EVENING DIVISION ATTENDS CONFERENCE

by John A. Walsh

Suffolk University’s Evening Division was fully represented by the Evening Student Council at the Fifth Annual Conference of the International Association of Evening Student Councils at the Yankee Drummer Boy Inn and Motor Lodge in Auburn, Massachusetts, on November 20, 21, and 22.

The five Suffolk delegates, led by Evening Student Council President John Walsh and Vice President Geraldine Lombardo, participated in various workshops and group discussions designed to help evening students and councils meet and solve their problems. The three-day conference was hosted by the Clark University Evening Student Council.

Suffolk University Evening Student Council members, Maxine Emmons, Fred Feely, and William Kilroy all took part in keeping with this year’s theme, “The Successful Operation of the Evening Student Council—A Program for Accomplishment.” The representatives from Suffolk participated in electing national officers and several important committees that will hold office for the coming year. John Walsh was appointed to the Executive Board for the New England Region.

The Evening Division at Suffolk, which joined the International this year, is now part of the educational program whose efforts are exclusively directed to the solution of problems of evening students and administrators.

The following Suffolk member schools from all parts of the United States and Canada. These are broken down into seven regions with Suffolk, Massachusetts, the New England region. Total number of evening students in member schools range from 5oo at Canisius College of Buffalo to 10,000 at University of Akron. Through an exchange of ideas between the Suffolk, University Evening Student Council and members of the International, new programs and activities can be developed for the Evening Division. This can only be accomplished, however, with the full cooperation of the Suffolk Evening Division Student Body.

The Evening Student Council hopes to meet and implement the basic objectives of the International Association at Suffolk University. They are as follows: to represent the evening student to the educational world, to the public at large, and to any organization or body whose activities affect the interest and welfare of the evening student government; to improve programs and facilities.

NEW MAN CLUB PARTICIPATES IN NEW MASS

by R. LeBlanc

The Newman Club of Suffolk University participated in an historical happening on November 22, 1964; Father Troy, Chaplain of the Club, led the members in the new Mass of the vernacular. It was the first Mass attended by the Club this year, the first anniversary of the President’s assassination and the first Sunday on which the new Mass was celebrated.

With the membership in full attendance, the Club felt the impact of the placing of the new stone in the foundation of the Catholic Church. Under the leadership of Carroll Tobi as leader, the Newmanites proudly pronounced their praises to God and their hopes for peace. Symbolizing a new and progressive spirit, the participants received the Holy Eucharist while standing instead of the usual form of kneeling. The idea of the apostolate on a journey has replaced the old notion of a non-participating, stationary following.

Having taken part in this historical event, the Suffolk Newmanites have been endowed with a new sense of realism and purpose in the Church. They are more resolved in their belief that the role of the Catholic layman is one of peace and understanding in relations with those of other faiths. The arthical notion of a fighting, militant church has left us and now, the “confirmed soldiers of God” are a body of progressive, working people who are attempting, much like the members of the Peace Corps, to enlighten those of other faiths.

The Club said “man does not live by bread alone,” but the bread is necessary, and to satisfy this need a Communion Banquet was held at the European Restaurant after the Mass. Thanks to the planning and work of Ken Nasif this event was a great success.

BOSTON PATRIOTS AT SUFFOLK LAW SCHOOL

by Tom McDonald

Presently attending Suffolk Law School’s Evening Division are two members of the Boston Patriots, the 1963 AFL champions. They are linebackers Nick Buoniconti and Don McKinnon.

Nick Buoniconti, a graduate of Catholic High in Springfield, Mass., currently resides in Brighton. He was a star football athlete at Notre Dame where he captained the Fighting Irish. In his senior year at Notre Dame, he played as a two-way guard and led the Irish in tackles.

Nick was originally labeled as being "too small for pro-football", during his sparkling tenure at Notre Dame. However, since joining the Patriots, he has polished his critics to eat their words. (Continued on page 8)

Suffolk Sponsors Educators’ Conference

by Tom McDonald

On Tuesday, November 17, 1964 Suffolk University presented the Annual Education Conference for High School Principals and Guidance Counselors. The program was attended by representatives from various high schools of the Greater Boston area. The guest speaker was Mr. Philip Driscoll, Dean of Admissions at Brandeis University. A graduate of Harvard Graduate School, he joined Brandeis in 1953. Mr. Driscoll was appointed to the Massachusetts Board of Education in 1959 and served as chairman in 1962 and 1963.

