Joint Council Recommends Optional Attendance Taking

by Andy Cannata

After lengthy deliberation, the Joint Council on Student Affairs has advised the administration of a new optional attendance policy as an alternative to the existing unlimited cut system since the spring semester.

The proposed policy, to be evaluated after two years, provides for optional attendance taking of freshman in all courses and upperclassmen in laboratories, foreign languages, physical education, health reading and development and other study skill courses.

Receiving unanimous approval by the committee on March 18 meeting, the policy stated:

"Suffolk University is consumed with the value of the regular class attendance in order that the student may take advantage of all the benefits that his educational experience may provide. The student who has been qualified academically may make a concentrated effort to reduce his total attendance but may not make an academic penalty thereby.

"The purpose of this is to facilitate consultation and intercommunication; however, no academic penalty attached to non-attendance in any class will be imposed when attendance is a class. No student will be required to be responsible for obtaining from the professor or other students any knowledge of what happened in class or for any special information after attendance."

In an attempt to clarify the solution of the Student and his problem as well as the academic policy, the Board of Trustees at a meeting of March 10 set down new policy standards on Academic Standing.

This clarification came necessary after Richard Del'Arco, president, of the Student Government Association raised questions regarding University policy in the first code involving the New Code of Justice. Therefore, the new policies are:

1. (A) A freshman (or first semester junior) shall be placed on probation if his cumulative honor point average is below 1.85. A sophomore (or second semester junior) shall be placed on probation if his cumulative honor point average is below 2.00. A junior (or third semester senior) or a senior shall be placed on probation if his cumulative average is below 2.00.

2. (B) All freshmen or sophomores who are not on probation but who have a cumulative honor point average of 2.00, receive a letter of warning from the Dean.

3. (C) No student on academic probation shall be eligible to compete in athletics, student government, or any social or student organization activities. However, a student in academic probation may continue his membership in extracurricular activities such as clubs or organizations but not be a member of the staff of any publication.

In the event his average does not improve the Dean of his College or the Academic Standing Committee may require him to enroll in extracurricular activities as a condition for continuation at Suffolk University.

4. A student who has been placed on probation will generally be given until the following semester's first grading period to improve his average and continue to remain in good academic standing. The satisfactory average the student has previously subject to suspension or dismissal from the University after review by the Dean of the Academic Standing Committee.

At the end of each academic year all freshmen with an average of less than 1.4, all sophomores with an average of less than 1.6, all juniors with an average of less than 2.0, and all seniors with an average of less than 2.3 will be placed on academic suspension. The student may continue his enrollment at the University unless the Committee makes an exception because of unusual circumstances.

5. (A) Any student who has been dismissed for academic deficiency may as a matter of right file a typewritten petition to the Faculty Academic Standing Committee for reinstatement. The support of the petition request for reinstatement specifically and fully. Each petitioner shall submit such petition to the office of the Dean within 15 days of receipt of notice of dismissal. A filing fee of $15 is required.

6. (B) A student who has been dismissed for academic deficiency may as a matter of right file a typewritten petition to the Faculty Academic Standing Committee for reinstatement. The support of the petition request for reinstatement specifically and fully. Each petitioner shall submit such petition to the office of the Dean within 15 days of receipt of notice of dismissal. A filing fee of $15 is required.

8. (A) All day students who have been dismissed for academic deficiency may as a matter of right file a typewritten petition to the Faculty Academic Standing Committee for reinstatement. The support of the petition request for reinstatement specifically and fully. Each petitioner shall submit such petition to the office of the Dean within 15 days of receipt of notice of dismissal. A filing fee of $15 is required.

9. (B) All day students who have been dismissed for academic deficiency may as a matter of right file a typewritten petition to the Faculty Academic Standing Committee for reinstatement. The support of the petition request for reinstatement specifically and fully. Each petitioner shall submit such petition to the office of the Dean within 15 days of receipt of notice of dismissal. A filing fee of $15 is required.

10. (A) All day students who are required by the University to enroll or continue a complete a regular development course and do not do so will be dropped from the University.

11. (B) All full time undergraduates are expected to complete at least four courses during the fall semester. Those who fail to do so may remain only on a pass/fail basis."

