1178 Degrees Awarded At June Commencement

A total of 1178 degrees were conferred on graduates of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, College of Business Administration and Law School at the annual commencement Sunday, June 12 at John B. Hynes Veterans Auditorium.

It was the largest June commencement in the university's history. Some 490 juris doctor degrees were awarded in morning exercises while there were 688 graduates from the colleges in the afternoon.

The law school graduating class contained a third generation Suffolk graduate, Eugene F. Sullivan Jr. of Brookline, Massachusetts. His father Eugene F. Sullivan Sr. was graduated from the law school in 1950 and grandfather, the late Daniel J. Sullivan of South Boston graduated in 1917.

The law school exercises were held in the morning and featured former Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg as the speaker. Goldberg, in a suggestion that drew applause from the graduating class, recommended that bar examinations be abolished. He went on to say that graduation from an accredited law school would be sufficient requirement to practice law.

Goldberg, who was awarded an honorary degree, also questioned the need of candidates "subjecting their moral character to scrutiny by a bar association" noting the many lawyers involved in the Watergate scandals.

He also said that students should spend their third year of law school away from the classroom in clinical work that is supervised, contending that sufficient legal techniques and basic knowledge are acquired in the first two years.

Four Suffolk Law School alumni received honorary doctor of law degrees at the exercises. They were retired Chief Justice of the Massachusetts Superior Court Walter H. McLaughlin, JD '30; Chief Justice Samuel E. Zoll of the District Courts of Massachusetts, JD '62; Judge John T. Letts, circuit judge of the 17th Judicial Circuit, Grand Rapids, Michigan, JD '51 and Judge Edward T. Martin of Middlesex County Probate Court in Massachusetts, JD '56. Also receiving honorary doctor of laws degrees were Associate Justice Ruth I. Abrams of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court and Rhode Island Governor J. Joseph Garrahy.

Dean David J. Sargent presented the outstanding student award to Anthony Tarricone of Danvers, Massachusetts for the Day Division and to Lynn D. Goldsmith of Cambridge, Massachusetts for the Evening Division. Graduate scholarships of $5000 each were awarded to Thomas W. Carey of Brookline, Massachusetts and Franklyn P. Salimbene of Revere, Massachusetts. Tarricone also was presented the Daniel J. Fern Award, established by a 1931 law school graduate, for academic excellence.

At the Colleges' afternoon exercises, David O. Ives, president of the WGBH Educational Foundation, delivered the commencement address. He was one of five to be awarded an honorary degree from the colleges. His was a doctor of humanities. Others were Congressman John J. Moakley, (a 1956 graduate of the Law School), doctor of public administration; Analiese Harding, art historian at the Goethe Institute, Boston, doctor of humane letters; Dr. Charles A. Sanders, director of Massachusetts General Hospital, doctor of science; and Roger U. Wellington, C.P.A., retired partner in the Boston accounting firm of Coopers and Lybrand, doctor of commercial science.

Ives, who heads Channel 2, Boston's educational television station, discussed the impact television has had on today's college age generation, for good and bad, emphasizing that the impact was not all bad.
He cited television coverage of the Kennedy assassination, the civil rights marches through the south, the riots after the slaying of Martin Luther King, the Vietnam story and President Nixon's farewell speech.

"Television has played the major role in making you aware of the world," Ives told the graduates. "You have been part of your times as no other generation before you.

He noted that "through television virtually an entire nation can take part simultaneously in a moving retelling of our nation's history, as when upwards of 130 million Americans watched all or some part of Roots during the same eight-day period."

Special awards made at the exercises included a scholarship for graduate study, which went to Dennis B. Sullivan III of Needham, Massachusetts, who was graduated with a bachelor of science in business administration degree in February from the business school. Dr. Richard L. McDowell of the College of Business Administration made the presentation.

Dr. Michael R. Ronayne, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, presented trustee graduate scholarships totaling $4500 to Charles Moody of Boston, Massachusetts, who will complete his B.S. degree requirements in September, Peter A. Gilman of Scituate, Massachusetts, B.A. summa cum laude, and Deborah M. Blossom of Swampscott, Massachusetts, B.A. magna cum laude.

The Rev. Robert C. Day, headmaster of the Advent School, Beacon Hill, gave the invocation at the morning exercise and the Most Rev. Joseph F. Maguire, D.D., co-adjutor bishop of Springfield, Massachusetts, delivered the invocation for the afternoon program. The call to commencement was made by Vincent A. Fulmer, chairman of the Board of Trustees.