In his address he discussed the value patterns of to-day’s dynamic society in reference to college admission procedures. He prefaced his delivery by comparing the youth of today with those of preceding generations. He pointed out that the children of today are not like those of the past generations so far as their need for guidance and direction is more acute. Today’s youth are very much befuddled in the dynamic society of the 20th century. "The old way is no longer satisfactory." The change in former values has resulted in a situation which presents itself in such a fashion as to be traumatic to the student. The values of the last decades are no longer present today. Today’s students find the modern value pattern quite unsettling. Such a situation considers the fact that homogeneity is no longer possible. The followings of society have changed radically. Technological achievements are so encompassing that society as a whole, let alone its youth, is left behind in a chasm of bewilderment.

We must not belittle knowledge and its accomplishments, but we must be fully aware of its far-reaching ramifications, so that we will be in cognizance of what is happening in the world around us. We, as adults, are affected by such a climate and it is our obligation to bear in mind that our youth are likewise affected.

Mr. Driscoll went on to say that a college career is nothing more than a four year recess for many college students. Such an extent of society is the result of our materialistic. Mr. Driscoll’s talk is impregnated with emptiness. He calls the college as a body of teachers not to turn to them with their ideas on life because they will and educators must realize this and be of help to youth. The modern student needs leadership and guidance and here is where the teaching profession is not living up to its responsibility. College is a student’s confrontation for the “self” of a person. It may be and often is disastrous for a teenager although it need not be so. Secondary school teachers isolate themselves and, in so doing, what materialism does to an impressionable child. One evening, Mr. Driscoll asked his son what he planned to do in life. His son answered that he did not have any definite ideas as to what his vocation in life was to be other than the fact that he wished to go to college. Mr. Driscoll feels that his son is representative of a serious and complex problem which exists in America today. The social pressures in our society which build up a requisite for being a “better person” are wrong and must be condemned. We are facetious in our reasoning when we equate a college degree with “success in life.” Such a concept of college does exist and we have an obligation as adults to do something about it. Mr. Driscoll did not believe in the academic ambitions, but he cautioned against the misfortune of going to the extreme end of the spectrum and over-valuing the college degree.

Psychology Club Attends Psychological Conference
by Kathy McLaughlin

"Where is Suffolk? It must be a large school — so many students here." These remarks, overheard by members of the Psychology Club, were made by a lady from Clark University during the course of the New England Psychological Association conference held in Boston, November 13th and 14th. Suffolk was indeed well represented at these meetings. Twenty of our students, majoring in Psychology, Sociology, and other fields, heard professors from schools such as Harvard, Clark, Brandeis, Wesleyan, and Yale give talks on subjects including child language development, sleep and dreams, and genetic influences on behavior. Mrs. Williams and Dr. Liberman represented our faculty at the conference.

As a special student forum, moderated by Dr. Liberman, undergraduates and graduates in Psychology and allied fields had the opportunity to meet, exchange ideas, and to discuss common problems. This forum led to further meetings among students and it is hoped that the communication initiated with members of various colleges will be furthered.

A highlight of the weekend for many was an unexpected session. Professor Abraham Maslow of the Harvard Psychological Society, Professor Abraham Adlum of Brandeis University spent an hour as a dozen Suffolk students answering questions, explaining his concept of "self-actualization," and inquiring about our future plans.

DELTASIGMA PI

The brothers of Delta Pi Chapter of Delta Sigma Pi held its first banquet of the school year on Tuesday evening, November 24th at the Valley's Steak House in Braintree, Mass. Mr. Francis X. Flannery, newly appointed assistant treasurer of Suffolk University, was the principal speaker. The gist of Mr. Flannery's speech centered around the need for a more efficient public accounting system. Immediately followed by the banquet was a question and answer period which proved to be most informative. The evening was terminated with a roast beef dinner enjoyed by all.

This semester, in addition to the brothers of Delta Pi Chapter attended a party organized and sponsored by the pledges. The evening proved to be a most memorable social event for those in attendance. Initiation of the pledges into the fraternity will take place before the Christmas holidays.

NEWMAN CLUB NEWS

On Sunday, November 22, the Newman Club met at the Pauline Center for Mass after which they went to the European Restaurant for a reception in honor of the Christmas raffle for the membership and the university.

