ALUMNUS MAKES MAJOR GIFT

John Sterge signs Suffolk gift as President Fulham looks on

In 1954 John C. Sterge had to leave Suffolk before graduating in order to earn a living. Two decades later he returned to Suffolk to present the University with an interest in one of his oil wells which should net the University approximately $100,000 in the next 5-10 years.

"I was pleased to make the gift," Mr. Sterge told ALUMNI NEWS. "There will always be a warm spot in my heart for Suffolk. While I could not stay on and graduate, I benefited from the years I spent there. If my gift can help the University provide an education for several young men and women I feel it would be worthwhile."

The gift was accepted by President Fulham on behalf of the University's Board of Trustees. "We are very grateful to Mr. Sterge for his great benefaction. It is a source of great pride to me and my fellow Trustees to see a product of Suffolk achieve such success in the business world. We are proud that he attributes part of his success to attending Suffolk."

The gift, the second largest ever made to Suffolk by an individual, was made specifically to cover part of the cost of acquiring the former New England School of Law Building on Mt. Vernon Street, which now houses the College of Business Administration and the Graduate School of Administration.

Mr. Sterge is founder, president, and sole stockholder of An-Car Oil Company, Inc. with headquarters in Boston. The company develops proven areas and explores new and untried areas for gas and oil. An-Car Oil operations extend to three continents covering over five million acres in the United States, Greece, Australia, and the Canadian Arctic.

When he left Suffolk, Mr Sterge became a stockbroker for Elmer Bright and Company, Boston, where he worked five years. One of his customers was involved in oil drilling, which first gave

Alumni Association
President's Message

Dear Alumnus:

It is with great pleasure that I welcome you to the Suffolk University General Alumni Association for the coming year. Each of us shares a common concern in remembering Suffolk University, not only as it was when we were students, but also as it is now. But more than that, many of us envision Suffolk University as it must become—a leader, innovator and stabilizing influence on the future of higher education. In the Commonwealth and the nation.

As members of the Suffolk University General Alumni Association, we know that, as always, the year will be beset with joys and disappointments, successes and failures, questions and some answers. Together, in a spirit of cooperation and friendship, we will attempt to articulate, discuss, and solve the perennial problems whose answers must be found to insure quality education for all those people who now, and in the future, will turn to Suffolk University for guidance and aid.

Today higher education stands at the crossroads. Each college and university

HERBERT C. HAMBELTON:
Alumnus/Trustee

HISTORICAL REVIEW:
THE SEVENTH IN A SERIES

When Herbert C. Hambelton was named to Suffolk's Board of Trustees in 1969, he was the first alumnus of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences given that trust and responsibility. He brought to the Board a wide and distinguished background in the field of education. At the time he was Associate Superintendent for Curriculum Design and Educational Research for the Boston Public Schools.

A year later Hambelton was named Associate Superintendent for Educational Planning for the Boston schools. In that post his responsibilities included: Chairmanship of the Racial Imbalance Task Force; New School Construction; Space Needs; Special Study Teams; Proposal Development; Parochial School Liaison; Demographic Studies; Liaison with the Public Facilities Department of the City and the BRA; Occupational Resource Center; Manpower Training; and other related assignments.

He received both his bachelor's ('55) and master's ('57) degrees in Education, and spent more than a decade teaching in Boston's schools. Hambelton also coached schoolboy baseball, basketball, and track for six years. And for six years he taught evenings at the Roxbury Neighborhood House and the South End and Roxbury School Centers.

Last year he was promoted to his present position, Executive Assistant to the Superintendent of the Boston Schools.

In addition to his doctoral studies in curriculum research at Harvard University in 1965, he has served as an Associate in Education on the Graduate School of Education faculty there since 1968.

A product of the Boston public schools, he holds a High School Certificate in Pupil Adjustment Counseling, and in 1964 he was selected for a two-year fellowship in the doctoral program at Stanford University.