Financial Aid Information Released

The dean of Students, Office is in charge of processing financial aid applications for the 1971-1972 academic year. All students currently receiving financial aid, scholarship, loan employment, or grant aid are urged to submit their renewal forms to the University's financial aid office. The renewal forms must be received by the University administration by April 15, 1971. The office of Student Financial Aid has prepared a brochure that describes the renewal forms in the mail with appropriate instructions.

The forms consist of a Suffolk University financial aid application that should be returned to the dean of Students, Office as soon as received and a Request for Confidential Statement that should be sent to the College School of Business, 7th Floor, Providence, New Jersey, as soon as received.

Students not currently receiving financial aid assistance from Suffolk and who wish to apply for aid for 1971-72 may do so by completing the Suffolk financial aid application and the renewal statement prior to May 1, 1971.

Applications should be made as soon as possible, according to the dean of Students, Office. The dean's office will attempt to award financial aid on a first-come, first-served basis to the extent that the funds allowed will be available. Attendance in the summer sessions is a requirement for students receiving financial aid.

Suffolk offers a variety of materials to help determine the cost of obtaining higher education for those students who have financial need. The School of Business is offering a complete list of financial aid and scholarship information to all Suffolk students with financial need. This list includes such things as the different types of aid available, the terms and conditions of each type of aid, and the amount of aid available. This information is also available from the dean of Students, Office.

The dean of Students, Office, will be happy to provide assistance with the renewal application process. Additionally, the dean's office is available to answer any questions or concerns that you may have regarding the renewal process.

Senior Week Activities Announced

Senior Class President Richard Dell Ana has announced plans for the Senior Week celebrations. The activities will begin on Thursday, May 16, and continue through Saturday, May 18. The theme for Senior Week is "The Future of Suffolk: A Celebration of Our Achievements and Potential." The week will feature a variety of events, including a Senior Banquet, a Senior Ball, and a Senior Awards Ceremony.

The Senior Banquet will be held on Thursday, May 16, at the Boston Marriott Hotel. The event will feature a reception, dinner, and live entertainment. The Senior Ball will take place on Friday, May 17, at the Hyatt Regency Boston. The ball will feature a formal dinner, live music, and dancing. The Senior Awards Ceremony will be held on Saturday, May 18, at the University of Massachusetts Amherst. The ceremony will feature awards for academic excellence, community service, and leadership.

Additional information can be found on the Suffolk University website or by contacting the Office of Student Affairs. We look forward to seeing you at Senior Week's events.

Senior Week Activities Announced

Senior Class President Richard Dell'Aria has announced plans for Senior Week to take place the week before spring vacation. This year, Senior Week will be held from June 1 to June 5. The City Council has determined that no more than four awards will be given. Funds for Senior Week are provided by the City Council, the Student Council, and the SGA. The committee, which consists of class officers and Senior Week Committee members, will meet to finalize plans for the week. Senator Charles McGovern, SGA representative for the Class of 1972, has been selected to chair the committee.

Faculty and Staff Involved

The committee has determined that the week will begin with a welcome address to the seniors by President William A. Healey. Faculty members will be invited to speak on various topics related to their fields, including economics, history, and literature. The week will conclude with a farewell address to the seniors by President Healey. The committee has also determined that the week will include a variety of events, including a talent show, a dance, a baseball game, and a prom. The events will be held on the campus of Suffolk University, and the committee has determined that there will be a total of five events.

Carnegie Commission Urges Campus Bill of Rights

Chicago, Ill. — The Carnegie Commission on Higher Education proposed earlier this month adoption of "Bills of Rights and Responsibilities" for members of American colleges and universities, and suggested new guidelines for campus responses to disorder and disruption.

At a press briefing here on a report to be published, by McGraw Hill in April, Dr. Clark Kerr, the Commission's chairman, said the commission formed that, in recent years, American campuses have been in "the greatest turmoil in all of their history. Disobedience, revolution, and disruption that reflect concerns of many current problems in American society and many probably derived from the colleges period and are expected to be present on campuses for the foreseeable future.

The commission's new report is addressed principally to the students, faculty, trustees, and administrators of the nation's campuses, and recommends procedures designed to assure that dissent and disruption on campuses be expressed in constructive ways and in accordance with the principles of a free society. Specifically the report recommends these three steps:

1. Adoption campus by campus of a 'Bill of Rights and Responsibilities' for Members of the Institution: A model bill is suggested.

2. Development, by each campus, of effective measures for consultation and contingency planning in the event of disruptive emergencies.