Nite at Pops a Sellout Over 300 Turned Away

Yellow carnations with blue ribbons dotted Symphony Hall as almost 500 Suffolk University alumni, students and faculty donned the school colors. This year marked the fourth annual Night at the Pops to be sponsored by the General Alumni Association. Arthur Fiedler conducted the first half of the program which included such favorites as: Cortege from The Queen of Sheba, and selections from West Side Story.

Welcomed by a standing ovation, guest soloist Tony Bennett performed a medley of fifteen Cole Porter songs and ended with I Left My Heart in San Francisco. Mr. Bennett appeared somewhat ill at ease at first, but gradually loosened up. At times, one got the feeling that he wasn't sure whether to play to the television cameras taping the performance or to the audience. It was an exciting evening none the less.

Because of another commitment, Mr. Fiedler turned the baton over to Harry Ellis Dickson, assistant conductor of the Boston Pops, following the second intermission. Under the direction of Mr. Dickson, the Pops orchestra played the following: selections from Girl Crazy, Take Me home Country Roads, I Want to Hold Your Hand, and surprise selections Evergreen and I Write the Songs.

Sincere apologies to the more than 300 alumni who were turned away despite the 200 additional seats purchased for this event. Interest in the Pops has risen in leaps and bounds over the past four years. Next year, the General Alumni Association will double the ticket reservations in order to accommodate this increased interest.

Dorothy Martin-Elford has been appointed Director of Financial Aid. She assumed her duties at the University on July 1, 1977. For the past five years, Ms. Martin-Elford has been the Director of Financial Aid at the Department of Health and Hospitals, Boston City Hospital Schools of Nursing. Prior to that time she was the Financial Aid Director at the State University of New York, Old Westbury. The office of financial aid is newly established in order to administer the various aid programs, to assist the increasing numbers of students and to maximize financial resources available to Suffolk students. Prior to July 1, student financial aid awards originated from the Dean of Students office under the direction of Dr. D. Bradley Sullivan.

Law Alumni Search Effort Initiated

by James J. Nixon, JD ’55, President, Law School Alumni Association

In response to numerous requests, the Board of Directors of the Law School Alumni Association has approved the publication of a comprehensive Suffolk University Law School Alumni Directory. So that the directory will be as inclusive as possible, it was deemed necessary to first mount a law alumni search effort. This search project is now well underway and is being coordinated through the Office of Alumni Activities at the University.

During the 1977-1978 academic year you will be receiving a questionnaire. Upon the return of the questionnaire, a printout of the data as it will appear in the directory will be returned to you for review. Your prompt responses to these mailings will be most appreciated. At the same time, if you are aware of fellow alumni who are not receiving alumni mailings, I urge you to encourage them to contact the Office of Alumni Activities so that they will be included in the directory.

This publication will be a professional tool as well as an alumni directory. It will include an alphabetical listing, cross references by state and graduation year and also, a listing of each individual’s areas of specialization. While the directory will not be available until 1978, it will be but the end result of a long and tedious process. A process which, without your cooperation, will be impossible to complete.

Wentworth By-The-Sea

On June 10th a reception was held for Law alumni at Wentworth By-The-Sea in New Hampshire during the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Bar Association. Despite miserable weather over 150 alumni, faculty and guests attended this annual function. It has become a tradition that the Suffolk reception is the largest and liveliest of the many receptions hosted by other law schools.

Law Placement Notes

In early June the president of the Suffolk University Law School Alumni Association, Judge James J. Nixon, addressed letters to the alumni requesting their participation in the newly established Graduate Advisory Program to provide information and guidance to students. As of the date this issue went to press, some 200 affirmative replies had been received. This is most gratifying and will enable the placement office to initiate the new program in the Fall.

If you have not yet sent in your questionnaire, please do so. All alumni who have indicated an interest in the Graduate Advisory Program will be contacted shortly.

Journalism Workshop For Minorities

The University's journalism department will conduct its second urban journalism workshop for minority students this summer under the auspices of the Newspaper Fund, Incorporated. Prof. Malcolm J. Barach, chairman of the journalism department, will direct the program.

The workshop, which will run for two weeks beginning August 22, is designed to introduce and develop journalistic skills and provide an orientation to journalism career opportunities. Suffolk conducted a similar program in 1976.

Fifteen youngsters will be accepted in the program, which includes visits to professional journalists, field trips to news media and tours of state agencies. The Boston Globe is providing matching media support for the workshop which will also include transportation and luncheon costs.

