Suffolk Family
by Dr. Stanley Vogel, Chairman of the English Department.

During the past few months various television stations have presented a series entitled, Six American Families. Throughout the years, I have kept in contact with a unique group of alumni, the Traunstein's, who I feel represent a Suffolk University’s American Family.

Three members of the Traunstein family are graduates of Suffolk University. All have gone on to earn advanced degrees and have been successful in their careers across the United States and abroad.

Russell Traunstein (CLA, 1949) is a Clinical Social Worker with the Veterans’ Administration Clinic’s Center for Problem Drinking and the volunteer President of the Board of Directors of Project Turnabout, Inc., a self-help drug rehabilitation program. Russ came to Suffolk after a two-year stint with the then United States Army Aircorps. While an undergraduate he was a paid research assistant in the Psychology and Guidance Departments and was active in the Philosophy and Psychology Clubs and the short-lived Glee Club. He was a founder and charter member of the Creative Writing Club. Graduating with high honors in Psychology and English, he went on to earn an M.S.S.W. in Group Work from the Boston University School of Social Work in 1953.

After two years as Program Director of Elizabeth Peabody House, the second largest settlement house in Boston, Russ accepted the post of Assistant Director of the Lewis Street Center in Rochester, New York, a settlement house that specialized in neighborhood and community work. His success in dealing with the problems of a multi-racial community drew the attention of the administrators of Rochester’s Rehabilitation Commission, and he was invited to become Director of Family and Business Relocation for the city’s redevelopment program. The program that he developed gained national recognition for establishing new HHFA criteria for relocation standards and other innovative concepts. In 1959 Russ was made Assistant Executive Director of the Commission and later Acting Executive Director. This experience brought him back to Boston when Edward Logue offered him the position of South End Project Director and Deputy Director of Family Relocation for the BRA. In this post he established the citizen urban renewal committee that drafted the initial plans for the area which was at that time the largest and probably the most socially complicated in the country.

After two and a half years with BRA, Russ became Development Coordinator for the First Realty Company of Boston, a post he held for nine years. Russ has now returned to his original area of interest, clinical social work, which he finds fulfilling and useful.

Russ was married in 1947 to Louise Marie Gilbertson of Brighton who holds a BA from Boston University and an MS from Simmons College. They have two children: Mrs. Leslie Gamer, who is an elementary school teacher in Woodsville, New Hampshire, and Steven Traunstein, who is a pre-law student at the University of New Hampshire.

Dr. Donald Traunstein (CLA, 1954), Russ’s younger brother, admits that his high school record was hardly exemplary, but he credits former Suffolk Dean Donald W. Goodrich with discovering his potential. Faculty members who were particularly helpful to him were Dr. Catherine Fehrer and Dr. William Sahakian. Dr. Traunstein majored in Philosophy at Suffolk and received his Master’s in Social Work from Boston University in 1957. In 1971, he was awarded a PhD in Social Welfare from Brandeis University. Don has been on the faculties of Boston University and the Graduate School of Social Welfare of the State University of New York at Albany. He has also lectured at Columbia University, Boston College, and the University of Maine. His professional experience includes work with alcoholics, delinquent and emotionally disturbed children, the mentally ill and the mentally retarded. In 1963, he was nominee for the "Outstanding Young Man of the Year" by the Worcester Chamber of Commerce, and in 1975, he was nominated as "Social Worker of the Year" in northeastern New York.

After eight years as a clinical social worker, Don turned to program development and administration. He has been instrumental in the establishment of three human service organizations: a social club, for mentally ill persons (1961), an occupational training center (1963), and a community residential program for mentally retarded adults (1974). Living Resources Corporation (LIVCORP) was conceptualized and initiated by him, and as LIVCORP’s executive, he has directed the development of the agency’s three units — hostels for the adult retarded whose members work during the day in sheltered workshops and live in and maintain their community home under supervision. Two more hostels are slated to open early in 1977 under LIVCORP’s auspices. Among Don’s major interests are self-help organizations (the subject of his Brandeis dissertation) and the divergence between the perceptions of clients and their mental health therapists. In 1972, he directed the largest survey of self-help organizations in the country up to that time. His publications include “Self-Help Organizations: an Explanatory Study”, “Redefining Deviance: a Challenge to the Human Services”, and “Graduate Education for Volunteer Program Administrators.”