The West Roxbury resident was Program Director of the Citizenship Training Group at the Boston Juvenile Court and a Deputy Probation Officer of the Court from 1955 to 1960.

He and his wife Ruth are the parents of three children; Nancy, Jane, and H. Charles Hambelton.

For four years Hambelton was Administrative Assistant to the Superintendent of the Boston Schools and also held executive positions in the areas of Personnel, Special Services, and Improvement of Instruction. From 1961 to 1963 he was Director of the Public Information Program for the Boston schools, and prior to that he was Manager of the South End School Center for two years.

Active in numerous civic, charitable, and youth groups, Hambelton, a former Boston Park League baseball player belongs to several education organizations.

His memberships include: National Association of School Administrators; National Education Assoc., Mass. Assoc. of School Superintendents; New England Assoc. of School Superintendents; Assoc. for Supervision and Curriculum Development; National School Public Relations Assoc., and from 1958 to 1960 he was on the Board of Directors of the Junior High School Teacher's Club.

Besides his regular duties as a Suffolk Trustee, Hambelton is Vice Chairman of the Board, and his committee assignments are: Special Alumni; College Standing; Library; Nominating; and Athletics.

A Corporator of Boston's Faulkner Hospital, Hambelton told the News that he was "overjoyed and delighted "on his nomination and appointment to the Board of his alma mater, and "it is an honor to serve."

Hambelton's record of achievement and distinction in education brought him back to his alma mater as a Trustee, and the entire Suffolk family, particularly the college alumni, is privileged to have his unique talents working for them.

Alumni interested in the program should contact him at Suffolk for further details.
As an alumnus and long-time law professor at Suffolk Law School, I am obviously deeply honored and extremely pleased to have been appointed Dean of the Law School. Through long personal association as a student, and as a teacher at Suffolk, I believe that I have a profound appreciation of the constructive role which our Law School has historically played in the life of the community as well as a sensitive realization of what must be done, what changes must be made, in order to enable us to move into the forefront of legal education in the 1970’s.

Legal education is of necessity a dynamic and ever-evolving concept. Any law school which merely attempts to stand still, to hold its own, to preserve the status quo in legal education, is doomed to mediocrity. Change is inevitable—in legal education as in the life of the law itself. But wisdom dictates that we not accept change blindly for the sake of change. It is easy to rush off madly in pursuit of every new educational will-o’-the-wisp, every educational fad, that happens to come along. It is infinitely more difficult to evaluate, to weigh carefully, every proposal for change not only in terms of its intrinsic merit objectively perceived, but most importantly, against the background of practice and experience from the past.

In my judgment, true success in legal education demands the adaptation of the best in the past to the best of the present in order to contrive to produce the best in the future. While remaining alert and sensitive to new and emerging trends and vistas in legal education, I shall constantly endeavor to reassess existing programs in the light of past performance and demonstrated value in order to achieve that approximate blending of the old with the new which is most conducive to a successful legal education.

While this initial report to the Alumni obviously cannot set forth in detail all of the plans and programs which are underway, let me in general touch upon some of the most important developments which bode well for the future of the Law School.

By vote of the Trustees, enrollment has been stabilized for the first time and authorization granted for a doubling of the full-time Law Faculty over the next few years. Already seven new full-time members have been added to the Law Faculty this September. Their presence will enable us to diversify our elective course offerings and add to our existing intellectual strength in several basic areas of the law. In addition, it will result in a more realistic and acceptable teacher-student ratio than in the past.

In terms of the physical facilities of the Law School, we have recently acquired additional space in the modern Donahue Building for faculty offices and classrooms and, ultimately, for expanded library facilities. Our space needs continue to remain pressing, but we have begun to make significant progress.

Finally, we have plans underway for greatly expanded clinical education programs. Our highly successful voluntary defenders criminal program will soon be joined by a civil clinical program designed to make available to our students comparable trial experience on the civil side of the court. In addition, we have developed—and are continuing to develop—new clinical opportunities for qualified students in governmental agencies and even in private law offices. An essential element to the success of all of our clinical programs is, and must be, strong and continuing Faculty supervision and control over the conduct of such programs.