On December 20, all those wishing to bring Christmas joy into the hearts of the weary are urged to come. Join in the singing of carols, giving of gifts, and sharing of happiness.

The Newman Club has been active this semester despite the loss of the activities hour. The membership totals nearly sixty students. S.A.M. lapel pins will be distributed to members late in the year. The S.A.M. Newsletter "S.A.M. Help" will continue to be mailed to all members at the frequency of once a month. It contains the policies and goals of the organization as well as articles concerning management. An interesting and informative tour of the Herald Traveler was conducted by member James Miller on October 28th. At the conclusion of the tour, Mr. Staulo and Mr. C. Harry Schreiber, President of Data Service, Inc. spoke on "Data Processing and its Effect on Management". Mr. Robert W. Taylor, Manager at John Hancock Life Insurance Co. and a member of the Boston S.A.M. Chapter, Professor Diamond, our faculty advisor, and other members of the Business faculty attended the meeting.

As part of the S.A.M. officer program, the members of the Newman Club met to plan future events. The full cooperation and participation of the members in scheduled events and fund-raising activities will be needed to insure a successful year.

MODERN LANGUAGE CLUB

As of this fall, the Modern Language Club of S.U. has been reorganized. Officers were elected and are: President, Michael Garber; V.P., Alphonse Merlina; Secretary, Martha Epstein; and Treasurer, Cindy Brady.

Under the auspices of Dr. Feher and the professors of the Language Department, the club hopes to attract interest in modern languages as well as to enhance cultural interest in the individual countries.

On December 8th, the first formal meeting, was held. Mr. Staulo was the guest speaker and showed slides on bull fighting in Spain. This proved very informative, as Mr. Staulo is well versed in Spanish culture.

MARKETING ASSOCIATES

On December 8th, the Marketing Associates sponsored a breakfast at the Golden Dome Restaurant. After the breakfast a film was shown concerning Production. The breakfast was concluded with a general meeting of the society.

As we approach the second semester, the officers would like to remind all business students that they are free to participate in the club's activities, and to invite all present and prospective members to make plans to attend in the coming year.

We of the Marketing Associates would like to wish every student in the school and their families a Merry Christmas and for the new year much happiness and good health.

SUFFOLK ISRAELITES

Members of the Suffolk Israelites held a special memorial service for the late President John F. Kennedy on Wednesday, November 18th, at four o'clock in the State House. Rabbi Shmuel Cohen, Assistant Rabbi of Temple Emanuel, eulogized the late President and said a prayer for the dead in Hebrew and in English. Governor Peabody was also present and spoke to the group after the service.

HUMANITIES CLUB

Sometimes it's fun to take a deep look into our past heritage. That is what the Humanities Club did on November 11th. A trip was made to the Boston Athenaeum to see what New England life in the period 1790-1830 was like. We painted with the artists already made and have been donated by the club. This held at Dr. Pethrick's home in Duxbury. This event is an annual tradition and a fundraiser. Sometimes it's fun to take a deep look into our past heritage. Study Abroad

In the fall of 1965 the International College in Copenhagen offers a program known as "All World Seminar" to all interested students. Assisted by guest lecturers, the students and the director of ICC, Mr. Henning Berelsen, will be working together with a tight group exploring the contemporary geographical, economical, social, political, and cultural situations in the various countries of our world.

Another stimulating feature in the recent brochure for the season 1965-66 is a study tour in East-West relationships — to Poland, East and West Berlin. ICC offers again this year its traditional "Summer Programs" in Copenhagen, a longer summer course in, "Scandinavian Studies" and several varied winter programs under the name "Traveling Program". ICC is attempting to make selected lectures, interesting field trips, pleasant excursions, frank discussions, and social gatherings with young Danish people its means to accomplish its goals: International knowledge, understanding and friendship. ICC is efficient in its method and informal in its approach.

Interested students are encouraged to write to: ICC, Dagstrog 140, Sorborg, Copenhagen, Denmark. (or see the Journal Editor, Room 40)

A CHRISTMAS MESSAGE

Christmas and the beginning of the New Year is a time when many people pause in their lives to reflect over the past and plan for what will come in the future.

During this pensive period some of us pray. Unfortunately we often pray for something but neglect to express gratitude for what we have—something our Christmas presents and send cards. Unfortunately we often give these symbols of love and good wishes simply because it is the social, commercial thing to do.

If we sound bitter it is because we are. We see little sense or purpose in our superficial, shallow lives. We find no comfort in familiar places.

