President’s Message

Dear Alumnus:

As I approach the end of my second year as President of Suffolk University, there is nothing which has given me greater pleasure and satisfaction than the resurgence of the General Alumni Association. The past year has seen an awakened interest which was demonstrated by the response to the updating of the alumni rolls, the interest in the publication of the ALUMNI NEWS, the overflow attendance at the Annual Alumni Dinner, the generous response to the first Annual Alumni Appeal, the many nominations of distinguished alumni for our new Alumni Fellows program and by the enthusiastic response for nominations to serve on the new Alumni Association’s Board of Directors. All of this is evidence to me that the groundwork laid and seeds planted over the past decade by Miss Dorothy McNamara, Secretary of General Alumni Affairs, and the members of our old Alumni Association have begun to bear fruit.

With these solid foundation stones on which to build, this new academic year should be one of exceptional progress in the interest of the Alumni in their University and also of the University towards the Alumni.

Once again, I urge any member of the Alumni Association who has not visited the University in recent years to make a strong effort to do so. Only by this method will you be able to realize the progress that has been made and the great promise for the future.

Sincerely,
Thomas A. Fulham

ALUMNI FELLOWS CITED- BOARD OF DIRECTORS NAMED

HOMECOMING 1972

The first Homecoming ever at Suffolk University was a great success. The evening consisted of dinner, dancing and reminiscing and general good fun. Highlights of Homecoming were the announcement of the three Alumni Fellows and introduction of the newly elected board members of the General Alumni Association. These highlights coupled with the congeniality of the evening made for a great start for future Homecomings.

Dr. Paul G. Buchanan (BSBA '50, M.Ed. '51), Judge Edward T. Martin (LLB '36), and Mr. George A. Strait (LLB '49) were the three alumni named Alumni Fellows. Chosen for their leadership, service and achievement, these three men became the first members of an advisory council made up of Alumni Fellows which will expand by three members annually. (More about Alumni Fellows, page 2.)

The presentation of the 33 directors (for their names and some photos see inside, page 4) was also made during dinner and the new board, with this Homecoming event, officially took office. This was culminating move towards fuller alumni involvement.

John J. Norton (BS '65) was toastmaster for the evening. He introduced President Fulham who spoke briefly regarding his feelings about the revitalization of the new Alumni Association and his personal pleasure in seeing outstanding alumni cited.

Joseph P. Vaccaro of the College of Business Administration and chairman of the Alumni Fellows nominating committee spoke about the awards and the underlying concept for its presentation.

The awards for Alumni Fellows were then presented. Albert L. Hutton, Jr. (JD '55) introduced Judge Martin who mentioned his gratitude to and pride of Suffolk. Judge Martin said that he hoped he would live long enough to repay Suffolk for the education he received.

Matthew Fink (Ab '64) introduced George Strait who expressed his gratitude for the award. Mr. Strait also stressed his special appreciation to Miss Dorothy McNamara, Secretary of General Alumni Affairs, “... without whose encouragement and help, he and many other World War II veterans wouldn’t have made it...”

Paul Buchanan, the third recipient of the Alumni Fellows Award, was introduced by John Norton. Mr. Buchanan expressed his support for President Fulham and the revitalized Alumni Association. He praised Miss McNamara for her continued fine work in Alumni Affairs.

All in all, it was a great evening — from the champagne reception to the last dance. We’re looking forward to next year’s Homecoming already.
At a special program at Homecoming, three graduates were named Alumni Fellows. Paul G. Buchanan, BSBA '50, M.Ed., '51, Edward T. Martin, LLB '36, and George A. Strait, LLB '49 were the three alumni honored this year. As you were told in earlier articles, the purpose of the Alumni Fellows Award is to honor outstanding alumni who have demonstrated achievement service and leadership. A Nominating Committee composed of Suffolk Alumni who are presently administrators or faculty members at the University met and chose these three men from numerous nominations made earlier this summer.

