Research May Hurt Teaching

MASSACHUSETTS—As the number of PhDs increases, the number of teaching assistants and graduate students increases, according to a report issued by the American Council on Education. As more teaching assistants are hired, the quality of teaching may suffer. The report was prepared by the National Opinion Research Center at the University of Chicago. The report points out that while the number of teaching assistants and graduate students is increasing, the number of full-time faculty is decreasing. This may lead to a decrease in the quality of teaching. The report also recommends that teaching assistants and graduate students be given more training and support. The report concludes that research is important, but it should not come at the expense of teaching.

Kent State Visits Suffolk

Suffolk University, located in Boston, Massachusetts, welcomed a delegation of Kent State University students and faculty members last week. The visit was arranged by the Kent State University Study Abroad Office. The delegation included professors and students from the Kent State University School of Journalism and Mass Communication. The visit was an opportunity for the students to learn about Suffolk University's programs and to experience life in Boston. The delegation visited Suffolk University's campus and met with students and faculty. The visit was a success and both institutions look forward to future opportunities for collaboration.

Kent State University in Ohio is again the subject of political controversy, this time involving the campus police. The police officer who arrested a student during a campus demonstration was suspended without pay pending an investigation. The suspension was the result of a complaint filed by a student who alleged that the police officer used excessive force during the arrest. The university has stated that it is conducting a thorough investigation of the incident.
Interview:

Peter Butterfield, SAA Chairman

By Scott Davis

Peter Butterfield, chairman of the Student Affairs Association (SAA), has been a driving force behind the recent changes at Suffolk. He is the first in line to the Student Government Association (SGA) and believes that the changes he has initiated will continue to shape Suffolk's future.

First Case under Justice Code

The first case under the new Justice Code was recently heard in the Student Government Board (SGB). The case involved a student who was accused of violating the code and was appealing the decision. The SGB ruled in favor of the student, stating that the code was too vague and that the student had not been given a fair hearing.

It's Not Too Late! Kent State: It's Important

Prospective students are supposed to be warned of the risks of the policy, and should have the opportunity to make an informed decision. However, many students are unaware of the potential dangers of enrolling at Kent State. In recent years, Kent State has made headlines for its flagrant violations of student rights and freedoms. The university has been found guilty of violating the First Amendment rights of students, who have been arrested, harassed, and expelled for exercising their right to free speech. The university's actions have been deemed unconstitutional by the courts, and students have been forced to defend themselves in court. Despite these facts, many prospective students are unaware of the risks at Kent State. The university's flagrant violations of student rights and freedoms are a serious concern, and should be taken into account by prospective students. In order to protect the students, the university should be held accountable for its actions, and the students' rights should be protected.

S.U. Grad Becomes College Pres.

By Anne Power

This seems to be the first time that a college president has been in the position of student president. Throughout the country, student presidents are typically elected by the student body to represent their interests and concerns. However, this year, the student president at Boston College in Newton, Massachusetts, is a former student president, making him the first college president in the history of the university.

The student president, Paul Sheridan, has been serving as a student president at Boston College since 1995. He has been involved in student government since his undergraduate years, and has served in various capacities, including student council president and president of the student senate.

Sheridan's role as college president is a testament to the opportunities that exist for students to be leaders and advocates for their communities. It also highlights the importance of recognizing and valuing the contributions of student leaders.

Recognition of SDS Subject of Hearing

The Franklin County court has scheduled a hearing to determine if the student organization, SDS, is subject to the terms of the university's SGA charter. SDS has been active in promoting political and social justice issues on campus, and has been involved in several protests and demonstrations.

The hearing is scheduled to take place on March 22, 1972, at 2 p.m. in the Franklin County Courthouse. The proceedings will be open to the public, and anyone with an interest in the case is encouraged to attend.

A bill has been introduced in Congress that would facilitate the appointment of student representatives to the Student Government Association (SGA) at Boston College. The bill, sponsored by Representative John Conyers (D-MI), seeks to ensure that student representatives are appointed to the SGA by the university's board of trustees, rather than being elected by the student body.

Suffolk’s handpicked and serenaded servers have been known to work for the past three months without complaint and without a complaint department. A controversy between what the students receive in return for their efforts and how much they should be paid has been going on since Suffolk was in the planning stages.

In the beginning, Suffolk’s installation was to be the best in the country. The students were to be well paid and well treated. However, it seems that the school has not been willing to pay more than an average amount for the students’ work, as the students are currently being paid the standard rate for their services.

The students have been working hard to provide the best possible service to the Suffolk community. They have been working long hours, often in less than ideal conditions, and have been asked to perform tasks that are not within their job description. Despite this, the students have continued to work hard and provide excellent service.