This year when you pause to meditate we ask you to pray in gratitude for what you have and for peace and kindness in the world. When you encounter people for five minutes or five years, your hearts and minds to understand what it really means to give and receive. We know that this is a painful process. Above all whether you pray or not, whether you give or not, be concerned for your fellow man. Make this your major purpose and value in life and pray that your fellow man thinks this also.

WORDS FROM THE MAN OF THE CENTURY

When Winston Churchill won the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1953, the New York Times praised the choice saying, "words well chosen, uttered at the right time, bravely spoken, are the most powerful things in the world. They are powerful because they appeal to the hearts of men."

On his recent birthday, Churchill received greater plaudits than our humble paper could ever offer. It is perhaps more fitting that we quote some of his timeless words and let the thought they stimulate in our reader's minds serve as our tribute. His writings are broad in scope and selecting representative passages is a difficult task. Since Christmas is near and our thoughts are focused on peace we thought his ideas on that subject would be most appropriate. We hope you agree.

"After the end of the World War of 1914 there was a deep conviction and almost universal hope that peace would reign in the world. This heart's desire of all the peoples could easily have been gained by steadfastness in righteousness, and by reasonable common sense and prudence."

"In this solemn hour it is a consolation to recall and dwell upon our repeated efforts for peace. All have been ill-

Dear "Journal" Editor,

For perhaps the first time in years at Suffolk, I have been pleased and proud of our paper. I even let (made) my friends read it. In my humble (?) estimation this has been one of the best efforts ever printed. The overall content was superb. Best and most of various subjects, government to poetry, night school events to sports, was interesting and well written.

I feel that this year's paper must have the finest contributing staff and editor ever. Sincere congratulations for a job well done and good wishes for future issues.

Letters to the Editor . . .

There has been an upsurge caused by a profound lack of "discipline" on the part of many students. Bar more, each class has contributed. These people have, perhaps regretfully, done the wrong thing at the right time, or the "right thing at the wrong time".

It is presumptuous and authoritarian for any closed body to issue codes of strict conduct and expect compliance without active enforce.

And so the all embracing rule-of-thumb, "discipline" is employed. It works quite well usually, for people have a social sense regarding personal conduct. Recent personal conduct has apparently failed to be what it should, or at least that is the general consensus. Now it would be hypocritical of me to point my finger and accuse groups or individuals as others have so valliantly done. The problem is not removed from me or from any day school student in the school. That is why Suffolk, or any reasonable school does not have anything so ridiculous as a scholastic code of commandments. For every rule you make, there is always some erudite type which will break it out of sheer meanness and "cussedness".

Physician, H eed Thyself.

A guiding light to see.

Physician, H eed Thyself.

Discipline is a word necessary to living not only in college society, but society in general. It is that social "savoir faire" that enables the individual to sense the right thing at the right time, and to avoid spending most of the time in making a complete fool of himself.

Some individuals are more aware of social amenities than others. These possess a strict code of conduct which is rigidly adhered to. Others frankly do not care one iota what happens consequent to their actions, or what people in general think of them. Each of these types has a certain code of conduct which he or she usually follows.

Now, for the sake of continuity and order, there must be a norm for school conduct. Since this is neither a police state nor a high school, there can be no completely uniform system. The "right" code for a given student in the school. That is why no student or group of students should attempt or even consider attempting to judge what conduct is proper and what is improper.

These codes of conduct and this social discipline should be sensed by individuals. If they are not, then they might just as well forget the entire "system" of college life.

In keeping with this holy theme, we ask that He fulfill, Whatever be your fondest dream, Whatever be His will.

A peaceful heart, a joy so deep, Guiding light to see, Through all your life, His love and care,

Your Saviour may He be.

Archaeology "digs" in England.

A new and exciting opportunity in England is now offered to College students wanting to spend next summer in Europe in an interesting way.

You may help to reveal the secrets of a Roman villa, an iron-age fort, or the ruins of a medieval town or Anglo-Saxon cathedral before they disappear, perhaps for ever. By applying for one of the many exciting housing programs, city centre re-development and new highway projects in Britain today have opened up many new possibilities for archaeological investigation.

You may help in this important work, earn credits, make international friends and receive valuable training in archeology, by joining a program sponsored by the Association for Cultural Exchange, the British non-profit organization.