As I assume the reins of Leadership of the Law School I believe that I have a realistic recognition of what can and must be done if the Law School, true to its past glory and accomplishments, is to remain a vital force in legal education in the years ahead. Or problems are many. They need not be minimized. But working together, facing up to these problems, I have every confidence that they can be overcome and that Suffolk Law School can continue to add justly deserved lustre to its earlier achievements.

As the new Dean of Suffolk Law School, I respectfully ask for the help and cooperation of all my loyal Alumni in the days ahead. In return, I pledge to you my most earnest and dedicated efforts. has to stand independently. Governmental and other philanthropic agencies cannot be depended upon to aid those institutions faced with decreasing enrollments and crumbling financial structures. It is not necessary “to sell” you on the advantages of an education. Your persistence, determination, and intelligence have carried you to earn your academic degree. But education is more than taking and proving. We owe Suffolk University more than we can hope to repay. Nevertheless, each of us can remain true to its traditions and standards. We are living in a vital, new and exciting age. With your help Suffolk University—our school—can continue to provide an equally vital, new and exciting education.

Unfortunately, studies in higher education have shown that many graduates (for one reason or another) drift away from their parent institutions. This is an unhappy situation, indeed. No college or university is stronger than the depth of enthusiasm and interest of its alumni body. Just as today’s undergraduate calls for a greater voice in educational matters, today’s progressive, concerned administrator asks for more input from alumni. In this area, Suffolk University has taken the lead. We are fortunate to have as our director a man of the character and dedication of President Thomas A. Fulham. No one will listen to alumni with more genuine interest and concern than he. But President Fulham needs your help. Financial, of course, but more than that he wants your ideas—the offspring of the educational process you received at Suffolk. President Fulham and Suffolk University need and want to hear from you. Your General Alumni Association is eager to be your spokesman.

As you know, the Suffolk University General Alumni Association was formed to promote the well-being of Suffolk University, its schools, colleges, and graduates. It is therefore, many things. Academic and intellectual? Of course! But more: it is social, fraternal, purposeful, and avocational. In its desire to promote educational growth, and to undertake everything that must be done to accomplish its important goals, the General Alumni Association can be whatever you wish to make it. Let this be your year to become actively involved in Suffolk University’s goal of leadership in quality higher education.

The highest aim and the most noble dream are nothing more than illusionary until they are acted upon. Help determine reality. Participate with the Suffolk University General Alumni Association.

We are what we are, but with your help there are no limits to what we may become.

Most sincerely,
Dr. George N. Torrey
President, General Alumni Association

Cobscoook Bay Lab Dedicated

This month Suffolk dedicated her marine science facility in Maine to the memory of the late Dr. Robert S. Friedman.

The ceremonies were attended by a dozen college and university presidents, and hundreds of civic, business, and educational leaders.

Located in Edmunds, on Cobscoook Bay, the site is nearly 350 miles from Boston, and ALUMNI NEWS will carry the complete story of the ceremonies and background of the facility in the next issue.

But we can report now that the site has already been used for non-science purposes. As a good-will gesture, Suffolk let the local girl scouts use it last June for their annual Awards Ceremony.

Retail Management Seminar

The Executive Seminar in Retail Management began this fall and continues each Tuesday evening until November 13th. Our College of Business Administration, in conjunction with the Small Business Administration, sponsors the course which covers five areas of retailing: merchandising; sales promotion and advertising; control and operations; personnel and employee relations; and financing your business, according to Dean Robert C. Waehler.

Abraham Green, president of Abe Green Associates, retail management consultants, is director and coordinator of the Seminar. Green, a Lecturer in our business college, is formerly President of R.H. White’s in Boston, and was a vice-president at Stern’s in New York, and Abraham and Straus in Brooklyn.