In particular, the commission says, a campus is not and cannot be a sanctuary from the general law and thus, must relate more consciously and effectively with the police than it did in earlier periods.

3. Creation by each campus of effective judicial procedures. Consideration of using external panels and persons of the general courts for certain types of cases is suggested.

One of the difficulties in dealing sometimes "violence" is that "organizing dissent and academic conflict... what are the basic rights which must be protected on the campuses as they should be for all citizens everywhere?"

Disruption is defined by the commission as "Any action not protected by the First Amendment and which interferes with the rights of others. Whereas disruption relies on persuasion, disruption is based on coercion and an assault on democracy."

The report says that disruption is "organized "organized dissent" and academic conflict... what the basic rights which must be protected on the campuses as they should be for all citizens everywhere?"

S.U. Prof. Advocates Student 'Head Tax'

By Kent Jarrett

A Suffolk University professor threw his weight behind a new 'summer session rejection' proposal, saying that the city's financial troubles are such that it can't afford to turn down a little charity. Right now, it's up to the education community to take the lead in seeking and implementing the program. If they don't, they won't be able to give something in return. And the city's financial troubles are such that it can't afford to turn down a little charity. Right now, it's up to the education community to take the lead in seeking and implementing the program. If they don't, they won't be able to get their money back.

The editorial reads as follows:

Money in everyone's mind. If the financial plight of the community can be resolved, I think it will be. And Boston University probably has more to do with it than most. The capital is burdened with huge blocks of tax exempt land owned by government, churches, and other educational institutions. Residents and businesses are not able to bear the entire load. The editorial comes from those who are perfectly reasonable. The students at Phi Mu Alpha of the Suffolk University Biology Department has proposed a head tax on students. It would amount to $6.00 per person and $3.00 to be added to the student activities of the colleges.

A new summer school program for Suffolk University is being considered, consisting of a single eight-week term, with three course limits. The colleges have also been considering the city's financial troubles. However, the editors of the student newspaper have expressed a negative view toward the plan.

The sunken school would offer a program of courses designed to meet the needs of returning students and those who wish to take advantage of the new summer term. The courses would be offered in the evenings and on weekends, and would be taught by leading professors from the university. The editors of the student newspaper have expressed a negative view toward the plan.

The student newspaper has also expressed concern that the proposed head tax would be used to support other activities, such as the school newspaper and the college newspaper. The editors have also stated their concern that the proposed head tax would be used to support other activities, such as the school newspaper and the college newspaper.

The two new head tax plans are used at universities and colleges, respectively, because it makes for the most efficient use of the school's resources. As the expanded plan would call for 300,000 students instead of the current 30,000, it would be more cost-effective. The proposed budget increase was to $500,000, which is not enough to support the proposal.

The proposed head tax has advantages for both students and institutions. Students would be able to take both halves of a full year course in one summer. Summer session would not be affected by the new plan.

The plan is not accepted by the university. However, it is accepted by the city. It is believed that the program could be used to support other activities, such as the school newspaper and the college newspaper.

The editors of the student newspaper have expressed concern that the proposed head tax would be used to support other activities, such as the school newspaper and the college newspaper. The editors have also stated their concern that the proposed head tax would be used to support other activities, such as the school newspaper and the college newspaper.

The Mattson Proposal

All of the initial excitement and support that surrounded Senate Bill S7247 seems to have died down a bit. From the student standpoint, the great drive for signatures on petitions and the seeking of support from faculty members across the street has cooled. We are now left wondering what we really feel about the great American popular force in the new future: students, faculty and alumni. The signs should be yielding down to the pressure of student concerns. Students, professors, and administrators should consider opinions about S7247 mutual or mutual as they might be.

We have one tried plan. The plan is that we should eventually meet with the trustees and work on a long-term plan about the student’s membership and the procedures to which the board’s members are exposed. What happens if the faculty and alumni are united with some common sense? Should the students get out of the shuffle? If the trustees are going to sit down and compromise it will demonstrate to our institutions that we need them to help raise money and the faculty must be wise to handle them or we doubt if they would be concerned about the students.

The really depressing thing is that we believe that the concept of student representation more often than not happens when a student has a different perspective and different opinion on student representation. When the proposal failed, it was the student who was ignored, not the student who was allowed to be heard. So how come so little student opinions were heard? By the time S7247 was passed, every student opinion was ignored. The student should be the key to this student-faculty issue. If student representatives were denied a chance to speak as well as the faculty are doing now, they would necessarily support student representation, at least at recognition our right to be heard.