Volunteers first join a three-week seminar for training in British archaeology and excavation techniques at Westminster College, Oxford. They then split up into small groups for three or more weeks "diggings" on an archaeological site. Total cost of the program is 575 dollars, including round-trip air transport from New York.

Part scholarships are available to suitable students with a "B" plus average.

Babe, I Have To Leave You

SUFFOLK JOURNAL

The theater often appeals to people of different attitudes in different ways. Some people respond to the actors, others to the situation, some to the love that is present. I believe that every beginning that was never — the end that never will be. Father Time call them.

As a man lonely alone on a stormy sea I sailed over the endless waves of tumult, sinking here, rising there, in search of that horizon of truth but knowing all along my voyage would end incomplete. And you, Virgin Babe, innocent of mind and simple of thought, will soon escape your vacuum of darkness and make life new and make blood flow for true love lingers on. Nor will your knowledge fade away to gain from my misconceptions of humanity. Your age will grow is clean with love and knowledge and your wings of doubt will not seem to be, for the bad always shines brighter than the good. But as sure as you will carry on after me, I know that eventually love will conquer all. Our universal timekeepers will climb the steps of that oneness with reality. And the rays will take your faces and down into their hearts where it can be stored forever in the knowledge until they finally stand on that apex of supreme truth — life's stock exchange where dreams are traded for reality.

The sets received more response from the audience than did the performance of Parley Granger and Signe Hasso. Two sets in particular were exceptional, the red velvet draped drawing room in Hodda Gobler and the masterful railroad embankment complete with red and green switch light. Liliom. Another unusually clever set was the depiction, in Liliom, of heaven as a magistrate court. This portrayal of heaven held a charm but the sets made it very clear that Othello's character (Lily means worthless in Hungarian). Regardless of external pressure, heaven and death, Liliom will not change, and he stole a star for his daughter while in heaven.

As Sparrow, the brassy carousel owner. Signe Hasso played a better part in Liliom than as Lily. She seemed to be stronger at the beginning and conclusion. Signe Hasso played a better part as the brassy carousel owner.

Hodda Gobler made better reading than acting and developed a superb part as the brassy carousel owner.

There is a new album which has recently appeared on the Jazz World scene cut by a comparatively new musician who plays better than a comparatively good clarinet.

The clarinet isn't an easy instrument to play, for its make-up is such that it is like two instruments, each played in a different register. The lower register, known as the chalumeau, yields a warm, mellow sound, whereas the upper register makes the shrill, incite high notes which Jazz created. Because the upper register is harder to play, many musicians like to display their skill in it with exhibitionism which often hurts or distorts the music they play.

The program was varied, all the way from the old Erskine Hawkins' hit, "Tippin' In," to Louis Armstrong's, "Hello Dolly." There are some of Nashville's most versatile musicians and by a vocal group, the Jordanaires.

One of the most entertaining and rewarding nights that I have spent in quite a while was at Lennie's on the Turnpike on November 19th. Appearing there was that showman of jazz, John "Dizzy" Gillespie. Although Diz has been promoting himself for many years now he is in his prime. By this I mean his talent has matured to a point that he is playing better now than he has ever played before. Out of his distinctive horn, with the bell reching for the ceiling, comes a cornucopia of excitement and humor that makes every performance by person a joy. His "put-on" skits with other members of the group, his facial expressions while playing and his impromptu comments make him one of the funniest musicians around.

Reflections on Viet Nam

by Robert Pulenieki

The rifle butt jars violently against the shoulder of the crouching man. A short distance away another man is spun about by the impact of the bullet and falls silently. His companions drop to the ground and seek cover. A slow red splash spreads across the chest of the fallen. The blood congeals quickly in the muggy heat as insects are ravenously attracted by the potential feast.

American soldier. The blood congeals quickly in the muggy heat as have never heard of Viet Nam before. Here a people have dwelt for several centuries. Physically small people, they wrench from the earth a pitiful living as their ancestors before them, constantly attempting to destroy the " Viet Cong." The Cong are communists, brothers in race and purpose to the Viet Minh, victors at Dienbienphu. For destroying the " Viet Cong," the United States has lost men and material and will be disorder in the field. Americans and Vietnamese will continue in result. This poisonous war has ranged indecisively for months. The grass is green but in the bucket and doesn't help relieve unemployment.

The net result is an increase in the number of unemployed. What effects does this growing problem of unemployment have upon the economic structure of this country?

