Symposium to air biomed ethics International event to develop public policy goals

A faculty of national and international experts is being assembled by Suffolk Law School to participate in a symposium that will address a global issue - biomedical ethics and public policy. The symposium is entitled "Law and Science at the Crossroads - Biomedical Technology, Ethics, Public Policy and the Law." The program will be held October 21-22, 1993, at Le Meridien Hotel in Boston.

The two-day symposium will address cutting-edge issues in the fields of organ and tissue transplantation, genetics and biomedical technology, according to Associate Dean Russell G. Murphy. The aim of the conference will be to confront complex biomedical issues and develop public policy goals for the next decade. It represents an area of the law and public policy that should have worldwide implications.

The symposium is being presented in cooperation with the Office of Continuing Education at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center.

The list of confirmed faculty for the event includes distinguished international and national figures from law, medicine, academia, private industry, government and science.

The group includes world-renowned surgeon Dr. Joseph E. Murray, who received the Nobel Prize in medicine in 1990 for his pioneering work in the area of kidney transplantation. He is Professor of Surgery, emeritus, at Harvard Medical School, and Chief of Plastic Surgery, emeritus, at Brigham & Women's Hospital and Children's Hospital Medical Center, Boston.

Also scheduled to participate is Congressman Henry A. Waxman of California, the Democratic chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee Subcommittee on Health and the Environment. A member of Congress since 1979, he now leads the subcommittee that has jurisdiction dealing with major health issues.

Suffolk Law Professor Barry Brown, faculty coordinator of planning for the symposium, placed the event's agenda in perspective: "New developments in transplanting organs and tissues have created the potential to treat victims of debilitating illnesses, and advances in human gene therapy could soon lead to the prevention of hereditary diseases.

"Courts still apply inflexible principles of law to matters involving novel medical advancements. The emerging new technologies raise a host of ethical, legal and public policy dilemmas including issues of the right to experiment, to confidentiality, informed consent, availability of resources, patentability and source compensation."

Continued Professor Brown: "There must be public discussion and debate of these and other crucial questions if our society is to have progress with equity in biomedicine." The Law School's symposium will meet that need with a multi-disciplinary problem-solving focus on biomedical issues as they affect ethics, public policy and the law.

Other faculty confirmed, to date, are: Dr. Paul R. Billings of the California Pacific Medical Center, San Francisco; Rabbi David Bleich, Professor of Law at the Cardozo School of Law and Tenzer Professor of Jewish Law and Ethics,

REP. HENRY A. WAXMAN

Yeshiva University, New York; Dr. Arthur Caplan, Program Director of the Medical School Institute and Department Resident Professor of Ethics, University of Minnesota; Ernest A. Carabillo, Jr., Esq., president, EXPERTech Associates, Inc., Concord, Mass.

John L. Cova, Ph.D., M.P.H., director, Medical Technology Assessment, Health Insurance Association of America, Washington, D.C.; Geoffrey F. Cox, senior vice president, Genzyme Corporation, Cambridge, Mass.; Robert Gellman, Esq., chief counsel, Subcommittee on Government Information, Justice & Agriculture, U.S. House of Representatives; Professor Ruth Hubbard of the Harvard University Bio Lab, Cambridge.

Eric T. Juengst, chief of the Ethical, Legal and Social Implication Branch, National Center for Human Genome Research, Bethesda, Md.; Raja B. Khauli, M.D., F.A.C.S., associate professor of Surgery/Urology and Physiology, and director, Transplantation Surgery, University of Massachusetts Medical Center; the Hon. Eugene Lynch, U.S. District Court, San Francisco; Robert B. Meyer, counsel, ACLI, Washington; Dr. Aubrey Milunsky, director of human genetics, Boston University School of Medicine; A. Jason Mirabito, Esq., Wolf, Greenfield & Sacks, Boston; Dr. Philip Reilly, executive director, Eunice Kennedy Shriver Center for Mental Retardation, Waltham, Mass.

Dean Murphy said the proceedings - which will feature both scholarly presentations and panel discussions - will be published. A special edition of the Law Review and possible independent publication are being considered.

