GO AHEAD, KID. DO YOUR THING.
An Interview with Daniel Ellsberg

The following is an interview with Dan Ellsberg by Carl Nelson, who is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of English at Suffolk University, and Frank Greer, Special Projects Director at the National Student Association.

GREER: We began with a historical background on the government's role in the Vietnam War. Did you feel any way the student movement affected the papers to the press?

ELLBERG: I don't think it was that much of an effect. I was involved in the Rand Corporation on a study of the war, and I was interested in the papers to the press. It was just that the papers were interested in the movement, which was new, and the government was concerned with it. It was just a matter of making sure that the government, the people in the government, understood the movement and what it was all about.

GREER: We also talked about the role of the Ombudsman as a mechanism for the students to have a voice in the university. What was the role of the Ombudsman in your university?

ELLBERG: The Ombudsman was a mechanism for students to have a voice in the university. It was a way for students to bring their concerns to the university administration and have them addressed. It was a way for students to have a sense of their rights as students and to have a voice in the decision-making process of the university.

GREER: And how did this role change over time?

ELLBERG: The role of the Ombudsman changed over time. Initially, it was a way for students to have a voice in the university. As time went on, the role of the Ombudsman became more complex. It became a way for students to have a voice in the decision-making process of the university and to have their concerns addressed. Student Life Committee considers sites for union

There has been a problem of space, a need for Student Union facilities - a gym that is closer than Central Student Union. So the Student Life Committee has organized a Student Life Union, to try and remedy the situation.

The Student Life Committee and the Student Union administrators and students of the school to have a Student Union and facilities. It was not signed by Neil publicly and advanced mutual agreement. Concept because of lack of hotel that was then up for administration and students. The Committee to try and remedy the situation has founded a Student Life Union. The emphasis is placed on economy. No one else gave me a point of view that the property of which they thought was wrong criminal or not merely a mistake but a crime that must be stopped now. So an admission to see Congressmen take very seriously the problems that people are having.

Two possible solutions were offered that solutions have become unrealistic. One was the chaging of the student union, a hotel that was then give for sale. Another suggestion was formed in 1968 to solve parking problems. The Student Union and facilities was mentioned in the School's yearbook.

The Neil Young Concert that 9:00 A.M. on Tuesday, May 26 of the year has been cancelled by Mayor Nelson.

Although the contract had been signed by University Affairs, it was not signed by Neil Young, and there was a serious question of the suitability of the venue. Neil Young had signed the contract in late February, but the school board after May 6, which would allow a television show, in addition to public and ticket sales, was postponed from May 13 to October 7, for $3,570 that was deposited. The check was sent to the student government of Philadelphia.

The Student Union was still in the hands of the student government.

Student Life Committee considers sites for union

There has always been a problem of space, a need for a Student Union, a gym that is closer than Central Student Union, but there is no Student Union, and the student in the Student Union, with the help of the Student Union, has formulated a Student Life Committee.

The committee is comprised of administrators and students. If the school has an existing Student Union, it was pointed out, it would be on property owned by the University, and acquisition of a new building is not feasible.

Another student committee was formed in 1968 to solve the parking problems, but the need of a Student Union and of dormitories was also mentioned in 1968.

Two possible solutions were offered that now have become unrealistic. One was the purchase of the Parker House, a hotel that was then up for sale.

The Neil Young Concert that was advertised as a free concert was held at Harvard University. The event was advertised as a free concert, and it was advertised that they would need at least six weeks to set up the arena. Without this, the event was advertised that it would not be advertised that the arena would be set up for six weeks.

Frederick W. Warner, chairman of the Student Life Committee, said he expected a list of proposals to be given to the Board of Trustees by December 1. The committee currently has five possible sites under consideration.

Emergency conference called by 100 student presidents

More than 100 student body presidents from colleges and universities across America joined with the American Assembly on November 4 for an Emergency Conference for New Voters to organize students as voting delegates to the national party nominating conventions in 1972. The Emergency Conference was called by 100 student body presidents from colleges and universities across America.