Each of these men received a certificate and were thus inducted as the first members of the Alumni Fellows Council—an advisory council to the University. The Award will be given again next year and we look forward to having three more Alumni Fellows.

For those of you who were unable to make Homecoming, herein follow brief biographies.

Paul G. Buchanan
Dr. Buchanan received his BSBA from Suffolk in 1950, is presently president of Dunbarton College in Washington, D.C. and has had a long and distinguished record in education starting as a teacher in 1950 in the Boston Public School System. While teaching, he held the offices of vice president (1956-58) and president (1958-60) of the Boston Teachers Alliance. Dr. Buchanan was an instructor at Suffolk from 1956-57 in the Education Department and in 1957 became director of the evening division of Coolidge College.

In 1960, Dr. Buchanan began a six year tenure with Bryant College where he first served as Dean of Admissions and continued on to become Assistant to the President. His duties included involvement in the general administration as well as curriculum structuring, admission policies, studies of space utilization and overall development involvement.

D'Youville College was his next step on the way to college presidency. In 1966, Dr. Buchanan undertook the reorganization of administrative procedures and physical plant expansion in an institution whose enrollment had tripled in ten years. He was responsible for the design, supervision, and construction and financing of twelve million dollars in capital expansion.

Finally in 1970, Dr. Buchanan went on to Dunbarton College and its presidency. Despite previous discord, the new harmony he has been able to establish has made possible the re-drafting of the governance of the college in a spirit of contribution from all segments of the college.

Dr. Buchanan's record speaks for itself and Suffolk is proud to honor him as an Alumni Fellow.

Honorable Edward T. Martin
Judge Martin is presently judge for Middlesex Probate Court. He was graduated from Suffolk Law School in 1936. He went into the private practice of law that year and was involved in the area of renegotiation of government contracts.

In 1963, Judge Martin entered into service as First Assistant Attorney General under Edward W. Brooke and argued several important cases before the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts. When Mr. Brooke was elected to the U.S. Senate in 1967, Governor Volpe appointed Judge Martin acting Attorney General of the Commonwealth until Elliot L. Richardson was elected Attorney General. Judge Martin served under Attorney General Richardson as first Assistant Attorney General until he was appointed Chief Secretary by Governor Volpe.

In 1969, Judge Martin had the distinction of receiving two appointments in the same year when he was appointed by Governor Volpe as Judge of the Municipal Court of West Roxbury District; and, later in the same year, he was appointed by acting Governor Sargent as Judge for the Probate Court of Middlesex County where he continues to serve.

Judge Martin is active in community affairs and the law. He is on the Executive Committee of the American Trial Lawyers Association and the Family Law Committee of the Massachusetts Bar Association. Additionally, Judge Martin is Trustee of Agassiz and The Cary Scholarship Fund.

Judge Martin has given generously of his time for seminars, symposiums and workshops on probate law particularly in the area of Domestic Relations and Family Law. The University and its alumni are honored to cite him as Alumni Fellow.

George A. Strait
Mr. Strait has made substantial contributions in elective public service, the field of law and innovation of law libraries. He attended Howard University in Washington D.C. where he received his BA and Suffolk University where he received his LLB degree in 1949. From 1942-46, Mr. Strait was in the army and served in the South Pacific.

He was Associate Librarian at Harvard and wrote and published a comprehensive bibliography on Roscoe Pound, former dean of Harvard Law School. The bibliography was presented to Dean Pound to honor his 90th birthday.

Mr. Strait became head librarian at Northeastern University School of Law when it began in 1969 and within 26 months, the library had approximately 45,000 volumes with an expenditure of capital budget of $125,000. While at Northeastern Mr. Strait instituted a book catalogue computer print-out system substituting it for the traditional card catalogue. Mr. Strait has also held librarian positions at Worcester County Law, Worcester, Massachusetts and the Southern University School of Law, Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

George Strait became the chief librarian of law in the Antioch School of Law in Washington D.C. which opened its doors for the first time on September 5, 1972. In addition to setting up a new library he will teach Legal Bibliography and Legal Research in the combined academic-clinical program. He will also be responsible for training para-professionals in law librarianship.