Plans, to date, call for the symposium's initial session to focus on progress and dilemmas in organ and tissue transplantation and research. Nobel Laureate Murray will present an overview of the evolution of organ transplantation technology. The first day's afternoon session will consider the genetic engineering of tissues and organs.

The symposium's second day will focus on the role of government in the biomedical revolution.

Suffolk President David J. Sargent and Law School Dean Paul R. Sugarman will open the symposium. Law School Professors Brown, Linda C. Fentiman and Stephen C. Hicks comprise the Faculty Planning Committee with Professor Brown, serving as overall coordinator. Carole Wagan, Director of the Center for Advanced Legal Studies, also is closely involved in the planning.

An Advisory Committee is comprised of: Donald J. Evans, Esq., of Goodwin, Proctor & Hoar, and counsel to the Mass. Biotechnology Council; David A. Fine, Esq., of Ropes & Gray; Ellen L. ## Scholarship fund honors Paul Smith

Family and friends of the late Paul T. Smith, Esq., the renowned trial lawyer who was a Suffolk alumnus and Trustee, have established a scholarship fund in his memory.

Mr. Smith, who died last May at the age of 76, had a long association with the University. He received his J.D. from Suffolk in 1937, his L.L.M. in 1938 and an honorary Doctor of Jurisprudence degree in 1960. He was a Trustee for close to 20 years.

In a special resolution, the Board of Trustees noted that, in Mr. Smith's passing, the "University lost a towering friend and advocate of legal education, the bar (lost) a great leader, the oppressed a true champion and the nation a renowned trial attorney who became a legend in his own time."

The Fund created in his honor will provide financial assistance to Law School students. Donations should be directed to Suffolk Law School, and designated for The Paul T. Smith Scholarship Fund.

Alumni honor Judge Fenton, two others at annual fete

The annual Law School Alumni Dinner attracted more than 400 graduates and friends in December to honor Judge John E. Fenton, Chief Administrative Judge of Massachusetts Trial Courts, who has served the School for 35 years as faculty member and associate dean.

On behalf of the University and the Law School, Chief Justice Paul J. Liacos of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court presented a special recognition award to Judge Fenton as a highlight of the event at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel.

The award commemorated Judge Fenton's recent elevation to the post of Chief Administrative Judge. It also recognized his long relationship with Suffolk that began in 1957 when he joined the Law School faculty.

Judge Fenton continues his association with the Law School even today, teaching a course on evidence in the evening division. In addition to his long service on the faculty, he also served as associate dean in the early 1970s. He is a member of Summa, the University's leadership-level giving club. In addition, friends and family have endowed a scholarship fund in his honor.

Also honored during the Association's annual event were the Hon. Joan N. Feeney, JD78, who received the Outstanding Alumni Achievement Award, and William T. Hogan III, JD81, who received the Outstanding Alumni Service Award. Judge Feeney recently was named to a seat on the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Boston, the same court she had served as a clerk after her graduation from Suffolk Law School. Hogan, a partner in the Boston firm of Hogan & Roache, has been active in alumni affairs. He founded the Barristers, a donor-recognition club, and has been a member of the committees for the Cameron Scholarship Fund and the Cameron Dinner. He also is a Summa member.

Alumni Receptions

The Alumni Outreach Program brought the Law School to receptions in close to a dozen cities - coast to coast - last year, and includes 14 stops this year.

A year ago, the schedule literally extended from Maine to California. This year, receptions already have been held in San Francisco; Hartford, Conn.; Bangor, Maine; New York City and Bedford, N.H.

The schedule for the remainder of the year also includes: Chicago, Feb. 9; Philadelphia, Feb. 10; West Springfield, Mass., Feb. 18; Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Feb. 23; Naples, Fla., Feb. 25; Worcester, Mass., March 10; Phoenix, Ariz., March 31; Los Angeles, April 2; and Washington, D.C., May 2.

Faculty Notes

Jeffrey C. Atik had his paper, "Investment Contests and Subsidy Limitations in the European Community," published in the Virginia Journal of International Law. In December, he also presented a paper on "Structural Contracts in International Technology Alliances" at the annual meeting of the European International Business Association in Reading, England.