Don was married in 1953 to Marilyn Smith of Allston. They have two children, Debra, a Junior at New York State University in Geneseo, and Russell, a Freshman at the same university at Brockport. Priscilla Taunserus (CLA, 1954) received her BA in English at Suffolk and then earned an MA in English on a Teaching Fellowship at Ohio Wesleyan University where she taught Freshman English and a writing clinic. She also did a year of advance studies on a Ford Foundation Grant at Claremont Graduate School. After Wesleyan and Claremont, Peri (as she is known to her friends) became a manuscripts cataloguer and consultant on literary and historical manuscripts at the Henry E. Huntington Library in San Marino, California. In 1962, she joined the newly formed Peace Corps and was assigned to the University of Caldas in Manizales, Colombia where she taught English as a foreign language, Medieval, Renaissance, and Modern British as well as American Literature, the History of the English Language and English teaching methodology. At Caldas, Peri planned and developed the University’s English program, trained its staff, developed teaching materials and directed the teaching of English for all six departments. The program, which is still functioning, was later taken over by the Fulbright Commission. Her last assignment in Colombia was to assist in the organization of the branches of the Columbian-American Linguistics Institute, a program for re-training English teachers.

Returning to the States in 1964, Peri taught Spanish at Wakefield High School for a short time before resuming her career abroad in 1966. She taught English and Spanish at the International School of Brussells for a year and travelled extensively, seeing Europe from Rome to Leningrad. She then accepted a two-year contract with the Lahore American School in Lahore, then West Pakistan, and used her vacations to travel to Thailand, Nepal, Afghanistan and other countries. In December, 1967, she survived an air crash in Chian Mai, in northern Thailand, in which four persons were killed and many seriously injured. The DC-3 was totally demolished. Peri suffered second-degree burns and multiple fractures, but a successful operation put her back on her feet.

Returning to the States in 1969, Peri stayed by only long enough to recover her health and then moved on to Australia by way of Hawaii, Japan, Hong Kong and Bangkok. She lived in Sydney for five years as an editor for a small publishing company, ghost writer, and radio script writer. Her book on early Dutch explorers, Daughters: First Discoveries of Australia, was published by Antipodean Publishers, Sydney, in 1974. She has also published a textbook for Spanish speaking students of English. Her Master’s thesis, Jack London’s Socialism, is in preparation by Historian Publishers, Sydney.

In late 1974, Peri gave up her many pursuits and went to live in the Riverina, the farming district of New South Wales, Australia. There she wrote a novel set in Pakistan and did the research for the novel she is presently working on. She received a grant from the Australian Literature Board to assist in her research for this book.

Like Russ and Peri, Peri has special memories of Suffolk professors who were great teachers. Her fondest are of the late Dr. Ella M. Murphy whom she credits with having taught her to “think straight about literature.” She also recognizes unpayable debts to Dr. Catherine Fehrer and myself. At Suffolk, Peri was Feature Editor of The Journal and President of the Drama Club. Suffolk may not have seen the last of the Traunstein family. Russ’ son Steve, who at twenty-six already has a notable career behind him in therapeutic counseling and public community relations, plans to apply to Suffolk Law School when he has completed his requirements at the University of New Hampshire. Steve, like the rest of the family, is service oriented, and looks forward to a career in the legal side of social development. His fiancee, Katrina Knapp, a graduate of the University of Connecticut, will seek admission for graduate work at Suffolk in counseling and social services. Their goal is to establish a residential rehabilitation center in which Katrina will head up the clinical work and Steve will handle the legal end, including legal services to clients. The Traunsteins think there is something special about Suffolk: a combination of good teaching and an attitude toward working students that both encourages and challenges them. They are all proud to be Suffolk graduates, and they all credit the University with developing their potentials and giving them solid foundations to build on.
Suffolk University's College of Business Administration celebrated its 40th anniversary, Tuesday, April 26 with a university-wide convocation in the auditorium on Temple Street, Beacon Hill. Suffolk University President Thomas A. Fulham opened the 1:00 p.m. program, which featured three guest speakers who represented business, government, and education.