The Alumni Association has been in the foreground all through the S7247 issue. Why, anyone who can save us support of some kind or another. Every student currently enrolled in a potential alumni. If no other reason, that fact alone should compel them to preserve our presence at any meetings with the trustees in regard to S7247.

In a letter to the faculty, the S7247 Committee called the Board of Trustees had become an almighty, that is not the way to treat them. It is true, if that is the motive, that the drafting of S7247 then the students are just as much, if not more, so the victims of both a state of affairs and no reason from those who even favor the spirit of S7247 could justify the students being there.

Lost in the Shuffle

One of the decisions reached by the Student Conduct Committee was to re-open the course in part because of faculty and administration meetings being held to discuss various student complaints in relation to academic standing. This committee called upon the faculty’s Academic Standing Committee to implement the rules governing academic probation. On December 17, 1969 the Board of Trustees passed a revised series of regulations covering what activities a student may participate in while on academic probation. These regulations were passed without any student opinions being heard.

The Board’s Committee, on which three students sit, was either bypassed or the students on it were not allowed to be present during discussion.

Why is it that the views of the students of this university must constantly be heard after a decision is reached? The question must be again raised as to what role, if any, the students of this university play in policy making. Do we as students at least have the right to be heard before the fact? Why were our representatives on the Committee intentionally ignored? It is up to the President of this university, who is chairman of the College Committees, to open these channels of communication instead of allowing them to remain closed as he has seen fit to do so far.

Students Ignored

After watching a TV report of President Nixon’s Newport speech in which he said that in order to maintain peace “we’ve accepted the necessity of war,” I fell into a dream.

In my dream every country in the world got together and decided to establish a new world. The United Nations maintained a task force of about 40 million troops, an integrating professional force from all countries, to be used in case of civil disturbances and international disasters.

As soon as the draft was completed, leading doctors from all nations got together to work on a cure for cancer. The United States, no longer burdened with a grotesque military budget, was now available for international work.

As I awoke from my dream, I realized that this was not what was expected. As an idealist, I am not sure how I could have done without an emotional idealism.

I realize that confusing a dream with reality can be quite dangerous. So how come we have been living in a world of confusion for the past 3000 years of continuous wars? I am confused that anyone who believes in a lasting peace can be obtained by maintaining a balance between strong competing armies in a bigger dream than I’ll ever meet the difference is that I am not trying to convince anyone that my dream will come true.

DEAR EDITOR:

I enjoyed reading Scott Davis’ article about Dean Querrel at the Springfield College football game. I thought his analysis was spot on in the neighborhood to come visit me on Rosepath Drive. I was a Nebraska fan and was always very excited when the Blue Corners played. I was also a fan of the Nebraska football team, and I was very happy to see them win.

DEAR EDITOR:

I would like to invite Dean Querrel out to the student lounge to have a drink. It is my wish that he will speak with us and tell us what the aspirations for Suffolk University are.

Local Authority Speaks on the Supernatural

by Bob Keasbey

"The scene was Santa Maria Beach the first November 1975. I was in a low burning almost frightening bank of cloud. The sulphur monster that washed ashore had a head like a horse a neck like a camel and a body like a fish. But it couldn’t have been people are just against having monsters for some reason." Edward Snow of Walfenrap noted Herald Traveler columnist and respected authority on the unusual was of course speaking about the animal (be it monster or fish) that was washed ashore last year.

Snow presented a slide show and lecture on the bizarre to a group of Suffolk students, told a number of strange accounts, some of which had happened to him there. It’s a superlative story in history. It’s about a woman who had appeared 15 times since death in Snow’s beginning to dive to the castle which she haunt. And to this day no one dares near this place for she still haunts there.

Snow’s lecture, sponsored by the Science Club, was an interesting, amusing, and rather scary expose for those who believe in the supernatural. He told rare accounts of men and women from Edgar Allen Poe to Billy Idol. And about strange places, right around the Boston J area.

And if the stories were a bit hard to swallow, Snow said he could prove every one of them. "Here is the skull of William Kant," he said, holding up a silvery gray human skull in the dimly lit room, the light from the projector catching it just right. Even after one got it two years ago, it has brought me bad luck, I’m going to loan it to the police anyway.