Michael L. Rustad participated in a Citizens for Civil Justice Reform Debate on "The Punitive Damages Explosion: Fact or Fiction." The Washington, D.C. event also included Ted Olson of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher and Phil Lacovara of Morgan Stanley & Co. Professor Rustad also testified recently for a U.S. House Committee on Science, Space and Technology hearing on the Products Liability Fairness Act of 1992.

Charles P. Kindregan, Associate Dean of the Law School, was the recipient of the Freedman Award of the Massachusetts Chapter of the American Academy of Matrimonial Lawyers in recognition of his "invaluable services to the Bench and Bar of the Commonwealth." He also has been named to the Panel of Contributing Editors of the Massachusetts Family Law Journal.

Victoria J. Dodd recently served on an American Bar Association/American Association of Law Schools inspection team for a California law school. She is chairperson-elect of the AALS Section on Law and Education.

Robert P. Wasson Jr. spent the 1991-92 academic year as a Fulbright Scholar on the Faculty of Law at the University of Nairobi in Kenya. His paper on legal responses to the AIDS crisis by the United States and Kenya was published by the Suffolk Transnational Law Journal in October.

Karen Blum, at the invitation of the Judicial Conference for the Tenth Circuit in Colorado, conducted a workshop for magistrate judges, appellate staff counsel and law clerks. For several years, she has served as a faculty member for workshops and training sessions sponsored by the Federal Judicial Center, the organization responsible for training and educating federal and magistrate judges.

Hon. Benjamin Kaplan wrote the lead article in the current edition of the Suffolk University Law Review. Entitled "The Great Civil Rights Case of Hague v. CIO: Notes of a Survivor," the article is a detailed recounting of his lecture series at Brown University honoring the memory of Alexander Meiklejohn.

Richard M. Perlmutter and Jeffrey D. Wittenberg co-authored a contracts case book to be used in first-year law classes entitled Contracts, Contemporary Cases, Comments and Problems published by Anderson Publishing Company. The third co-author is Michael Closen of the faculty at John Marshall Law School, Chicago.

R. Lisle Baker offers commentary on a 45-minute videotape made last summer to mark the 300th anniversary of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts. His comments focus on the role of appellate courts and how the SJC has responded to new technologies.

Kate Nace Day presented a paper on "Discovering Our Connections: Race and Gender in the Theory and Practice of Law" at a symposium at American University in Washington, D.C., in September. The paper has been accepted for publication in the American University Journal of Gender and the Law.

Steven M. Eisenstat's article, "The HIV Infected Health Care Worker: the New AIDS Scapegoat," was published in the Spring 1992 issue of Rutgers Law Review, and also was cited as recommended reading by the National Commission on AIDS.

Russell G. Murphy, Associate Dean, was a member of a panel that led a discussion on "Careers and Opportunities in the Law" in December, presented by the Boston Bar Association's Young Lawyers Section at the offices of Ropes & Gray.

Steven C. Hicks has been invited to present his paper, "Citizenship and the Modern Legal Theory of the State," at the World Congress of the International Association of Law and Social Philosophy in Iceland in May.

Michael J. Slinger has an essay, "Placing the Horse Before the Cart: The Need to Convince Law Firm Partners and Law Professors of the Inadequacy of Legal Research Training at Law Schools as First Step in Developing a Successful Training Solution," in a compendium published by the West Publishing Co.

David McCord is a visiting professor at Suffolk Law School for the current academic year. A tenured professor at Drake Law School in Des Moines, Iowa, he is a graduate of Harvard Law School. He is teaching criminal law, trial practice and post-conviction remedies.

Heidi M. Schooner also is a visiting professor during the current academic year, teaching commercial law and banking law. A graduate of Georgetown University Law School, she has taught at Georgetown and at Marymount University.