Dr. Robert A. Charpie, President of the Cabot Corporation spoke on "The Future of American Business Overseas." He was followed by Christine Sullivan, Secretary of Consumer Affairs for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, who discussed "The Future of American Business in the United States." The final guest speaker, Dean Geoffrey P. E. Clarkson of Northeastern University's College of Business Administration, talked on "The Future of Management Education."

Dr. Richard L. McDowell, Dean of the Suffolk University College of Business Administration, paid a special tribute to the "Builders of the Business School." He cited Vice President and Treasurer of Suffolk University, Francis X. Flannery and John P. Chase, Member of the Board of Trustees for their outstanding contributions to the growth and development of the College of Business Administration over the years. A reception in the faculty dining room followed the program.

Income Tax Return Service

The General Alumni Association sponsored an Income Tax Return Consultation service for Suffolk University students. Held on March 16 and 30 from 6:00—9:00 p.m., qualified alumni met in the Ridgeway Building lounge to assist students in filling out their income tax return forms.

Suffolk students were counseled on the proper way to fill out their forms by William Driscoll, BSBA'72, MBA'73, and Vincent Vannah, BSBA'70. John Hommel, BSBA'72 JD'76, chairman of the project said, "It's a great program, one that really provided a service to students. We plan to continue the program next year with a few alterations. I think the service should be offered earlier and opened to include not only students, but also alumni."

If you are a CPA or a qualified accountant and would be willing to offer your services, please contact the Office of Alumni Activities.

Grants and Management

The opening day's program, entitled, "Money, Where It Is, How to Get It," featured a discussion on the intergovernmental grant system and foundation funding, fund accounting for non-profits and governmental units, the Federal Assistance Program Retrieval System (a computerized approach to grants) and proposal writing. Priscilla Crane of the Office of General Revenue Sharing in Washington was the luncheon speaker.

"Management: A Financial and Administrative Survival Kit," was the theme of the second day's program, which considered budgeting and indirect cost concepts, new accounting developments, the question of accountability, and organizational management and capability building. The noon luncheon speaker was Newell Flather of the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company.

Conference discussion leaders included: Professor Regina E. Hertzlinger of Harvard Business School, Co-author of "Management Controls in Non-Profit Organization..."

Who’s Who at Suffolk

He is believed to be the oldest student ever nominated to "Who’s Who in American Universities and Colleges, and he’s enrolled right here on the hill at Suffolk University. Charlie Niles, 82 and as spry as his fellow students, was among 23 Suffolk seniors nominated to the annual college directory; a distinction based on scholastic and extra-curricular endeavor.

Niles, who lives in Boston’s West End, is enrolled in Suffolk’s unique senior citizen program, which allows persons over 65 to take credit courses for free. He is expected to receive his bachelor of science degree in June.

"The kids help keep me young," says Niles of his college classmates. "They treat me like one of them, nothing different."

A communications-speech major, Niles competes with the university’s debating team and during the past two years, has won six trophies for forensic performance in college tournaments. He also can be seen at nearly all events on campus, even student proms.

A native of Somerville, who attended the old Somerville Latin School and was graduated from Holdén High School in 1913, Niles never enrolled in college in his younger years. During World War I, he served in the Army Tank Corps under Captain Dwight Eisenhower’s leadership and later overseas under Lt. Col. George Patton.

For most of his career, he was a designer and builder of retail stores. He retired six years ago. "I suppose that I could have sat in a room waiting for the curtain to come down, but that wasn’t for me," Niles recalled.

