HISTORY OF SUFFOLK UNIVERSITY

“History has demonstrated that the great leaders of every age were, almost without exception, born in poverty, denied educational advantages in boyhood, and obliged to educate themselves at odd moments while doing a man’s work in the world. The same immutable principle is in operation today—the earnest souls who now toil in the evening schools to fit themselves for life will be found in the front ranks of our civilization of tomorrow.”

—Gleason L. Archer (1923)

SUFFOLK UNIVERSITY FOUNDED IN 1906

Suffolk University grew from humble beginnings in the Roxbury parlor of Gleason L. Archer, a young lawyer who had worked his way through high school and college. A chance meeting brought Archer together with a benefactor who loaned him money to pursue the study of law, asking only that Archer pass along the favor.

In 1906, Archer opened the Suffolk School of Law, a night school established to “serve ambitious young men who are obliged to work for a living while studying law.” He believed that the growing waves of immigrants who came to America’s shores should be given the same opportunities that had been the privilege of the wealthy few.

Archer soon moved the school into his downtown law offices, and in 1908 machinist and Archer student Roland E. Brown passed the bar. News of Brown’s achievement led to a boost in registration, so Archer gave up his law practice to devote himself full-time to the Suffolk School of Law. By 1930, Archer had built Suffolk into one of the largest law schools in the country.

The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences—later renamed the College of Arts and Sciences—was founded in 1934 in response to the recommended standard that law students possess a college degree, and because Archer wanted to create “a great evening university” that working people could afford.

Three years later, in 1937, the College of Business Administration, now the Sawyer Business School, was established. It offered the possibility of the extension of intellectual analysis into the field of business.

The three academic units were incorporated as Suffolk University in 1937, and, over the years, the University expanded from its night-school format to incorporate a range of full- and part-time programs.

THE UNIVERSITY TODAY

The Law School offers Juris Doctor and Master of Laws degrees. Its expansive curriculum combines a strong academic foundation with expertise in an array of specialty areas. Nationally known faculty and a range of practical experiences provide superior preparation for law practice in the 21st century.

The College of Arts and Sciences consists of 17 academic departments, including the New England School of Art and Design. The college offers more than 50 programs of specialized study at the baccalaureate, master, and doctoral levels.

Suffolk University Sawyer Business School's undergraduate and graduate programs emphasize global business practice. Nine undergraduate majors are offered, and graduate programs lead to more than a dozen advanced degrees, including joint degree programs with the Law School. Suffolk Business School also offers an online MBA program.

Suffolk students today hail from across the nation and around the world. Once a commuter school, the University now has three residence halls, allowing resident students to fully realize the academic and cultural promise of their Beacon Hill surroundings. Suffolk's classrooms, libraries, and offices are housed in 17 buildings in downtown Boston.

In 1995, the University's first international campus was opened in Madrid. A second international campus, in Dakar, Senegal, opened in 1999. Satellite campuses also have been established in Massachusetts in North Andover, West Barnstable, and Franklin.

The academic attire worn during the commencement exercises by the graduates, faculty members, deans, trustees, the president, and the other members of the academic procession, had its origin during the Middle Ages at the medieval universities. The long black gown, the basic garment of the academic attire, was worn for warmth and to conceal food and sometimes wine to be consumed during lecture recesses. The square cap, the shape of which resembles a book, a mason's mortarboard, or the quadrangle shape of the Oxford University campus, usually has a black tassel indicating a bachelor's or master's degree, or a gold tassel indicating a doctoral degree. The hood, which is the most colorful raiment, was used as a cowl, a cape, an alms sack, or to protect the wearer's wig from the elements.

In modern times, the wearing of academic attire was codified by the American Council on Education. Contemporary guidelines specify that the standard color for caps and gowns is black, that the material be cotton poplin, that there be no trimming on the gowns worn by recipients of baccalaureate or master's degrees, that the doctoral gown may be faced with black velvet trim with three bars of black velvet across the sleeves, that the trimming of the doctoral hood be of velvet and signify the academic area of the degree, and that the hood lining reflect the official color or colors of the college or university conferring the degree. The hood trimming colors designate the following degrees. Yellow indicates master of science, master of arts in interior design, and certificate of advanced graduate study; magenta indicates master of arts in journalism; light blue indicates master of education; blue-violet indicates master of arts in graphic design; white indicates master of arts in psychology; copper indicates master of science in international education; dark blue indicates master of science in political science and master of science in ethics and public policy; and salmon indicates master of arts in women's health. The larger dark blue hoods designate the PhD degree in clinical psychology and economics.

Within certain permissible limits, universities may vary the style and color of the caps and gowns worn by their graduates. These variations may be noticed in the academic procession.

Colored cords are worn by our Law School graduates and College of Arts and Sciences and Sawyer Business School undergraduates who have been awarded graduation honors. Gold cords signify summa cum laude honors, silver signifies magna cum laude honors, and bronze indicates cum laude honors. The College of Arts and Sciences and the Sawyer Business School also recognize honor distinctions for transfer graduates—blue and gold cords for Highest Distinction, blue and silver cords for High Distinction, and blue and bronze for Distinction. Business students inducted into the Beta Gamma Sigma International Honor Society are wearing a royal blue satin honor stole outlined in gold with the Beta Gamma Sigma key logo.

Karen B. DeSalvo, MD, MPH, MSc is a Professor of Medicine at Tulane School of Medicine and holds the C. Thorpe Ray Endowed Chair in Internal Medicine. She serves as Vice Dean for Community Affairs and Health Policy, and has responsibility for implementing the Medical School's mission to build healthier communities, including oversight of the community health center programs. Dr. DeSalvo's research and policy experience is on improving access to quality community health care, particularly for vulnerable populations.

Dr. DeSalvo has been a leader in health sector recovery and health care reform efforts in Louisiana since Hurricane Katrina. Part of this work includes the creation of nationally award winning models of neighborhood-based care for low income, uninsured, and other vulnerable populations in a city that previously had none. She is responsible for the development of three comprehensive community based health centers with outreach programs, that grew from meager beginnings post-Hurricane Katrina from a street-based first aid station.

She was selected as a founding member of the Louisiana Health Care Quality Forum Board and is the current President-elect. She is a member of the Louisiana Medical Care Advisory Committee and Vice Chair of the Louisiana Health Care Commission. Dr. DeSalvo served as the Co-Chair for New Orleans Mayor Mitch Landrieu's Health Care Transition Team.

Dr. DeSalvo was recognized as a Woman of Excellence in Health Care by the Louisiana Legislative Women's Caucus for her health care reform efforts in 2008. Under her leadership, the Tulane School of Medicine was recognized as one of the top medical schools in the US by the American Association of Medical Colleges for community service in 2009.

She received her Bachelor of Arts from Suffolk University in Boston, Massachusetts in Biology and Political Science. She then matriculated to Tulane University Health Sciences Center where she simultaneously received her Medical Doctorate and Masters of Public Health degrees. Dr. DeSalvo remained at Tulane as a resident, Chief Resident, and Fellow in Internal Medicine, and completed her National Health Service Corps obligation at Charity Hospital in New Orleans. She participated as a fellow in the Program of Clinical Effectiveness at Harvard University and completed a Masters in Clinical Epidemiology at the Harvard School of Public Health in May of 2002.

Inclusion in the program does not indicate degree conferral; degrees will be awarded when all University requirements have been fulfilled.