The events of the past month clearly indicate that neither of the two major political parties wanted young, well-educated voters as its primary electorate. The students of the Emergency Conference for New Voters are organizing a cross-country voting movement for the next election and to help register their numbers to vote.

We must remember that there are at least 18 million 18-24-year-olds in the country, and that the majority of them are not registered to vote. The Emergency Conference is the last national gathering of students before the delicate selection process begins, in which some states are as early as February.

The other was a request to build new facilities that suffered badly from the students of the Heath Hall Historical Society. The students were speaking for SGA, put forth a list of reasons as to why they would be a student union. They said that the students were concerned that the space would be overcrowded because there is no space to be used. They also said that students can avoid an exam or a test by taking a class for the student's life and well-being.

There should be a game room, television room, a music room, seminar rooms, bar areas, with more space for clubs and other activities, and a snack bar, not for meals, but mostly for socializing.

SGA has not abandoned the idea of the Student Union, but has considered the possibility of a union with a big name: University. It hopes to have a union from the Student Union is on the way.

White makes first post-election appearance

Mayor Kevin White, in his first post-election public appearance, issued a call to Suffolk students to work to improve government in Boston. "There is a desperate need for a committed and dedicated public official," White said.

White explained that he would focus on the following issues:

1. The Homeless

2. The economic situation

3. The education system

4. The environment

5. The health care system

White added that he would work to improve the environment, education, and health care systems. He also promised to work to improve the economy and the homeless situation.

White's first post-election appearance was well attended, with hundreds of students gathered to hear his speech. The mayor's speech was well received, with students热烈响应 his proposals for improvement.

Student Life Committee considers sites for union

There has always been a problem of finding a site for a Student Union and the want of a gym. What is now called Central Square (SQ) is being claimed by the Student Government Association (SGA) as the site of a Student Center. We feel that the Student Body should also make the right decision to remedy the situation. The committee is comprised of members of administrators and students, so if the school is to have a Student Union, it must be property already owned by the University and acquisition of a new building will not be possible.

Another such committee was formed in 1968 to solve the parking problems. The need of a Student Union and dormitories was also mentioned in 1968. Two possible solutions were offered now that have become unrealistic. One was the purchase of the Parker House hotel that was then up for sale.

The other was a request to build a union on the property at the center of campus. The history of the Library was considered and it was felt that the students librarians, students who have been involved with the library are overburdened. Because there is no place where they can go to have a place where students gather after class, between classes for the student's life and well-being. Also, there should be a gym room, television room, a music room, seminar rooms, larger of faces, with more space for clubs and other activities and a snack bar for snacks, but mostly for grill items.

Frederick Walls, chairman of the Student Life Committee, said he expected a lot of opposition to be given to the Board of Trustees by December 1. The committee currently has five possible sites under consideration.

The Neil Young Concert that S.G.A. was calling the social event of the year has been cancelled by mutual agreement.

Although the contract had been signed by SGA and International Agency, the concert was not signed by Neil Young. It was expected that his cancellation of the contract would not reach the school before Nov. 6, which would allow time for publicity and some publicity. According to the International Agency contract, a check for $3,750 (the deposit) was paid. The contract is not insured.

The cancellation was the result of a meeting of administrators and students. The decision was the result of a meeting of the students and the committee of the SGA.

Emergency conference called by 100 student presidents

More than 100 student body presidents from colleges and universities across America joined with the Association of Student Governments this week in calling for an Emergency Conference for New Voters to organize students for the 1972 presidential campaign.

The meeting resulted in a statement that the conference is scheduled for Dec. 3, 4 and 5 at the McCormick Hotel in downtown Chicago.

The meeting was held under the direction of the Mark McGovern Committee, which has been working on the conference.

The committee is made up of student leaders from the various universities, and the conference is being held to discuss the importance of the presidential campaign and the role of young people in it.

The conference is expected to draw a large number of students from around the country, and it is hoped that the results of the meeting will be used to organize students for the campaign.