So, he became a Vista volunteer helping the elderly in his West End neighborhood. About that time, he heard about Suffolk’s free program for the elderly and enrolled. Last June, he received a standing ovation at Fynes Veterans’ Auditorium when Suffolk President Thomas A. Fulham awarded him an associate of arts degree.

Management Seminars

The Institute for Business Management at Suffolk University sponsored a day-long seminar on "How the Small and Medium-Sized Company Can Analyze Sales and Marketing Problems Using New Techniques" Wednesday, April 27, at the Boston Marriott Hotel in Newton, Massachusetts. Ways of thinking out problems like forecasting, sales analysis, budgeting, market analysis and optimum distribution patterns were demonstrated.

Three executives of the Inter-active Sciences Corporation of Braintree demonstrated ways of meeting typical problems in the field. They were Alfred H. Jorgensen, president and director, Thomas N. Osterlund, vice president and manager of the Information Systems Division, and Mary E. Brumbaugh, regional support specialist, in the marketing division.

During the month of May three additional workshops were presented at the Hotel Sonesta, Cambridge, Massachusetts. The Workshops dealt with problems a Supervisor-Manager must identify in order to manage people and job tasks efficiently.

On May 10, Workshop I, "Interacting with Others in Face-To-Face Situations," was led by Dr. Edward J. Robinson. Workshop II, "Evaluating Human Performance: Guidelines for Employee Development," was given on May 17 by Peter G. Meyerson. "Training and Coaching Your Work- team: Steps to Improved Perform­ ance," was the topic for Workshop III presented on May 24 by Peter G. Meyerson.

If you are interested in receiving information on future workshops sponsored by Suffolk University’s Institute for Business Management, please call Ms. Dolan at (617) 723-4700, extension 342.
Dr. Benjamin Spock, famed baby doctor and recognized authority on childcare, spoke on "Childrearing: Yesterday and Today" April 19th in the Suffolk University Auditorium. The lecture was sponsored by the General Alumni Association. More than two hundred alumni, students, faculty and staff of Suffolk University attended the lecture and reception. From 1955 to 1967 Dr. Spock was a Professor of Child Development at Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio. Though working principally as a teacher, he also directed a study on childrearing. Since his retirement in June of 1967, Dr. Spock has been traveling alternate months. When not traveling, he speaks mainly at universities on child development and also on the need for radical political action. Long active in political affairs, Dr. Spock was the presidential candidate in 1972 and the vice presidential candidate in 1976 for the People's Party. His publications include the famous Baby and Child Care. Which, according to Dr. Spock, is "... to cover the emotional as well as the physical aspects of child care, in a tone which would support rather than scold parents." It has sold 28,000,000 copies and has been translated into twenty-six languages. He has written or collaborated on five other books on child care, and also. Dr. Spock on Vietnam (with Mitchell Zimmerman), Decent and Indecent: Our Personal and Political Behavior and A Teenagers Guide to Life and Love, and in 1974 Raising Children in a Difficult Time. Since 1963 Dr. Spock has written a monthly column for Redbook Magazine. Phase Two Desegregation By Susan Fisher, ABJ '76 The Boston School Committee approved four new magnet projects which Suffolk University administrators in conjunction with three schools under Boston's Phase Two Desegregation Plan. Dr. Cleo Boudreau, Phase Two Coordinator for Suffolk, announced that the projects are: a math and reading laboratory project at the elementary level at the Trotter School; a video process project which will result in a videodocumentary on the multi-ethnic presence in the Roxbury Community for fifth, sixth and seventh grade students at the Horace Mann Middle School; a mathematics project for ninth graders functioning below p-ade level and a career-oriented bilingual education project for students at Copley Square High School. Suffolk faculty members assigned to the projects are Dr. Cleo Boudreau, Professor John R. Burton, Dr. Allan Kennedy and Professor Robert Jennings. Acting as consultants on the projects are Suffolk staff members Dr. Mary Mahoney, Dr. Stephen Shattuck, Dr. Theodore Marshall, Professor Phyllis Mack and Colleen Kazanowski. Alumni Luncheon Dave Cavalier, AB '75, hosted an alumni luncheon on Wednesday, March 31, 1977, at the famous Monocle Restaurant located on Capitol Hill. Over 20 alumni from Washington, D.C., and the surrounding areas enjoyed meeting with fellow alumni, renewing old acquaintances and discussing Suffolk University, over a delicious lunch. President Fulham addressed the group. He reported on the University today, the growth of the alumni association, and the establishment of an outstanding schedule of alumni events for this academic year. Following the reception the President said: "I am overjoyed at the turnout and the enthusiasm that the Washington alumni demonstrated on behalf of Suffolk University. The pride in Suffolk that was present throughout the luncheon was exciting and inspira-
Massachusetts Press Association
Malden's Blue and Gold won the top prize, an $1800 scholarship for excellence in newswriting as designated by the high school newspaper as designated by the high school.