But for those who are still skeptical about the tales Edward Snow relates, he makes it clear that he will only tell the story. "You must justify yourself how it all happened."

Then, in the dark room, the projector off, Snow left us with this thought: "Farewell each pleasant island, Farewell each pleasant shore. May you be blest... till time, Shall be... No more."
Firing Range

by John Haven

(Interrogated by Peter Butterfield, current president of the Suffolk University Student Activities Association)

Q. Is there any conflict between the S.A.A. and the Student Government?

A. No because we as a body have our own constitution which is different from S.G.A.’s. The S.A.A. is a sub-committee of student government, hence our funds through the vote of the S.G.A. but we are pretty much left on our own to decide the actual activities.

Q. Is there any substance in the report that there is an inner conflict within S.A.A.?

A. No, I think the present members are doing a very good job, it is an inner conflict, but we should have more than twelve. There are many special interests our members have and we are trying to make better provision for them. As of this interview, we have not made a commitment to any program, but we are interested in exploring them.

Q. Are members of the S.A.A. interested in exploring any programs?

A. We have no active program at the moment but we should have two or three. These programs are open ended, the students are the leaders of the university. We derive some members feel more acceptable to the group and do resign and we hold elections to vote in a new person who would be more acceptable to the group. The election was held and I was elected president with some support. The disenfranchised members are more inclined to feel a little less presence within the university.

Q. Do you feel that you are working in cooperation with the other forces outside of S.A.A.?

A. The administration has been cooperative and as a matter of fact, been more receptive towards most of our past and future programs. My big complaint is that I don’t feel we have enough support for us.

Q. What do you feel that you want to see?

A. Of the activities fee, I think we want to see more cooperation within the S.A.A. with other forces outside of S.A.A. I feel this is the only way we can get the cooperation we desire.

Q. How much more money do you think your organization would need to do an effective job?

A. To do a reasonably effective job I think we need a minimum of $10 per student. This money might need to be increased to $15.

The 'Fox' Strikes Against Pollution

Deciding to call himself the Fox after the county's Fox River he struck, first at a major soap company that was polluting Mill River, the Fox next turned his attention to a Chicago company that was discharging waste into Lake Michigan.

Next Fox, again in the soap industry, began to call attention to the hundreds of companies polluting the Great Lakes with their waste products. The companies were being charged with violating the Clean Water Act, but they were not being fined.

The first companies to be fined were those that were found to be discharging waste into the Great Lakes without a permit.

The Fox then turned his attention to the natural areas of the state. He was concerned that the natural beauty of the state was being destroyed by the pollution of the Great Lakes.

Getting Ready for Spring

Spring is a season of frustration. It is a time when one can feel the sting of depression and the loss of the excitement of winter sports. It does not mean one must abandon their favorite sport to such ennui and boredom. As the warmer months are just around the corner, one can look forward to the arrival of spring and its many joys. As the winter weather improves, one can begin to think about the 1971 Intramural season.

This year, the Intramural basketball season will be a three-week, 36-game season. The season will begin on February 16th and end on March 5th. The teams will be divided into two conferences, with each team playing each other twice. The top four teams in each conference will advance to the playoffs, which will be held on March 6th and 7th.

Rams Finish Season 7-14;
Accomplishments Not Reflected

The Suffolk Rams had a successful season this year, winning 14 games and finishing in second place in the Atlantic Eight Conference. However, the team did not have the same success on the court as they did on the field, losing 29 games.

The team's success came in the form of a strong defense, which allowed them to keep their opponents to a low-scoring average. The Rams also benefited from the play of their starters, who averaged over 18 points per game. However, the team struggled on the offensive side, averaging only 68 points per game.

The Rams' season was marked by a strong performance in the conference tournament, where they won three games in a row before losing in the championship game. Despite this, the team did not receive any recognition from the conference or the national polls.

The team's performances on the court were not reflected in their overall record, as they finished the season with a 14-7 record. However, the team's hard work and dedication were not forgotten, as they were invited to play in the National Invitational Tournament.

Rams had this season was teamwork. Throughout the season, the team worked hard to develop their skills and improve their overall performance. This resulted in a strong defense and a balanced offense, which allowed them to compete with the best teams in the conference.