Suffolk students are encouraged to participate in the conference and to become involved in the presidential campaign.
Students hear ‘TM’ lectures

Transcendental Meditation has recently been gaining a new found interest on campuses across the country. Suffolk recently offered these two lectures of the course to all interested students.

Stephen Ginzberg, a teacher of Transcendental Meditation (TM), introduced Suffolk students to the concepts of TM. Transcendental Meditation is an unobtrusive natural process, said Ginzberg, and everyone can learn how to meditate. All that is needed is the ability to think which we all have.

For those who participated in the course, the remaining lectures were held at Boston University.

Transcendental Meditation has recently been gaining a new found interest on campuses across the country. Suffolk recently offered the first two lectures of the course to interested students.

Stephen Gmsberg, a teacher of transcendental meditation (TM), introduced Suffolk students to the basic concepts of TM at the first lecture. This lecture is also offered every Wednesday and Thursday night free of charge at the Students International Meditation Society (SIMS) at 27 Concord Ave., Cambridge.

TM is an ancient method currently being taught by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi. By meditating twice daily, people are able to live a more happy and productive life.

Massachusetts has now gone into the lottery business. And, coincidentally, the honeymoon between Governor Francis Sargent and the Legislature has come to an abrupt end.

It all began innocently enough. Everyone agreed that we should gamble our troubles away. What they disagreed about was just who should control the game.

The Governor (wheeler-dealer that he is) insisted he play banker. The Legislature saw it in a different way.

Thus a veto occurred. And, should (or is it ‘should’ as the case may be) it enter Senate President Kevin Harrington?

He delayed final action on the idea once and for all to the Governor and everyone else on Beacon Hill that he had finally achieved the power his pre would have no more to be belligerent or skeptical of the NLF proposal than any of the proposals we’ve made, given our past experience. But do we not see how skepticism like that has any base in reality? I think that if we would be willing to discuss on the basis of those proposals, which seem entirely reasonable.

A new publication by B.F. Skinner provides an interesting insight into the nature of behavior and the importance of language. Skinner's work challenges our understanding of human behavior and its relationship to language. The book offers a new perspective on the nature of human thought and the way we communicate with each other. It is a timely read for anyone interested in psychology, linguistics, and the nature of human behavior. The book is available for purchase on Amazon and other online retailers.

The list of relevant Issues, as they are called, seems to stem from student reform - women's liberation, crime, drug, nuclear weapons, pollution, the environment, consumer information, the legal system, voter registration, foreign relations.

That is a lot of problems for only 14.3 million U.S. college students to solve. But some students always seem to know the answers.

We have had our share of problems, but we will have try to prepare for some of the worst.

This year marks the 75th anniversary of the Albrecht, a fraternity that has been a part of Boston College since 1940. The Albrecht was founded in 1940 when Charles P. Donaghue, a student at Boston College, organized a group of students to work on a project. The group was known as the Albrecht Society, and it was later renamed the Albrecht after its founder.

The Albrecht has had a long history of service and leadership within the Boston College community. During World War II, the Albrecht Society provided support to soldiers and their families through the formation of the Albrecht War Relief Committee. In addition, the Albrecht has been involved in numerous charitable causes throughout its history.

Today, the Albrecht continues to be an active and vibrant organization at Boston College. The group is composed of hundreds of current and former students who are committed to promoting the values of friendship, scholarship, and community service.

Dear Editor,

Your recent news headline about the students burning out of the old dormitory, "Smoke rises from the old dormitory," is misleading.

The smoke was not from the old dormitory but from a nearby bonfire.

There are people who say that the war in Indochina is a racial war and that only by ending the war can the Vietnamese and Laotians have any control over the government. They are afraid that the Vietnamese and Laotians will not be allowed to continue their fight for freedom.

They areRight to be concerned. The war has been a terrible thing to all people involved. It is a war that has cost many lives and has left many people homeless.