Journalism Contest
Brookton High School, Malden High School and Walpole High School were the top prize winners in the seventh annual Greater Boston High School newspaper competition sponsored by the Suffolk University Journalism Department. Francis X. Flannery, Vice President and Treasurer of Suffolk University, presented awards at the March 3rd dinner. The competition and dinner brought more than 150 high school newspaper editors and staffers to Suffolk.

Brookton High's Permanent Press won the top prize, an $1800 scholarship for excellence in newswriting while Walpole's The Rebellion received a scholarship award in the amount of $850 for excellence in typography. The three were selected from more than 90 newspapers from high schools in Eastern Massachusetts. Representatives from the Massachusetts Press Association served as judges.

Professor Malcolm J. Beach, Chairman of the Suffolk University Journalism Department, said that the scholarships will be awarded to a qualified staff member from each winning school newspaper as designated by the high school.

Cobscook Bay
The Biology Department will reinstitute its own summer program this year at the Robert S. Friedman Laboratory, Cobscook Bay, Maine. In past summers the programs were run with the New Hampshire College and University Council, an 11 member consortium. Dr. Arthur J. West, director of the summer program at the Friedman lab, said the changes were made on the basis of new marine science program options within the biology major.

Courses planned include marine botany, marine invertebrate zoology, marine parasitology, marine geology, and directed study.

The Friedman Laboratory, named for Suffolk University biology department chairman, has undergone tremendous growth and progress since the summer of 1968 when Dr. West set up camp at the site in a 34-foot renovated house trailer. Today, the 40 acre property contains nine student cabins, a main building housing an experimental station and dining room, and a classroom house. In addition, a $12,000 building with separate shower facilities for men and women was constructed last year.

Cobscook Bay, located in Washington County, Maine, the easternmost county in the nation, is some 350 miles from the Suffolk campus on Beacon Hill. It has long been a treasure haven for marine biologists and science students in their field work and specimen collecting. Cobscook Bay has the greatest tide fluctuations in the continental United States varying as much as 24 feet.

Last summer, as many as 75 students from various schools took part in programs. For the past three years, under an inter-institutional agreement between Suffolk and the New Hampshire College and University Council students from 11 schools used the facility for course work.

The station originally was purchased from Lester Seeley of Edmunds, Maine, now station manager, and was made possible through Dr. Friedman, who donated the $18,000 purchase price.

Dr. West expects many Suffolk students will be enrolled in courses this year. More and more students are becoming interested in the area and the new courses offered.

Each year, President Fulham visits the facility and addresses townspeople as part of a weekly seminar sponsored by the university. A number of faculty and administrators have also visited the marine station, described by West as a "little jewel within its own complex."

Sociology Alumni Polls
by Susan Fischer, '86

Society Department Chairman Dr. D. Donald Fiorillo and sociology professor Gary Castanino polled alumni from their department over the past year and found that almost half are now employed in a human service or educationally-related occupation.

The study, conducted with alumni who graduated between 1971 and 1975, indicated that of those in the human services or related occupations, eighty-two per cent have gone on to post-graduate study. At present, the study is being considered for publication by the journal of Educational Research. A follow-up study is planned for 1990.

