In The Course Of Events

by W. L. Owens

A stagnant meeting of editors and writers was held just a few minutes ago in the editorial offices of several well-known newspapers. The purpose was to discuss the death of the North Star editor, who was a well-respected editor and writer who had made many contributions to the newspaper industry.

The meeting was attended by a number of editors and writers who were all deeply saddened by the loss of the North Star editor. The discussions centered around the role of the newspaper in society and the importance of having a strong, independent press.

The meeting ended with a sense of loss and a determination to continue the work of the North Star editor. The editors and writers agreed to work together to ensure that the newspaper community remained strong and independent.

THE NEGRO IN LATIN AMERICA

By Harold Prave

This is Christmas-time among the President of the United States and the South American presidents who have Negro blood in their veins. They are greeted by a band of Negroes singing "Happy Christmas" in their native tongue.

The Negro district within the city of Havana, Cuba, is a popular place to visit during Christmas. The streets are decorated with lights and garlands, and all the residents are dressed in holiday attire. The Christmas tree is the focal point of the district, and children gather around it to listen to stories and sing carols.

In El Salvador, the Christmas celebration is centered around the church. The streets are filled with people carrying lanterns and singing "Silent Night." The churches are decorated with flowers and candles, and the nativity scene is a popular attraction.

In Brazil, Christmas is a time for family gatherings and feasting. The main dish is typically roast suckling pig, and the dessert is "Bolo de Rala," a cake made with grated coconut.

In Colombia, the Christmas tradition is to give gifts and eat "Pollo al Horno," roasted chicken. The streets are decorated with lights and streamers, and the church bells ring to signal the start of the celebration.

The Negro in Latin America is a unique and vibrant culture that has contributed greatly to the region's diversity and richness. It is a time for family, friends, and community, and the traditions are celebrated with joy and enthusiasm.
HAPPY NEW YEAR

The editors of THE CHRONICLE take great pleasure in wishing all readers a Happy and Prosperous New Year. As our 1944 volume closes with this issue, we will take this opportunity to recall a time past in a spirit of pride, but with profound humility as we realize the advancement of Negro workers, many of our paramount objectives is the winning of the war, an aim which we share with all other Americans as well as the peoples of the United Nations, one has been and is participation in a common effort to preserve the civilization of the past. This general indication of Puritan founders of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts) "perpetuate it to posterity.

Let it always remain to reveal the positions which we have taken on controversial issues, often in conflict with the views of others. We are, however, we have not hesitated to unfurl our corporate colors, for we believe that the Negro as a citizen of the United States and as a member of the human race, has a part to play in the fulfillment of our democratic principles. The Negro is a human being, and we believe that he is entitled to the same rights, privileges, and opportunities as other citizens of this country.

EMANCIPATION DAY

The Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance of Greater Abbeville, Alabama, sponsored a celebration of the Emancipation Proclamation, issued by President Abraham Lincoln on January 1, 1863. As orator of the day, on this 31st anniversary of the Emancipation Proclamation, the Right Rev. D. H. Whaley, Rector of the National Training School for Women and Girls, gave a stirring address at The Church of the Abbeville Abbeville School, Abbeville. The keynote of the proceedings was the Negro's right to freedom and equal treatment before the law. The address was followed by the presentation of a handsome gold and silver medal to Mrs. E. W. Washington, principal of the National Training School for Women and Girls, by the Rector of the National Training School for Women and Girls.