Minority students attending public, private or parochial high schools in Greater Boston are eligible to take part and should demonstrate academic potential or interest in journalism. Preference will be given to candidates in their junior classes, but all others will be considered.

"Last year's program was a highly successful one," recalled Barach. "We had 24 minority students from Greater Boston participating and they were highly motivated and got a lot out of the workshop. As a result of this program, one of these students has enrolled at Suffolk as a major in journalism."

Summer Debate Institute A Success

New England high school students participated in a unique opportunity to earn college credit at a high school Summer Debate Institute at Suffolk University under the direction of Dr. Allan Kennedy, Chairman of the Speech Department.

The Summer Institute was designed to provide area high school students with an opportunity to increase their understanding of debate and argumentation. Classes provided an opportunity for students to discuss problems related to health care in the United States with recognized specialists in the area of medical care. Students also spent time learning how to cross examine debate opponents along with developing an understanding of the issues related to health care. Small classes and group sessions focused on areas such as malpractice insurance, health maintenance organizations and possible future programs of national health insurance.

Marketing Class Wins Competition

The advertising class of Professor Joseph P. Vaccaro won the plaudits of the Suffolk University community this spring by becoming the first Massachusetts school to win the American Advertising Federation’s District I college competition.

Representing Suffolk in the program at the University of Rhode Island, the five-member team defeated groups from the University of Rhode Island and the University of Bridgeport to advance to the national competition in Washington D.C.

While they did not win the national competition, they won special praise from the chairman of the American Advertising Federation for their performances.

The Suffolk team was made up of Clare Crowley of Stoughton, Massachusetts; Steve Fields of Pittsfield, Massachusetts; Patrick Vaughan of Marshfield, Massachusetts and Cheryl Steinberg of Watertown, Massachusetts. The fifth member, Lee Simard of Ipswich, Massachusetts did not take part in the Washington competition.

The competing teams considered a real marketing problem faced by a pretzel manufacturer with the students acting as an ad agency trying to win the account. There was a 30-minute presentation followed by a 15-minute question and answer period.
Vaccaro said, "The project began as one of eight separate presentations in my class and the winning team carried it right through to the national competition. It was a great thrill for the competing students and one of the students had the opportunity to meet Vice President Mondale," added Vaccaro. "We are grateful to Dean McDowell and to the administration and board of trustees for the support they provided. As for the competition, it was a tremendous experience for all of us and we are looking forward to next year's class projects."

Seminars Now Offered Nationally

The College of Business Administration's Institute for Business Management extended the geographical scope of two of its highly successful executive programs to a national scale. In association with W.E. Donoghue & Company, a professional educational services and publishing firm located in Medway, Massachusetts, the Institute traveled to over seven major cities to present a wide variety of seminars. The Cash Management Institute Seminar on "How to Manage Corporate Cash Flow" was attended by over one hundred financial executives from twenty-nine states at programs presented in Houston, San Francisco, Boston, Chicago, and Atlanta (the last co-sponsored with Clemson University). This fall, a second program, a three-day "Corporate Cash Management" seminar will be added to the program.

The Center for Executive Development Seminars, designed for personnel executives, included programs on affirmative action, development of grievance procedures, and occupational alcoholism. They were well received in Dallas, Boston, Berkeley (California) and Chicago. Attended by over sixty executives who registered for one to four-day programs, the response was quite encouraging. These programs will again be offered in the fall. Should you be interested in receiving a schedule of the 1977-1978 Seminars, please contact Ms. Marian Dolan, Conference Coordinator, Suffolk University, Beacon Hill, Boston, Massachusetts 02114.

Business Curriculums Are Revised

The College of Business Administration has revised both the undergraduate and graduate school curriculums effective Fall, 1977. The changes were a result of administration, faculty and student attempts to modernize the curriculum and further develop new or existing materials.

In the undergraduate college the program modifications will allow students an in-depth study of the public or private sector and a chosen concentration in one of the five major fields of study: accounting, finance and banking, management, marketing and public management. Several new courses have been added to the curriculum to enrich the students' overall knowledge of the operations and functions of business administration. The program also allows for flexibility in the area of elective courses which enables students to pursue a topic of interest which might not be in the normal course of study.

The curriculums for the graduate school have been developed for students from varied undergraduate and business backgrounds. The Institute of Master in Business Administration (MBA) and the Degree of Master in Public Administration (MPA).