S.U. Counselor Chose Education Over Sports Career

By Ken Mason

Ten thousand eyes were on him as he rubbed his hands with dirt. Five thousand tongues exploded when he wiped them on his shirt. Then, while the writing pitcher got the ball to his toss. Distance glanced or Casey's eye could not be missed on Casey's lip. This is the dream of millions of boys. Many times, when deep in the game, a face has found itself standing at bat in the prints of hearing thousands cheer every move. Only a very few have ever had a chance to make that dream a reality.

One of Suffolk’s guidance counselors, Ken Garn, stood in the door of this reality. However, nearby was the reality of his educational dream. He chose the one that meant most to him: Education was always more important to him. Garn said baseball was an appealing life, but a short one. The decision of going into professional baseball versus education came to him in his senior year at college. That year, while batting .390 and leading builds like he had done on his glove, he received three letters. The Boston Red Sox, the Minnesota Twins, and the Philadelphia Phillies all offered him a job.

My first reaction was one of disbelief! I said, 'I don’t feel that I was that good a ballplayer.' Although he never really had a team picked out, he said he probably would have chosen Minnesota because at that time they needed a third baseman.

Garn went to high school in Lima, Peru. During those years he played track, soccer, basketball and baseball. He came to the United States and went to a prep school in Andover and then to Amherst College. In college, his sports were limited to soccer and track.

Baseball was always his best and favorite sport. He said his love for it was the biggest problem mentally as a ballplayer was not having the time he needed to become educated and still play ball.

He played third base for Amherst. Garn averaged .336. He said his hitting was better than his hitting.

Coming from a small college he said he didn’t have any problems being noticed because his team always played where scouts were present. It all depends upon the ability of the scouts,” he said.

Garn, who as a student-athlete had to be an all-around athlete, also turned down a baseball scholarship to play for the Boston College lacrosse team. Garns’ dream was to become a baseball player and he dreamed of playing for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Today Garn says he really doesn’t wish that he had signed into the game but that in the spring and summer he gets an itching for the sport.

He says that because of a couple of knee operations, his baseball career would have been ruined anyway.

Although he doesn’t play the game anymore he still likes to think that the water rule, the amount of money, the specialized training is what’s wrong with baseball today. He says most people don’t take sports seriously. He says, ‘They are probably astute; those fans who understand the game will probably do. Those fans who don’t, probably don’t.’

He doesn’t think that the Red Sox this year will go to the pennant and probably will come in third or fourth, depending upon how many times the Yankees will come in third or fourth. Garn thinks he will probably come in third or fourth and not have the future of baseball, he says it will always be a changed lesson. He said he will never get tired of people saying, ‘If I wasn’t working on that, I’m sure I would be a famous ballplayer.’ He might be a famous ballplayer if he signed with a baseball team, he might never have known Ken Garn personally.

The Greek Column

by Larry Becke

On March 16 & 17, in a marathon after Phi Sigma Sigma and Tau Kappa Epsilon mounted what I’m considered one of the most successful drives this school has ever seen in the name of muscular dystrophy. On both days members collected at suburban stations Boston Common and the surrounding area. On St. Patrick's Day everyone arrived in South Boston in the morning and canvassed the entire area. Total receipts for the two days amounted to $1000 as a “shameck for dystrophy” was given to every one who contributed.

Both Greek-letter agencies would like to thank those who participated in the drive. The money will go to medicine, hospitals and doctors for the children stricken with the disease. Gamma Sigma has struck again, but the Beta Eta girls are passionately winning on the Mr. Legs contest. The applications pouring in. The entire student body is cordially invited to vote on Suffolk's best. The winner will be announced in the auditorium April 1st.

A note to all mothers. Come to the Seventh Annual Mother Daughter Banquet Bring your daughters to the Stephanie second floor and we have a ball. Gamma Sigma and DeltaSigma have integrated their pledge classes for the benefit of the brothers, and sisters. It’s quite a ride. We’ll have to try it again some time.

Once again be it formal or not, Gamma Sig in conjunction with Panhellenics sponsored the bi-annual Pledge Order spaghetti supper. After the spaghetti was picked up off the floor and put into the pots things went smoothly. Congratulations toottie Leone and Elaine Gragg Beta Eta’s other cawthorneview champions.

By the way, Give Blackington; wear her troting well.

The men’s legs moving and how’s the beetle rabbit?