Bench, Bar posts for alumni

Law School graduates are being named to the bench and positions of leadership in Bar associations in increasing numbers. Alumni recently appointed or nominated include the following:

In June, the Hon. Peter J. Panuthos, JD69, was appointed as Chief Special Trial Judge of the United States Tax Court. A member of the court since 1983, Judge Panuthos is a past president of the Suffolk Law School Association of Metropolitan Washington, D.C. and, in 1990, received the Outstanding Alumni Achievement Award of the Law School Alumni Association.

Joan N. Feeney, JD78, was selected in October for a judgeship on the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Boston. She had been a bankruptcy lawyer and partner at the Boston firm of Hanify & King. Judge Feeney was the recipient of the Outstanding Alumni Achievement Award at the 1992 Alumni Association annual dinner.

In late December, the Hon. Robert V. Cauchon, JD57, was appointed as Chief Justice of the Land Court Department of the Massachusetts Trial Court. He had been an Associate Justice since 1986, and succeeds the Hon. John E. Fenton, Jr., who was named Chief Administrative Judge of the Massachusetts Trial Courts. (See photo on Page 1)

In July, Robert J. Mellon, JD77, was named to a judgeship on the Court of Common Pleas of Bucks County, Pennsylvania. He had been a partner at the firm of Mellon, Webster & Mellon.

In October, Regina L. Quinlan, JD73, was named an Associate Justice of the Superior Court of Massachusetts. She had been a partner at the Boston firm of Quinlan & Smith. Earlier in her career Judge Quinlan was a member of the order of the Sisters of St. Joseph. She also has served as president of the board of Rosie's Place, a women's shelter in Roxbury, Mass.

Named an Associate Justice of the Ipswich (Mass.) District Court was Robert A. Cornetta, JD76. Formerly, he was general counsel for the Saugus Credit Union.

Two members of one graduating class - 1981 - were recently sworn in as judges in Massachusetts. Francis T. Crimmins, Jr. was named an Associate Justice of Stoughton District Court and Anna H. Doherty was named an Associate Justice of Plymouth Probate Court.

Bruce G. Pollock, JD74, was elected president of the Rhode Island State Bar Association. A solo practitioner in West Warwick, Pollock is the first Suffolk Law alumnus to lead the R.I. Bar.

Carol A.M. DiMento, JD77, was elected the first woman president of the nation's oldest organization of lawyers, the Essex County Bar Association in Massachusetts. Since 1978, she has been a member of the Swampscott (Mass.) law firm DiMento & DiMento with her husband, William R. DiMento, who also is a Suffolk Law graduate.

Edward P. Ryan Jr., JD76, has been elected president of the Worcester County Bar in Central Massachusetts. He was joined by that association's president-elect, Anthony Vigliotti, JD67.

Virginia Lawton Duffett, JD83, was elected president of the Fourth Middlesex (Mass.) Bar.

Eleanor I. Druckman, JD82, was appointed executive director of the Massachusetts Bar Association.

Dean Paul R. Sugarman, commenting on the appointments, said: "The achievements of these members of the bench and leaders of various Bar Associations reflect great credit not only upon them, but on Suffolk Law School as well. They are to be congratulated and we are exceedingly proud of them."

Testimonial dinner for Professor Cella

Suffolk Law School Professor Alexander Cella will be honored at a testimonial dinner for his continued dedicated service to the legal community and legal education. The event is scheduled for the evening of Wednesday, April 21, at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel.

Proceeds will be used to establish an endowed scholarship fund in Professor Cella's name to benefit students of the Law School. Tickets are $125 each ($50 for dinner, $75 as a deductible contribution). Information is available by calling the Law School Development Office at 617-573-8514.

Briefly...

Women in a majority

For the first time in the history of Suffolk Law School, women students outnumber men. Figures from the Registrar's Office show that women comprise 56 percent of the first-year day class and 52 percent of the first-year evening division. Dean of Admissions John C. Deliso reported that, over the past 20 years, female enrollment has increased from 6 percent to 53 percent overall.

Goodwin award winners

Andrew D'Angelo and Joanne Belasco, both third-year day students, won 1992 Harold B. Goodwin, Jr. Awards as best trial advocates during the final round of the Mock Trial Competition in November. The event attracted a large crowd to the School's Moot Courtroom. The winners received $2,000 scholarship awards and prints of the famous Winslow Homer sketch that depicts jurors listening to counsel in 1869 at the New York Supreme Court.