Suffolk is proud of his election as an Alumni Fellow.
During his first year at Suffolk in 1948, Dr. Stanley M. Vogel became the youngest Ph.D. on the faculty. He came from a teaching position at Princeton University, and his first appointment here was as assistant professor of English and German. Upon the retirement of Dr. Neilson Hannay, he assumed the chairmanship of the English Department, the position which he currently holds.

A native of Norwalk, Connecticut, Dr. Vogel attended New York University on a four year scholarship. He was elected to the Phi Beta Kappa Society in his junior year, and earned his Bachelor of Arts degree with special honors in English. He was then awarded a fellowship to the Yale University Graduate School, but World War II interrupted his educational pursuits. With the war and army service behind him, Dr. Vogel returned to Yale where he completed the Masters and Ph.D. programs. He has since done post graduate work at Harvard and Balliol College, Oxford.

Dr. Vogel is the author of several scholarly works including a volume in the distinguished Yale Studies in English series. In collaboration with the late Dr. Ella Murphy he wrote a series of Literature Outlines which are being used by students all over the country. He not only writes but he reads voluminously. His personal library consists of more than 3,000 volumes, covering the walls of his apartment from floor to ceiling. Many of the books, mostly literature, art, and music, date back to the 17th and 18th centuries. His distinctive bookplate can be found in countless volumes which he has donated to the Suffolk Library.

Alaska to Peru, Finland to Portugal, Ireland to Israel, Russia to Egypt — name the country or continent, and he's probably been there! Photography is his hobby, and thousands of slides fill a closet in his elegantly furnished Beacon Hill bachelor apartment. He has graciously shared his slides and travel experiences with all segments of the Suffolk community on numerous occasions in the past quarter century.

During his tenure as chairman of the English Department, Dr. Vogel has been instrumental in introducing a great variety of literature courses, founding of the literary magazine, Venture, and establishing the Ella Murphy Memorial Scholarship, the income from which provides annually part tuition for a worthy English major. He has served on virtually every committee in the University, and currently sits on the committees for Long Range Planning, Trustee Graduate Scholarship, and Promotion and Tenure.

Dr. Vogel is a member of several professional and educational organizations including the Modern Language Association, the College English Association, and the Harvard Musical Association.

Dr. Robert Munce: Suffolk’s Third President

Historical Review — The Fourth in a Series

Suffolk's third president, Dr. Robert J. Munce, arrived on the Boston educational scene as our Director of the Evening Division for the colleges in 1948. A year later he was named Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, a position which then encompassed all but the law faculty. By 1953, he held the dual post of acting president and dean.

In 1954 the Board of Trustees elected him President of Suffolk University. During his six year tenure, the University grew steadily and surely. He instituted an open door policy whereby anyone in the Suffolk “Family” could drop in and discuss anything. Some of the student requests of the era which were later fulfilled were the implementation of student insurance, a full time placement director, and a full time school nurse.

He was appointed to the new post of Chancellor in 1960, and since 1964 he has been Chancellor Emeritus. An army first sergeant in the first World War, he earned his Bachelor of Arts degree in 1933, a master of arts from Harvard where he was also an administrator. An army first sergeant in the first World War, he earned his Bachelor of Arts degree in 1933, a master of arts from Harvard where he was also an administrator. He later became Registrar of the College of Liberal Arts at Washington University. He also served as Director of the University of Pittsburgh’s Department of High School Education. Suffolk was the recipient of his wealth of administrative skill and experience.

Perhaps it was best expressed in the article “The School on Beacon Hill” which was read into the Congressional Record in 1958, when, referring to Dr. Munce, it was stated that “he is a topmost educator, but above all else, he is human, he is understanding and his kindly attitude does much to make Suffolk so highly regarded among schools and colleges in this territory.”

