Local Pastor in High AME Post

Rev. Rooker Smiley, militant young pastor of St. Paul’s AME Church in Cambridge, was appointed chairman of the new Advisory Board to keep the AME church's interests alive during the AME Revival affairs. He was recognized by the church officials that it was a proper time and also to assume a higher post and to be president of the church. He had been mentioned several times for the presidency, which was officially given to Dr. Howard Craig. The church officials were pleased to have him assume the presidency and former editor of the AME Review.

TO THE VOTERS OF WARD 9

A letter by Miss Joanie Chavis of Everett was recently sent by the Everett Advertiser. The letter was a response to a previous letter, the writer of which stated the need for the AME church to become more involved in community affairs.

IT’S LIKE THIS...

To quote a passage by Patric H. Henry, "The gentleman's pow'r is in his peace."

The AME church has a long history in the state and is a matter of record that they have been involved in numerous affairs for a few of the state's most prominent figures. The AME church and its leaders have been involved in facing trials and adversity for peace and for the freedom of those who seek it. The AME church has been involved in this for peace and for the forever-blessed families who will never see them again. In this war, as in the first World War, the major issues are the same. The AME church is not NIP never being involved, and no larger issues than they are concerned are involved.

There can be no peace when the major issues are not entertained. The church should have its say, and the AME church should have its say. This is the time for its say, and the AME church has said its say.

Prov. 300... 400...

David D. Kenney

It is to be regretted that times like these when we have one of the best chances to ever have ever had to start one of our own in the Boston City. It's in this time, however, that the AME church appears to be in a position of power and influence. The AME church has been brought to the forefront of the moment. For myself, one of the discussions, I wish to express my po

RUTH TAYLOR'S COLUMN

Every heart has its own mountain top.

Several years ago on my way home from Hartford, Conn., I stopped at a coffee shop in New Haven to visit a few of the sellers of the small housewares store. While I was there, I saw a little fat girl come into the shop and sit down with the seller at the front door of her office and start drawing at the mountains circling the town. It was sheer imagination, beauty, and skill. "How fortunate are we who live here!" I thought...and said, "I know what you mean—but our stories are always rising to the mountains.""

THE ARMY AIR FORCES

No branch of the American armed services has captured the imagination so tenaciously as the Army Air Forces. To the average American, many members of the American armed forces seem equally if not—if not more—impressive, but the Army Air Forces have not been so much in the public eye. Nevertheless, the American Army Air Forces have made a significant contribution to the Allied war effort, and their performance has been generally admired by both Allied and Axis leaders.

The inclusion of military aeronautics has made a major contribution during the brief span of thirty-eight years. Today's airplanes are a far cry from the rudimentary contraptions of World War I, but the basic principles of flight remain the same.

Negro students of the science have contributed to the development of military aeronautics, and the Negro of the future will be a significant factor in the development of military aviation.
