. He was also the only one who had the support of the faculty. The other candidates were weak and did not have the support of the faculty.

In the sophomore class, the candidate for President was clearly the better choice. He was the only one who campaigned, and he advertised his message well. He was also the only one who had the support of the faculty. The other candidates were weak and did not have the support of the faculty.

In the junior class, the candidate for President was clearly the better choice. He was the only one who campaigned, and he advertised his message well. He was also the only one who had the support of the faculty. The other candidates were weak and did not have the support of the faculty.

In the senior class, the candidate for President was clearly the better choice. He was the only one who campaigned, and he advertised his message well. He was also the only one who had the support of the faculty. The other candidates were weak and did not have the support of the faculty.

In the graduate class, the candidate for President was clearly the better choice. He was the only one who campaigned, and he advertised his message well. He was also the only one who had the support of the faculty. The other candidates were weak and did not have the support of the faculty.

President Muncie's Message

In order to turn the graduation ceremonies of the Class of 1942 into one of the highlights of the year, the faculty and students have been working hard. The ceremonies will feature a number of special events, including a Torchlight Processional, a pancake breakfast, and a visit from Santa Claus.

Picture Highlights Of Recognition Day

Mr. Bernard Weible, a former member of the faculty of the Suffolk Journal, presented the annual awards at the Recognition Day program held on May 19. Weible, who had served as editor of the Suffolk Journal for many years, presented the awards to the student editors and staff members of the newspaper.

Awards were presented for outstanding contributions to the newspaper. The awards included the Editor-in-Chief Award, the Managing Editor Award, the Assistant Editor Award, the Copy Editor Award, and the Staff Writer Award.

The Editorial Board, under the direction of Editor-in-Chief Tony Sutcliffe, congratulated the award winners for their hard work and dedication to the newspaper. The Editorial Board also thanked the faculty members and staff members who had supported the newspaper throughout the year.

The Suffolk Journal staff also expressed their gratitude to the faculty members and staff members who had supported the newspaper throughout the year. The staff members were grateful for their hard work and dedication to the newspaper.

DICK BOOKER TO LEAD NEXT YEAR'S JOURNAL

DICK Booker, sports editor of the Suffolk Journal this past year, has been named editor-in-chief for next year's edition. His interest in sports has been evident since he was in elementary school. He served as president of the Suffolk High School Student Council and was an active member of the Suffolk High School Debate Team. His editorial skills have been honed through practice and experience, and he is eager to take on the challenge of leading the Journal next year.

SUFFOLK SENIOR SOCIAL LEADER

Dr. Bill Reading

George E. Lawrence, a member of this year's senior class, has been elected as the new social leader of the Suffolk Senior Class. The Suffolk Senior Class is an important organization that plans social events and activities for the school year. Dr. Lawrence has been involved in many of these events, and his leadership skills and enthusiasm have made him a popular choice for the position.

Active Reserve Duty

Dr. Murphy Hospitalized

Dr. Murphy of the Suffolk Senior Class has been hospitalized due to a medical emergency. He has been an active member of the class and has contributed to its success. We wish him a speedy recovery.

Students Keen On Faith, Life

CAMBRIDGE - L.P.

College students are keen to remain in the religious beliefs of their parents and are firmly committed to the spiritual life. In the words of the Harvard Student Council: 'We believe that the heart of college education is to strengthen the student's religious life, not to change it.'

The Harvard Student Council's statement is in line with a recent survey conducted by the Council on Religion in Higher Education, which found that 75% of college students identify as religious. This is a significant increase from the 60% reported in a similar survey conducted in 1992.

The survey also found that a majority of students attend religious services at least once a week, and that a significant number of students report that religion is an important part of their college experience.

The survey results are in line with what the Harvard Student Council believes is a need for more religious education in college. The council has called for the creation of a department of religious studies, which would provide students with a deeper understanding of the religious beliefs and practices of their peers.

The Harvard Student Council's statement is significant because it is a reflection of the growing importance of religion in college. As the survey results show, students are increasingly turning to religion for guidance and support, and the Harvard Student Council is responding to this trend by advocating for more religious education in college.

DEAR GABBY

ON FAITH, LIFE

All thanks to you are due. Only the names have been intentionally omitted to prevent a flood of letters. I am striking a line through the names of a group of eight faithful ones who are to be named in the minutes of the next meeting. It is not that I wish to hide them, but in order to avoid a flood of letters, which I am sure you will understand.

Best wishes,

John Doe

Cambridge, Mass.

On the matter of spiritual growth, the Harvard Student Council has called for a greater emphasis on the spiritual life in college. The council has recommended that colleges adopt a more holistic approach to education, one that includes spiritual and emotional development.