A long time resident of Marblehead, he and his wife Mary Ann spend the winters at their home in Pompano Beach, Florida.

As Suffolk President and honorary alumnus, he told the 1960 graduates of the importance of belonging “to the Memory Group-Alumni Association. As time gone on” he said, “you will realize that the value of your Suffolk friendships will actually outweigh the value of the ‘textbook learning’.”

“Always remember that as you go, so goes the Suffolk Family, and as the Suffolk Family goes, so you go.

Facilities have been expanded to accommodate the increased enrollment and include the Archer Building, Donahue Building, Ridgeway Lane building and offices at 56 Temple Street. During the past summer, President Thomas A. Fulham has expanded the Law Library and purchased a new home for the College of Business Administration and Journalism at 45-47 Mt. Vernon Street from the New England School of Law (Portia). He has also announced plans to purchase and remodel the Wright and Potter Building on Derne Street. The color scheme has long since changed from liver to modern pastel.

In addition to growth in enrollment and facilities, student financial aid has increased from $167,000 per year in 1962 to $500,000. During the same period, Library holdings have increased from 54,766 books to 127,230 and periodicals from 236 to 920. Less tangible but even more significant progress has been made in the calibre of the faculty and in the quality and variety of the educational programs. Course offerings listed in the catalog increased from 481 in 1968-69 to 597 in 1971-72. This increase reflects attempts to provide both greater relevance and a broader cultural base. Programs have been added in areas such as Social Work, Child Care, Crime and Delinquency, Environmental Technology, Clinical Chemistry, Biochemistry, and an interdepartmental major in Spanish and Sociology to give graduates the capability to work with Spanish speaking people of inner city areas. Perhaps one of the most important areas of progress has been in the reorganization of the alumni association. President Fulham has demonstrated beyond question his commitment to the concept of developing a strong and involved alumni association.

As fascinating as it is to reflect on past and recent progress, it is more important to plan for the future. While the future is inscrutable and few of us are prophets, some trends appear probable. The University will continue to be an urban institution and meet the needs of commuting students, of whom women will constitute an increasing percentage. The curriculum will contain a strong liberal arts core and professional and pre-professional career oriented programs. New directions may include programs such as health programs, career oriented programs for women, and graduate programs in public administration — an area for which the University is uniquely equipped by virtue of its strategic location and its existing resources in law, economics, government, and business administration.

Universities are established to meet social needs and die when they no longer meet these needs, or when their competitors meet them more economically or more effectively. In the decade ahead, Suffolk University will face many serious challenges, including ever-rising costs, limited resources, competition from state-supported colleges, and changing student needs and interests. In facing these challenges, Suffolk University will need to rely heavily on the concerted loyalty and support of the alumni. With alumni support, these challenges can be viewed not as threats to survival, but as opportunities for continued service and progress.
A LOOK AT CURRICULUM-
MEDICAL TECHNOLOGY

The undergraduate curriculum at Suffolk includes several innovative programs of which we would like to inform our alumni body. From time to time this year, we will be presenting thumbnail sketches of those programs which are beyond the traditional offerings at the undergraduate level. This first article is devoted to the medical technology program at Suffolk. Future issues will delve into other programs of interest to alumni.

Dr. Beatrice Snow, acting chairman of the Biology Department, has for the past five years coordinated the medical technology program here at Suffolk. In an interview with her, ALUMNI NEWS was particularly impressed by the tremendous enthusiasm and personal guidance she gives to the program and the students enrolled in the program. Her involvement has gone far toward making the medical technology program much in demand at Suffolk.

In 1967, Medical Technology graduated its first students. Only two people were graduated that year with the degree. The program has grown. The senior class is small (currently 12) but there are 40 declared Medical Technology majors on the undergraduate level.