Featuring experienced retailers as discussion leaders and panelists, the program is aimed primarily at the smaller retail stores. As a good-will gesture, Suffolk let the local girl scouts use it last June for their annual Awards Ceremony.

Featuring experienced retailers as discussion leaders and panelists, the program is aimed primarily at the smaller retail store junior executive.

The Seminar will be offered again next semester, and interested alumni should contact either Dean Waehler or Mr. Green at Suffolk for enrollment particulars.

him the idea to drill his own well. Putting together savings of about $2,500 and cashing in several small investments for a total of about $30,000, Mr. Sterge began to drill his first well in Texas. At about the same time he married. He thought he would combine his honeymoon trip to Mexico with a trip to Texas to see his well "come in." The well was dry—it was, in trade parlance, a dry hole. He had to borrow money to pay his hotel room and barely scraped together the money to return home with his bride. "We never made it to Mexico," he said "and I still get kidded about that at home."

Borrowing from friends, selling everything he owned, and staking everything, he drilled four more wells. Every one of them struck oil. In 1965, Sterge founded An-Car Oil Company with $26,000. Since then it has had a solid record of steady growth. In addition to wholly owned subsidiaries with worldwide rights, An-Car Hellenic (Greece), and An-Car Australian Oil Co., Mr. Sterge is president of Calvin Oil Co., Ltd. (Canada), Offshire Technology, Wichita Drilling Corp., and chairman of a new company, Ro-An-Ca Ventures, Inc., which is making investments in the communications field.

Mr. Sterge is married to the former Dorothy Barrs, whose father, now retired, was for many years professor of English at Northeastern University and who is well known as the host of the popular "Origin of Words" program on Channel 2.

They have three children: Andrew, age 14, Caroline, age 11 and Robert, 9. They reside in Beverly Farms and summer in Oyster Harbors on the Cape. Mr. Sterge also maintains residences in the Virgin Islands and Greece. His memberships include the Athletic Club of Columbus, Ohio, the Bass River Tennis Club, the Bay Club, The Cleveland Athletic Club, The Investment Club, Needham Golf Club, The New York Athletic Club, University Club, Wychmere Harbor Club, and the Young President's Organization. His hobbies include sailing, golf, tennis, painting, fishing and chess. He is perhaps the only oil company president to coach Little League baseball. Mr. Sterge is also the author of a book entitled Investments in Oil, published by Vantage Press in 1969.

Suffolk ALUMNI NEWS joins the entire University family in extending its deep appreciation and thanks to Mr. Sterge for his most generous gift.

Enrollment at Record High

Fall semester registration has brought an all-time record in enrollment at Suffolk University. There are now 6,072 students attending classes in all divisions.

Of the 4,047 students in the Colleges, 2,068 are in the day division, and 1,979 in the evening and part-time. These figures represent an increase of 226 students over last year—a six percent rise in total enrollment in the Colleges. This increase in enrollment is in direct opposition to the national downward trend in enrollments.

In the Law School, there is a total enrollment of 2,025, of which 925 are in the day division, and 1,100 in the evening.

SPRING ALUMNI QUESTIONNAIRE -- Some Results

Of the approximately 400 responses to the Spring Questionnaire, a slim majority stated a preference to receive the monthly Suffolk ALUMNI NEWS instead of a Quarterly Magazine. A Night at the Pops beat out Alumni Dinner/Dance as the annual social event, and the preferred social season picked was spring.

Europe edged out the Caribbean, which in turn surged over the Orient in the proposed alumni group travel program.

Respondents agreed overwhelmingly to continue the Alumni/Faculty Seminars, and a majority preferred they be given on a Saturday, and the seasons were almost equally divided between fall and spring.

Nearly three-quarters of those answering said they would like to receive the student publication, Suffolk Journal.

The figures below are being analyzed, and further reports and action on the entire questionnaire will be made during the academic year.
