Attorney General Outlines Program

Speaking in the Suffolk auditorium on Feb. 14, the Commonwealth’s Attorney General Elliott Richardson outlined his views on the role of the Attorney General in Massachusetts.

The Attorney General’s first goal is to stop organized crime in the Commonwealth and to put the criminals behind bars. Richardson described organized crime as "a problem that has become more widespread in recent years," and he asserted that the Attorney General’s office is working to combat it. He said that the Attorney General’s office has made significant progress in recent years, and he expressed confidence that the trend will continue.

Richardson emphasized the importance of law enforcement cooperation among all levels of government. He said that the Attorney General’s office has established close relationships with law enforcement agencies at the local, state, and federal levels, and he praised the efforts of police departments, sheriffs, and district attorneys in the Commonwealth.

He also discussed the Attorney General’s role in defending the Commonwealth’s interests in court. He said that the Attorney General’s office files suits on behalf of the Commonwealth in a variety of areas, including environmental protection, consumer protection, and intellectual property.

Richardson concluded by expressing his commitment to serving the Commonwealth as Attorney General. He said that he will work to protect the Commonwealth’s interests and to ensure that justice is served.

Letters to the Editor

Parking Problem and Expansion

Mr. Editor:

Knowledge of Suffolk University's struggle with the parking problem is shared by every student on campus. The agenda of class cannot be separated from the problem of finding a place to park the car. In fact, several students have even suggested the use of a parking meter system to control parking problems. However, there are some critical aspects of the parking problem that could be addressed:

1. Student lounges

Student lounges, such as the ones in the 100 block and the libraries, have limited space. If the administration and cooperation with the students can come up with a better way to utilize this space, then it would be easier to find a place to park.

2. Student Power

Students have the power to address the parking problem. If students were more involved in the decision-making process, then they would be more satisfied with the final outcome. Students should have a say in the planning of the campus and the process of finding a place to park.

3. Student Council

The Student Council should take an active role in addressing the parking problem. By organizing a committee to work on the issue, the council can help find a solution to the problem.

4. Student Involvement

Students can also help by volunteering to help during the rush hour. This would help to ease the congestion and make it easier for students to find parking.

In conclusion, the parking problem is a critical issue for the campus. Addressing it requires the cooperation of the administration, the students, and the Student Council. Only by working together can we find a solution to this problem and improve the overall campus experience.

What Am I Saying?
by Katia Parris

I'm not sure what I'm saying. I was just thinking about the past and how much has changed. Back then, people didn't have smartphones or the internet. They had to write letters and use the postal service to communicate. Now, everything is so fast and convenient. It's hard to imagine living without technology.

But the past also has its charm. People were simpler back then. They didn't have the same pressures we do today. It's a balance, I suppose. It's good to have technology to make our lives easier, but it's also good to take a step back and appreciate the beauty of the past.

What do you think? Have you noticed any changes in your life? Have you ever longed for the past or wished for the future?

Dear Mr. Ryan:

I regret that I must write you in such haste, as I have a rather heavy official schedule this morning. I have not had time to read the recent issue of Delta Sigma Pi and I am not sure I was able to focus properly on your letter, but I must say that your letter touched a nerve. I am heartened to see that the University of Suffolk is taking such an active role in the education of our cadets. I am especially pleased to see that the University is providing such a comprehensive program of study and that it is preparing our cadets for the challenges they will face in the world of work. I believe that the University is doing an excellent job and I want to thank you for the opportunity to participate in this important work.

Sincerely yours,

The Rams beat their rivals in the annual Alumni basketball game at the Cambridge YMCA. Among the stars for the seniors were Bill Tremblay ’65, and Kevin Murphy ’64. One player who stood out was a 6'7" tall forward named Alex Crowley, who was the most valuable player of the game. He scored 20 points, including a dramatic three-pointer at the buzzer to win the game for the Rams.

For the first time, the Alumni Association sponsored a bake sale and raffle to raise money for the annual Scholarship Fund. The event was a huge success, with over 500 people attending and raising over $5000. The money will be used to help offset the costs of tuition for future students.

The event was hosted by the Alumni Association and sponsored by the Cambridge YMCA. The proceeds will be used to support the Scholarship Fund, which provides financial aid to students who otherwise might not be able to attend.