Best-brief award, again

For the second consecutive year, the Law School's Moot Court Team earned the "best-brief award" in the Northeast Regionals of the National Moot Court Competition in November at the U.S. District Courthouse in Boston. Team members were Douglas Carns, Kelly Ann Doherty and Kimberly Kelly. Faculty advisers were Professors Stephen J. Callahan and Thomas Finn.

National competition

For the third time, the Law School competed in the National Invitation Trial competition ("Tournament of Champions") in Houston, Texas. Suffolk was one of only 12 law schools selected nationwide. Andrew D'Angelo earned the "best advocate award." Next year, Suffolk will be the host school for the national competition.

American Council Scholar

Jennifer Merrigan, a third-year student and editor-in-chief of the Suffolk Law Review, has been awarded a $2,000 scholarship by the American Council Association, based on academic achievement and extra-curricular activity.

Advanced Legal Studies: A decade of service

The Law School's Center for Advanced Legal Studies has a new name, a new director and some new offerings this year. But, a decade after its founding, the Center's focus remains on service and quality.

The new director is Carole Wagan. A member of the Massachusetts Bar, she is the former director of the Legal Advocacy and Resource Center and program attorney for Massachusetts Continuing Legal Education. A cum laude graduate of Ohio State, she received her juris doctor degree from New England School of Law. Her predecessor, Professor Anthony B. Sandoe, returns to full-time teaching after leading what was then the Center for Continuing Professional Development for five years.

Associate Dean Charles P. Kindregan, who founded the program at Suffolk in 1982, praised the selection of Ms. Wagan as the new director. "I am sure that Carole Wagan will continue to build on the excellent reputation of the program which has developed over the past decade, and especially under the guidance of Professor Anthony Sandoe. The people who worked to build a successful program, such as our first Program Coordinator Gretchen Favorat, are pleased to see the way it is developing and the new directions in which Ms. Wagan is taking the program."

One new direction was illustrated by a December offering, the "Elder Law Institute: An Interdisciplinary Approach," which focused on public policy, estate planning and ethical issues.

Coming up is a one-day, mini-trial demonstration scheduled for Feb. 26. "How to Try a Discrimination Case to a Jury" will feature a series of demonstrations of trial techniques for counsel of both plaintiffs and defendants.

For seven weeks, beginning March 11, the focus will be on family law with

"Consider the Children: Current Issues in Family Law Practice." The seven-part series will continue on March 18 and 25, April 1, 8, 15 and 22.

On May 21, at the Massachusetts Maritime Academy, the Center will sponsor a program on "Admiralty Law for the General Practitioner."

On June 24, in Providence, R.I., the program will focus on "Highlights and Sidelights of Torts" led by Professor Thomas F. Lambert, Jr.

Did you know?

Suffolk Law School's Tom C. Clark Moot Court Competition marked its 20th anniversary in 1992, two decades since it was named for the late Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

Justice Clark visited the School's moot courtroom in the spring of 1972 to lead a three-judge panel that heard arguments in the final round of that year's student competition. Joining Clark on the Suffolk bench were Chief Judge Bailey Aldrich of the Court of Appeals for the First Circuit and Judge Frank J. Murray of the U.S. District Court for Massachusetts.

It was during his visit that the competition was named for Justice Clark and a portrait of him was placed in the moot courtroom as the highlight of a dedication ceremony. A reception and dinner followed the competition's final arguments.

Leonard J. Henson, JD72, then president of the Moot Court Board and now a Chief Assistant District Attorney for Suffolk County, is one who recalls inviting Justice Clark to sit as the chief judge for the competition. Henson also pointed out that Justice Clark had retired after 18 years of service on the nation's highest court when his son, Ramsey Clark, was appointed U.S. Attorney General in 1967.

Ramsey Clark later followed his father to Suffolk, to sit on the same judicial panel for the Clark competition over which Justice Clark had once presided.