To begin with, this high level of unemployment has a direct effect upon the national economy. It has been estimated that a cumulative loss of over 252 billion dollars has been suffered since the Grosc National Product over the past ten years. An analysis of the problem over a shorter span of time indicates that the effects are no less serious. Our Secretary of Labor, Willard Wirtz, stated that the national economy had been hit in the last eleven months because of unemployment in the last thirty-five years because of strikes... . . . . . . The economy is not functioning as it should.

This deficiency in the economic structure—its inability to realize full employment—has engendered a multitude of social problems. Juvenile delinquency and crimes against property, the onPressing problem of unemployment and the checking of emigration from the South to the North have been identified in the problems of unemployment. Juvenile delinquents come from unemployed or socially deprived families. Their opinion is supplemented by a reyoung appearing in the " AFL-CIO AMERICAN FEDERATIONIST" noting that youthful anti-social behavior, ranging from automobiles to more serious crimes, is rooted in large scale unemployment and the breakdown of the family unit. The answer to this problem may lie in the Democratic Party.

Disunity in the Democratic Party

Within the past fifteen years the Democratic Party has grown to a size and power which is the envy of the Republicans. The elections of the Democrats, when the President was assured of sweeping the country as well as many other Democrats into lesser offices, the Republicans accepted their defeat with grace and dignity. The ballot splitting was enormous even for a state noted for such sophisticated voting; while President Johnson and Senator Kennedy were swamping their opponents, Bellotti and Costello were losing to their Democratic opponents.

The answer to this problem may lie in the Democratic Party. The high degree of success. When a party strives so hard for each and every office of any importance and succeeds so magnificently in doing so, then it has just reason for pride.

But the problem arises of how to maintain such unprecedented success. How do the party leaders keep the members disciplined and the rank and file satisfied? The answer lies in the Democratic leadership that is their best but in our free and easy style of choosing candidates, there's no way of preventing the rise of an ambitious politician in a party simply by selecting him, no way of preventing the rise of an ambitious politician in a party just by selecting him, no way of preventing the rise of an ambitious politician in a party just by selecting him. No one should be used as "pawns" in big power politics, yet no people should be "left to face" because they are too weak to defend themselves.

It is obvious that we must fight and continue to fight. The Viet Cong is Denmark's only people; whether it is successful or whether it joins France in failure. For it has just reason for pride.

Part I

Unemployment is a persistent problem. It is peculiar to all capitalist economies, and the United States has no monopoly on it. The percentage has hovered between 5% and 7%. This percentage reduces numerically to about five million individuals and may be expected to increase during the next few years due to the increasing of a single factor in this project equation--the phenomenon of automation. Hansen remarked: "It is not the rate of progress in productivity permits the discharge of 1.25 million workers a year without suffering serious unemployment. It is that over our labor force is growing at the rate of 1.25 million a year, and as we could continue to maintain output yet at the same time add 2.5 million each year to the unemployment rolls."

The net result is an increase in the number of unemployed. What effects does this growing problem of unemployment have upon the economic and social structure of this country?

To begin with, this high level of unemployment has a direct effect upon the national economy. It has been estimated that a cumulative loss of over 252 billion dollars has been suffered since the Grosc National Product over the past ten years. An analysis of the problem over a shorter span of time indicates that the effects are no less serious. Our Secretary of Labor, Willard Wirtz, stated that the national economy had been hit in the last eleven months because of unemployment in the last thirty-five years because of strikes... . . . . . . The economy is not functioning as it should.

This deficiency in the economic structure—its inability to realize full employment—has engendered a multitude of social problems. Juvenile delinquency and crimes against property, the pressing problem of unemployment and the checking of emigration from the South to the North have been identified in the problems of unemployment. Juvenile delinquents come from unemployed or socially deprived families. Their opinion is supplemented by a reyoung appearing in the " AFL-CIO AMERICAN FEDERATIONIST" noting that youthful anti-social behavior, ranging from automobiles to more serious crimes, is rooted in large scale unemployment and the breakdown of the family unit. The answer to this problem may lie in the Democratic Party.
Those of you who couldn't get a cup of coffee Tuesday, November 24, at the Coffee Hour sponsored by the Evening Division Student Council will be glad to learn that you'll get another chance. (Candia's mug was empty by the time I arrived, but after absorbing the advertising in blank verse no less, in the last JOURNAL.) It will be on Wednesday, December 16, in the Library, and we are assured that this time there will be enough for all. (When, pray tell, will someone have the opportunity to do this for those of you who did not have a chance to order a class ring or a yearbook to do so. Mr. Fitzgerald, the class ring man, will be there with a sample of the rings he's just received.)