The program is rigorous and those who complete it, finish the requirements for a degree in biology in three years and in the fourth year are enrolled in an inservice training program at affiliated hospitals. No tuition is charged for this final year of training either by the University or the hospitals, and a minimum of 30 credit hours toward the degree is given in the final year.

Inservice training is 52 weeks in duration and normally starts in September. Students in the program are given instruction by the hospital staff members and final grades are issued by the hospital. Students who want that final inservice training must meet stringent standards and are not allowed to be placed outside the University in their final year unless they are considered able to complete the work. Because of these standards, Suffolk’s program has a fine reputation among affiliated hospitals.

More and more students are becoming interested in medical technology essentially because at graduation, those who hold the degree are able to choose from any number of job opportunities throughout the United States; and, once they have passed the National Registry exam, which gives life certification, they are able to go anywhere in the country and secure employment.

Medical technology is a field of unlimited opportunities. Every graduate of Suffolk’s program has been placed successfully and has been able to choose among several hospitals. Starting salaries are another aspect which makes this program most interesting. The mean salary in the United States last year was $9,690. This, of course, varies with the regional demand. However, in major metropolitan areas, the salary often exceeds the mean.

If you or any of your children or friends are interested in finding out more about the Medical Technology program at Suffolk, contact Dr. Snow, acting chairman of the Biology Department or Mr. William Coughlin, Director of Admissions.

Law School has New Admissions Office

John C. Deliso, a 1972 graduate of Suffolk Law School and former President of the Student Bar Association, was appointed Director of Admissions for the Law School. His appointment was effective July 1 and already Mr. Deliso has the office under full swing. Two other members of the office staff are secretaries Pam Mehringer and Anita Curtis.

The flood of applications last year and the tremendous growth in enrollment in both divisions of the Law School prompted this move on the part of the administration. Prior to this year, applications were handled through the Registrar’s Office and with predictions of over 6,000 applications next year, a decision was made to create this new office.

The demand for legal education in America has been growing steadily for the past ten years. In 1962, only 48,000 people took the Law School Admissions Test compared with 120,000 who took it during 1971-72. Princeton says that in 1977, 204,000 people will take the LSAT. In 1962, enrollment in all law schools across the country was 48,000 and the ‘71-’72 enrollment figure was 95,000 — total enrollment has nearly doubled in the past 10 years. The growth here at Suffolk has exceeded total growth percentages across the country. In 1962, there was a total enrollment of 400 at Suffolk. This year there are over 2,000 students in both divisions of the Law School — in ten years, Suffolk Law School has quintupled in size.

Even though there is a tremendous demand for legal education, the job market for newly graduated lawyers is less than optimistic. Still, people continue to seek a legal education. Various reasons for this phenomenon have been given, but it is generally thought that many people who attend law school may not see the practice of law as a final outgrowth of their education; rather, they are pursuing the degree for use in business, education, and other fields, where it would be advantageous to hold such a degree.

The application deadline this year for both the day and evening divisions of the Law School is FEBRUARY 15, 1973, and it is strongly suggested, if
JOB OPPORTUNITIES

The Director of the Law Placement Center, Anthony DeVico, has several job opportunities for alumni out of school from 2 to 5 years. Trial experience at the Superior Court level is a must for some of the positions. Of particular interest is a vacancy with a nationwide firm, which requires some three to four years experience in real estate transactions.

Mr. DeVico urges alumni to send him copies of resumes so that when opportunities come to his attention, he can contact you.

The Director points out also that the alumni should contact his office when they need the services of an assistant/associate, full or part-time. The students are taking full advantage of the "information center" being established by Mr. DeVico and his capable secretary Miss Paulette Counts. An average of thirty-seven students visit the office daily (the number has gone as high as 63); and the telephone is ringing almost continuously. At present the office is busy setting up interviews with firms and government agencies. Since the start of the school year, some eighty-seven interviews have been arranged.

Mr. DeVico's office is located on the third floor at 56 Temple Street and his telephone number is 732-4700, extensions 352, 353.
