Academic Survival

FOR EXAM IDLERS ONLY!

The commitment to academic survival as set forth by the Journal is not all that is required. To succeed academically, one must be prepared and prepared well. The following suggestions may prove useful in the weeks to come:

1. Plan your study schedule ahead of time. A well-planned schedule can be a great help in managing your time.
2. Break your study time into manageable blocks. It's much easier to study for a short period of time than to try to cram a lot of material into a short time.
3. Use a variety of study techniques. This includes reading, writing, and discussing the material.
4. Stay organized. Keep your notes and study materials in order so you can find what you need quickly.
5. Take care of your health. Eating well, getting enough sleep, and exercising regularly can help you stay alert and focused.

5. A good study partner.

6. A good study partner.

7. A good study partner.

WHO'S WHO IN YOUR STUDENT GOVERNMENT

by PATRICK BENEDET

The student government, in its capacity as residence teacher, works closely with the faculty and administration in the common student organization of the university.

In accordance with the "know your student government"
policy, the SAJ prints the following list of the people supporting your SAJ.

The attitude of the Student Government members toward their positions may be summed up in this statement by President Jimmy McCartney:

"There is a need for more students in the student government who are willing to take the responsibility given them or fail by the traditional student body to do the job. We have had lack of leadership and lack of cooperation from some faculty members on school policies and decisions. We, therefore, try to be notable student leaders in our school of journalism and couragement is expected from prominent members of our school who give us the support we are looking for.

Do You Think for Yourself?

(These Questions Will Tell You!)

1. Do you feel that "all the good ideas" are the ideas of other people and you are not capable of thinking of any ideas of your own?

2. When something goes wrong, do you think the other person did it on purpose or if you did it, did you purposely do it?

3. Do you feel that other people are more important than you are?

4. Do you feel that the "outspoken" people are the ones who have been listened to the most?

5. Do you think that "men" are superior to "women"?

6. Do you think that "outside" people are more important than "inside people"?

7. Do you think that "people" are more important than "things"?

8. Do you think that "people" are more important than "things"?

You will notice that men and women who think for themselves usually answer Viceroy. Why? Because they have thought it through. They know what they want in a filter cigarette. And Viceroy gives it to them. A delicious source after a hard day's thinking. A choice filter cigarette. A choice brand of cigarettes.

*If you have checked 1 to 7 out of the 8 questions and also 1 to 7 out of the last 3... you think for yourself!

The Man Who Thinks for Himself Knows...

Only Viceroy has a thinking man's filter... a smoking man's taste!

VIEWS and REVIEWS
by David Ifray

The recent trend in movies, especially those that deal with the emotional stressors of the modern world, is towards producing films that explore the psychological and social aspects of human behavior. These movies often delve into themes such as existentialism, identity crises, and the meaning of existence. They are designed to provoke thought and encourage introspection among viewers.

Intertwined with this trend is the growing interest in documentary filmmaking, which seeks to present factual information on social issues and cultural phenomena. These films often employ a combination of interviews, archival footage, and reenactments to create a comprehensive portrait of the subject. They serve as a valuable tool for education and awareness.