Mr. Fitzgerald, the class ring man, will be there with a sample of the rings he's just received. We will try to have, in future columns, a photo of the ring, which is an event we hope to make significant. It is also hoped that the ring will not be the exclusive property of the class of 1970, but that it will be enjoyed by the members of the Council. At the last meeting of the Student Government, the issue of the ring was brought up by Mr. Fitzgerald, the class ring man, who is an event we hope to make significant. CHANUKAH — FESTIVAL OF LIGHTS

In 165 B.C. the Syrian king Antiochus determined to make the Jews give up their religion and worship the Greek gods, in an attempt to strengthen his empire by a unification of religion. But, as an Elizabethan poet wove—"Yours till the Jews convert an age, old obsession will for unity resulted in the Maccabean family's organization of a revolt. In the temple that the victorious Jews restored, only one small cup of holy oil could be found to give thanks to God, but the Talmud tells us that by a "miracle" the oil burned for eight days — thus Chanukah, the "Festival of Lights", which begins on the twenty-fifth day of Kislev and lasts for eight days.

The proximity of the day of Chanukah to that of Christmas puzzles me; other than mere coincidence, could there possibly be any relation between these two holidays? Perhaps I could fumble around with an answer if I look back on my own private experiences with family rituals (Chanukah) and that outside the home (Christmas.)

Perhaps it is this feeling which strikes a chord of harmony with those strains of Christmas. I am thinking of the nervously smiling faces of the shoppers who whiz back and forth along the slushy streets of downtown Boston during the Christmas season — carrying that same air of assumed politeness and gentility — an I-shall-be-good-because-this-is-Chanukah-feeling puzzles me; other than mere coincidence, could there possibly be any relation between these two holidays? Perhaps I could fumble around with an answer if I look back on my own private experiences with family rituals (Chanukah) and that outside the home (Christmas.)

"Oh, excuse me dear, I didn't see your boot sticking out — did I hurt you?"

"Johnny, put the nickel in the nice Salvation Lady's box, that's a good boy."

"Look at the lights in the Common, aren't they beautiful?"

"Ohh — the Santa Claus in the window, isn't he darling?"

"The white snow on that clump of grass — peaceful, huh?"

SPEECH DEPARTMENT TO EXPAND
by Edward G. Titus
Chairman of Speech Dept.

Beginning September, 1965, Suffolk University will again offer a major in Speech. I am grateful to the editors of the Suffolk Journal for this opportunity to acquaint the student body with the speech program and some of the aims of the speech department.

Within the speech major are three areas of concentration. These areas are designed to perform a dual function. The first function is to accommodate the specific needs of the students of Suffolk University, in respect to the exciting curriculum and the individual student's interest desired from that curriculum.

Suffolk students are a special breed, or so I would assume from my exposure to them. If the speech major is to grow, the growth should spring from services rendered, not anticipated. These services, the creation of courses, and the manner in which they are taught, should be tailored to the specific needs of the students. Speech, by its very nature must take this matter in hand if it is to be a meaningful contribution to a complete education.

The three areas of concentration: (1) Speech Education, (2) Business and Industrial Communication and (3) Rhetoric and Public Address, are designed to provide for this individual need. The first area is designed to prepare teachers of speech and offer to the student of education several areas of emphasis within the speech field. Background and emphasis in speech correction, drama, or debate serve in many ways, not the least of which is earning potential. The growing need for teachers with some speech training is increasingly evident. These areas of emphasis provide a wide choice for the student of education, to suit the desires and capabilities of the individual student.

The second function of the Speech Education area of concentration is the creation of a directed corrective speech program. There exists, at present, a large gap between Speech Therapy, concerned with major speech problems of a physical and psychological nature, and adequate speech correction of minor impediments and defects handled as part of an individual's education. This is understandable. The Speech Therapist studies for six years to gain certification. The demand for qualified therapists far exceeds the supply, and they have little time for corrective work of minor problems.

The speech teacher, at best, has been able to procure only a cursory background in corrective procedure. The consequences are all about us. Most minor speech problems, i.e., lip sound substitution and tongue twisters are never diagnosed, and major problems are never diagnosed as requiring therapy.