The school’s administration has been criticized for not providing adequate compensation for the students’ work. The students have been asked to work in areas that are not within their job description, and have been asked to perform tasks that are not within their job description. Despite this, the students have continued to work hard and provide excellent service.

Suffolk Accepts More
Transfers than Freshmen

in Lower Division

Suffolk accepts 261 transfers, 5 per cent more than in 1963.
Despite the current panic about transfer students, the college now has more transfers than in any previous year. In 1962, 218 were transferred, while 261 transfers arrived this fall. All transfers were received at the_va.

The rate for transfers is the same as others in the college. The average age of transfers is 19, while the average age of the college is 20.6. In addition, the college has many seniors who are transferring in the 1964 spring semester.

The college has found that 70 per cent of the transfers get a grade over 2.0 or better their first semester at Suffolk. The students who transfer are brighter than the students who stay in their home college.

CHILDREN'S THEATRE - NOV. 21, 28, 29

For the seventh year, the Suffolk University Children's Theatre brings to the stage this wonderful holiday entertainment. A full cast of children is supplemented by two professional actors in this adaptation of the children's classic, "The Little Orphan Annie." This year's production is directed by Dr. Elizabeth Lyons, Associate Professor of English at the University of North Carolina. "We hope to give the children a chance to learn about the meaning of the holidays," says Dr. Lyons. "We want them to enjoy the show and have fun, but we also want to make them think about the meaning of the season."

PRESENTED BY SUFFOLK THEATRE
CHILDREN'S THEATRE - NOV. 21, 28, 29

For the second year, the Suffolk University Children's Theatre under the direction of Patricia A. Foster, presented an assembly of productions for children. The theme of the productions was "Theatre of the Impossible," featuring the seven elements of high music and good songs, humor, fantasy, poetry, parodies, and music and dance with the highest of thought.

Roses from the winners of the show are about to be voted for the awards of costume and the productions. The children's shows are included students' shows, which are won through the selection of the children's shows.

The show was written and directed by Patricia A. Foster, produced by T. W. Jones, and engineered by Michael J. Matarazzo. The lighting design was by Mark J. Allen.

‘Happy Birthday, Beethoven!’ - A Humanities Club Happening!

by Bob Keen

A 200th birthday party for the world’s most famous composer will be held on Saturday, December 11, at 8 p.m. at the Humanities Club, 100 Main St. The event will feature music, a lecture, and a book signing with the composer’s great-great-granddaughter, Mrs. Margaret von Beethoven.

The party will begin with a performance of Beethoven’s Ninth Symphony by the University Symphony Orchestra. Following the concert, Dr. Charles Beethoven, the composer’s great-great-grandson, will give a talk on the life and works of Beethoven. The lecture will be followed by a book signing with Mrs. Beethoven, who has written a new biography of her famous relative.

‘Sidelong Glances of a Pigeon Kicker’

in Philip K. Kean

A new documentary film about the life of a pigeon kicker is set to premiere at the Suffolk Union Theatre on December 11. The film, directed by Philip K. Kean, explores the world of pigeon kicking, a sport that has been enjoyed by millions of people around the world.

Kean, a former pigeon kicker himself, was inspired to make the film after attending a pigeon-kicking competition in Chicago. The film features interviews with pigeon kickers from around the country, as well as footage of actual competitions.

Goin' Down the Road and Five Easy Pieces

By Kenneth Jenkins

Within the past few years, there has been a great deal of interest in railroad travel. A number of films have been made which feature the variety of people and situations that can be found on a train. The film this year has a long tradition behind it. It is a classic of the genre. Although it is set in the present, it deals with the Big Brother in a way that makes it seem relevant to the present as well. The director, Arthur Patrick, has done a splendid job of capturing the spirit of the road and the people who travel on it. The film is a great disappointment from the script, but it is well directed and the acting is superb. The cast is outstanding and the photography is excellent.

N. Carolina School Under Progressive Program

The N. Carolina School Under Progressive Program is under new management, and the newly appointed director, Mr. James Mackenzie, has introduced a number of changes. Among the new features is a new system of grading, which aims to encourage students to take more responsibility for their own learning. The school has also implemented a new curriculum that focuses on project-based learning and interdisciplinary studies. Students are encouraged to develop their interests and skills through hands-on projects and real-world experiences.

Chatham College Eliminates Traditional Requirements

Chatham College is pleased to announce that it has eliminated all traditional graduation requirements, including the foreign language requirement. The college believes that this new approach will better prepare students for the demands of the modern workforce. Students now have the flexibility to design their own academic paths, focusing on their interests and career goals. The college has also introduced a new co-curricular program that encourages students to engage in community service and leadership activities.

Attention Seniors and Graduate Students