Dr. Fiorillo reports that the Executive Committee of Alpha Kappa Delta, the National Sociology Honor Society, has approved the informal application for the establishment of a chapter at Suffolk. A formal application has been submitted, but has not yet been acted upon.

Alpha Kappa Delta was founded in 1920 at the University of Southern California and has since initiated over 5,000 scholars into its membership. There are 230 chapters throughout the United States and Canada.

The Sociology Department has been busy in other areas. Two new bachelor of science programs were introduced this year. The BS in Health Services is designed for pre-service students as well as graduates of nursing schools and other in-service personnel. It combines course work in the biological and physical sciences with courses in management, communications and sociology.

The BS in Human Services will require students to do work in various sociology areas as well as accounting and management. Particular focus is given to off-campus experience in multi-service centers.

Dr. D. Donald Fiorillo, Chairman of the Sociology Department.
"Law Day Activities"

Law Day, U.S.A. was established by a Joint Resolution of Congress as a special day of celebration by the American people. Its purpose is to advance equality and justice under law, to encourage citizen support of law observance and law enforcement, and to foster respect for law and an understanding of its essential place in the life of every citizen.

Each year the students, faculty, administration and alumni of Suffolk University Law School join together in sponsoring "Law Day" activities which capture the essence of the Joint Resolution of Congress. The excellence of Suffolk's program was recognized at the 1976 National Competition for Law Day Programs. At which time, first place honors were awarded to Suffolk.

Law Day, 1977 was celebrated with a full week of activities climaxing by the Annual Law Day Dinner on April 30, at the Copley Plaza Hotel, Boston, Massachusetts. Former Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas was the guest speaker at the dinner. Chief Justice Fortas, now a partner in the Washington D.C. law firm of Fortas and Koven, spoke on "The State of Our Constitution." The 400 alumni, faculty and students in attendance listened closely to his proposal for the establishment of a legislative cabinet made up of the President and selected members of Congress to attain mutually acceptable legislative programs. Fortas assured his audience that such a cabinet "would preserve our system of checks and balances" and hoped it "would reduce the frictions which are becoming erosive and destructive, and it would avoid a national checkmate in which we are substantially paralyzed."

"It is...a departure from the theory that the executive and the Congress should operate like independent sovereigns, each jealous of his prerogative and fearful of the pollution of joint planning," Fortas conceded, "...but our constitution lives because it would reduce the frictions which are becoming erosive and destructive, and it would avoid a national checkmate in which we are substantially paralyzed."

Honorated at the dinner was Justice George N. Leighton of the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. A native of New Bedford, Massachusetts, he was presented the Frederick A. McDermott Award in memory of the late Suffolk Law School Dean for contributions to the legal profession and legal education.

The Law Day, 1977 program also sponsored daily lectures and receptions during the week of April 25. The speakers included: Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt, discussing "The Investigation and Prosecution of the White Collar Crime"; Attorney Gary L. Epsteen of Casper, Wyoming, a member of the Inner Circle of Advocates, talking on "Million Dollar Tort Judgments"; Attorney Robert J. DelGiacomo, bar counsel for the Board of Bar Overseers of Massachusetts, speaking on "The Lawyer and Legal Malpractice"; and a session on the testimony of an expert witness presented by Charles M. Bumum, associate professor of law at Suffolk serving as defense attorney. Assistant Suffolk County District Attorney Philip T. Beauchesne, the prosecutor, Dr. George G. Katsas, a Boston pathologist, the expert witness and retired Superior Court Judge Cornelius J. Moynihan, now a professor of law at Suffolk University, serving as the judge.

This year's Law Day, U.S.A. Program was coordinated by Professor Richard G. Pizzano, chairman of the dinner program and Law Day Committee and third-year day student Ellen Rinaldi-Sandler, chairman of the Student Law Day Committee. It was through the untiring efforts of Professor Pizzano and Ms. Sandler that the week’s activities were such a success.