Scrimmages against M.I.T. and Tufts University proved to be an asset for S.U. They were the only practice games of the early basketball season and coach Law reversed out many mistakes. The Freshmen got their first taste of college basketball and, from the reactions, it was an altogether different type of game than they were accustomed to in high school. In high school they were stars and everything went their way, but in college, they met other players who were their equals.

The first official game was the big test for the inexperienced Rams. The Suffolk team met a strong Bentley team that had just returned from a winning tournament in Maine. According to experts, the Rams were to be beaten by 10 or more points. They were beaten, but it was only by two points. With a few breaks, the score could have gone the other way. Art Piper, a promising Freshman, scored 23 points and played an excellent game. Sophomore Ken DiBonna came through with flying colors. Dickie Morgan, a decade ago. Don McKinnon is also a local high school graduate. Don began his athletic career at Matignon High School in his senior year. From there he proceeded to Dartmouth where he played the positions of center and linebacker and was named All-East in the fall of 1962.

In his senior year at Dartmouth he made the All-East team and was named to the Football Writers' All-America. This made him the first authentic All-American at Dartmouth since Bob McLeod of the mid-thirties. The last greater Boston All American prior to Don was Endicott Peabody at Harvard. Don was also selected the first Ivy League "All" since Princeton's Dick Kazmaier a decade ago.

Don was the first in his rookie group to sign a Patriot pact at the end of the grid season and was so impressive during the pre-season workout that he ousted veteran Ronnie Laoud as reserve backer for the Pats.

The former Dartmouth center was injured in his year's pre-season training. However, he has worked out with the squad and was thus available for reactivation when the Pats needed him to ease the manpower shortage created by the loss of Bob Yates.

Boston Patriots (Continued from page 1) on several occasions. Coach Mike Holovak crediting Nick as being "the best middle linebacker in the AFL", at the close of last season's campaign.

"Skippy," as he is commonly called by his friends, displaced two-year veteran Harry Jacobs as middle linebacker in his second pro game and has proceeded with laudable vigor to become the best in the business. Nick has truly justified his worthiness of the 1970 Boomer's Trophy as Boston's rookie of the Year in 1961.

It's too early to give any statistics on alumni response to recent alumni. Information is being gathered in, and with a student staff that keeps us hopping with deadlines to meet, it's difficult to keep up with each new development. However, you should know that some interesting bits of information did come in. Because of time, space, etc., we'll give capsules now and in later issues we'll expand on them.

The only surviving member of Suffolk Law School's first graduating class, Mr. George L. Bush, wrote to Miss Mack and asked for a Journal subscription, Mr. Bush, '09, is 82 years old, lives in Minneapolis, and more about him later. Edwin R. Rubenstein wrote from Bloomfield, N.J., congratulating Suffolk on its new alumni office, asking for the Journal, and adding that he is executive vice-president of Baldwin Oils and Commodities, Inc.

Atty. Charles F. Butler was given a testimonial dinner on his retirement from the Internal Revenue Service. He will practice law, and teach at S.U., evenings. Philip H. Swaseb, an alumni council member, was honored by the National Life Insurance Co. with membership in the President's Club. Previously he was the '1963 Rookie of the Year.'

Henry R. Selvitella, Journalism instructor at Medford High School, has won both regional and national honors for the student-staffed paper, the Mustang, on which he serves as adviser. With the Boston Globe's annual Class A award for best school newspaper two years in a row, and placed first in both Columbia U's Scholastic Press competition, and Iowa State's Quill and Scroll. Paul T. Rabchenek was awarded a master of public administration degree at the University of Pittsburgh. His studies were sponsored by the Aloha Foundation after a nationwide competition.

Paul E. Tierman was promoted from his job as chief of the review staff of the Boston Internal Revenue Service to chief of the audit division of the Providence office of IRS. John Day is manager of the Friendly Ice Cream at Legion Shopping Center, Rehoboth. Edward R. Mann has joined the Gloucester office of the Mass. Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Kids.

William H. Ledin is now assistant cashier of the National Bank of Plympton County. The only man to hold the presidency of the Junior Advertising Club of Boston two terms in a row is Fredley Berman, who is executive vice-president of Commonwealth Press. Ethelmae Chinopoulos has joined Moseart Corp. in Everett as a research chemist after serving with the Children's Cancer Research Foundation.