April comes out last month the Phi Sig decided to celebrate in their own way. On February 23rd, they held a Scholarship Dinner for their chapter only. This little get-together consisted of getting the best and largest desert on the menu in the N.D. and the cumulative average went down so did the desserts. The highest possible score was a Jim Dandy, which was still only a Coke without any hard feelings. All kids were good and why not get soft, who is Dana’s brother, he is a famous ballplayer? It will probably come in third or fourth, depending upon how many times the Yankees will come in third or fourth. Garn thinks he will probably come in third or fourth and not have the future of baseball, he says it will always be a changed lesson. He said he will never get tired of people saying, ‘If I wasn’t working on that, I’m sure I would be a famous ballplayer.’ He might be a famous ballplayer if he signed with a baseball team, he might never have known Ken Garn personally.
Students Become Active in Home town Politics

by Scott Davis

When young people started to become interested in politics, Guba is in the process of writing his thesis in political science. The time gap between the two periods is due to a number of factors. First, there was the problem of finding a new job. Then there was the issue of how to handle the situation. Finally, there were the personal problems that arise from living away from home.

In the past 10 years or so young people have participated in everything from freedom marches to ecology drives and there seems to be no end in sight regarding what they can do to improve the government. One major achievement resulting from this participation has been the lowering of the voting age and with it the required age to hold elected office.

It was this latter change in the age requirement that allowed two Suffolk College students the opportunity to launch their political careers. Alm Guba and Joe Shanahan both Government majors, campaigned for political office in their hometowns this winter. Guba was a candidate for Town Meeting member in Dedham, while Joe Shanahan was running for a seat on the school board in Quincy.

Guba believes that getting young people interested in government is part of his education. He also hopes that more young people will become involved in politics. With his background in political science he is in the process of writing his thesis in political science.

Spring College Carnival Expected to Draw Thousands of Students

A huge Spring College Carnival complete with a rock band, wine and cheese tasting, and fun and serious races will be held at Mount Snow, the ski resort in Vermont, this weekend. The event is sponsored by the Student Senate. K2, the college ski team, will also be in attendance.

The carnival is scheduled to start on Friday evening at 6 PM with a concert by the college band. The following day, Saturday, will feature a variety of races and activities, including a cross-country race at 10 AM, a downhill race at 1 PM, and a relay race at 3 PM. The carnival will conclude on Sunday with a breakfast buffet at 9 AM and a country-western concert at 1 PM.

The Student Senate has estimated that over 2,000 college students will attend the carnival this weekend. The event is expected to be a major fundraiser for the college and the ski team.

The college ski team, K2, will be a major participant in the carnival, with races and activities designed to showcase the skills and abilities of the team. The team is coached by experienced skiers and includes members who have competed at the national and international levels.

The carnival will also feature a variety of other activities, including a wine and cheese tasting, a chili cook-off, and a silent disco. The event is open to the public and admission is free.
Selective Service Closes Loopholes in Draft

The Selective Service System has begun closing loopholes in its draft laws. This week marks the first time in its history that the Selective Service System has conducted a full-scale audit of draft registrants.

The audit is designed to identify and eliminate any illegal or improper activity that may have occurred during the registration process. The Selective Service System is responsible for ensuring that all eligible males are accurately registered and that they are properly classified for the draft.

The audit involves a comprehensive review of each registrant's file, as well as a random selection of individual files for a more detailed examination. The Selective Service System is working closely with the Department of Justice to ensure that any illegal activities are properly investigated and prosecuted.

The Selective Service System is committed to upholding the principles of fairness and integrity in the registration process. The audit is an important step in achieving this goal and ensuring that the Selective Service System remains a model of excellence in the field of national security.

University Seen as Political Organism

The university is a political organism, according to the late Leon Botstein, president of Bard College. In a lecture at the University of Chicago, Botstein argued that the university is a political organism whose role is to shape and influence the political landscape.

Botstein said that universities are not neutral or apolitical institutions. Instead, they are active participants in the political process, using their resources and influence to shape society and politics. The university, he said, is a political organism that must be aware of its role and responsibilities in the political process.

Botstein's argument is that universities have a duty to engage in political activism and to use their resources to promote social justice and political progress. He said that universities should not be afraid to take a stand on political issues and to use their resources to promote political change.

Botstein's ideas have been influential in the field of higher education, and many universities have taken up his call to engage in political activism. His ideas have also been cited by other political thinkers as a way to understand the relationship between politics and the university.
