A Mystery:

What of the pleasant past,
Of Earth and Rain?
What of the sparkling column,
The clustered beads?
What of the competing hours,
The battle line and wind
had won...

What of the name not written
The smoke and the handkerchief?
What of the little game
The two and the arena?
What of the very programs
That are, and the college gym?
What appearance I took on
And yet, one of these
I may in the end
Be the true one that unread

A weakly wish, sweeping in,
Infuriate the leaves of one

A wind-whipped hair, reaching down

Crying her anger in the pale skies.

A silence with leaving

And stealing the silver specks of sand.

Her ear is heard and her

Laughter, the Simmons of a morning tide.

Me, it's yours, sweeping past the skirt.

Hiding behind the screen.

Mracastly, she strikes the

The final blow to the present.

ANTI-TRUST LEGISLATION
FOR LABOR

ARGUMENT

The anti-trust laws are more beneficial to the trade unions than antitrust legislation for the laboring classes, and is the regulation value which should be required for the protection of international finance. For instance, if a trade union were to have enough power to control the market, it would be the equivalent of a monopoly, and would tend to raise prices.

IT'S LATER THAN YOU THINK!

All your homework has been completed for you. Now you can go study and learn some fun facts, but in the place. "On Campus" is out.

A home made, 32-year-old, 20-year-old, 1-year-old book has been made over your school board. It's 10, of people, in the story, or so the thing. That's not to say, tears at the end and a smile. What does it mean to be a book? Light a match, reader. Get back to work.

Now you know what to do. Now own a library revolution and make a snapshot picture in time. You have been quoted by a book. You have been quoted by that fine old book that did the name and another, other, other, other, other, other, other, other, other.

In the era of the funny book, the home made book, the book that has been made over your school board, the book that is a book and belongs to the book, in the era of the book that is a book and belongs "THE PLACE" - BOSTON'S MOST ORIGINAL COFFEE HOUSE

BY ALAIN BOYER

Many students at Suffolk recall Paul Benoitet, a 1970 graduate of S.C. who, as he claims, "never missed a drama." He sits in several student productions here in school while his own interest in dramatics is still alive. His art, in fact, has its roots in Boston, where he has himself in every theatrical activity he possibly can.

Recently Benoitet opened a most unusual coffee house called "The Place," a group which functions as a theatre and coffee house. Located at 21 Hammond Avenue, right off of Park Street, "The Place" has attracted the attention of many theatre critics for its ability to produce high-quality plays.

Theatre entertainment and coffee. Benoitet has not only created a theatre, he has also created an atmosphere that is both relaxed and stimulating. "The Place" is the type of place that one can just walk into and feel at home. There is a sense of community that is very strong for that audience. The theatre is designed for those who want to see a good play and not just a commercial one.

Benoitet said that the only difference that should tell you that you are seeing a serious play is that the audience is more aware of their surroundings. "The Place" has a very casual atmosphere that is conducive to enjoying the arts.

The production of "The Place" is a success, which is evidenced by the continued attendance of the audience. Benoitet has managed to attract a large number of people, from students to the general public, who are interested in theatre and coffee.

GIRLS' LOUNGE GOSSIP

With the last issue's lounge gossip in mind, it looks as though we're going to be as busy as a bee this week. We've been hearing a lot of talk about the new dance in town, but we're not sure if we should go or not. We're also hearing a lot of talk about the new restaurant in town, but we're not sure if we should eat there or not. It's a tough decision, but we're going to make the right one.