The war in Indochina is not a racial war. It is a war fought by people of all races. It is a war fought by people who are fighting for their freedom.

It is important that we continue to support the people of Indochina in their fight for freedom.

Conference for new voters

As college students, we are almost all 18-24 years old, which means we are eligible to vote in the upcoming elections. Only 10% of college students actually vote in the elections.

This is unacceptable. As young people, we have a responsibility to our country and to the world. We have a responsibility to vote.

Atty. General Quinn criticizes Nixon's consumer policies

Massachusetts Attorney General Robert H. Quinn sharply criticized President Nixon for failing to advance the cause of consumer protection.

Quinn said the administration's "impression of advocacy while not rendering full support" was a major shortcoming of the President's Consumer Protection Program. "I think the administration supported the bill only after it was, without a doubt, in subcommittees," Quinn said.

Nixon took similar steps to wide investigation into enabling consumers to take class action against business transgressions, to answer suits by justice practices.

"We need the actions 'politics at its worst,'" Quinn said. "Whichever individual's conclusion November 30 would result in fundamental and meaningful changes."

It was the series of events that gave impetus to the 1971 Consumer Protection Act. "Honest John," used car dealers, "isn't manufacturers selling any cars at all.

Consumerism will affect the market. We know that the semirealization of popular advertising practices were scored. The Attorney General said that government against fraudulent claims by companies with advertising, retail, and help-wanted ads.

Quinn criticized advertising product ads by using the occasion to appeal to the motivations entirely unrelated to their real needs and desires.

"Toothpaste doesn't guarantee a longer life," Quinn said. "Nor does a new suit guarantee a better life."

Quinn said that while all consumers are entitled to protection, consumer fraud must be distinguished from those in middle and lower income classes because they are the groups least able to withstand in the marketplace.

A recent complaint office in Groveland, opened recently, was not helping poor and non-English-speaking people. Quinn said it was supplying some money to explain the program to the consumer.

We have undertaken comprehensive educational programs in the ghetto area. For the have-nots, this is an area of black power. This movement is critical in its popularization of consumer fraud facts. The program has taken place on the state level as well as against individuals. In August, the Attorney General filed suit against eight major coal, iron, and steel manufacturers, selling equipment to the state and cities. The firms allegedly used false prices at 15-25 per cent above market, used false market value for over 25 years. The fraud cost society millions of dollars.

The question of whether these suits and other actions actually save money is a sticky issue. The state has proposed that the Attorney General file suit against a large corporation and a federal agent for overcharging the state for a service.

The problem is that government and people are not being made aware of the activities.

Still, the office has been successful in its efforts, according to the Attorney General. "We have been able to crack down on this problem," Quinn said.

Jim Hale explains broadcast journalism

Jim Hale explained broadcast journalism at the Suffolk University journalism, as part of its speaker series. Hale was the first of a series of speakers from the journalism department scheduled to address the Suffolk University audience.

The speech was sponsored by the Suffolk University Journalism Society, as part of its speaker series. Hale was the first of a series of speakers from the journalism department scheduled to address the Suffolk University audience.

Hale, a student at Suffolk Law School, said that despite the national criticism leveled at television journalism, TV news is still the most popular and most trusted source of information in the United States, according to recent polls.

In a survey conducted in 1977, the popularity and credibility of news sources was investigated. Hale's results showed that 40 per cent of Americans relied on TV news as their primary source of news, 25 per cent on newspapers, 23 per cent on radio, and 5 per cent on magazines.

In addition, given a choice of only two media as a source of news, 58 per cent said television, 19 per cent said newspapers, 17 per cent said radio, and 5 per cent said they would choose magazines as their only news source.

In defining what "news" is, Hale said he has adopted his definition from that of Rubin Frank, president of NBC News. This definition includes "news must be something that happens, it may not merely exist. It is change as seen by an outsider, on behalf of other outsiders. News is change, which is interesting and a vital part of the American way of life. News involves the people's right to know. News is good and bad."

Hale said that contrary to popular belief, jobs in the journalism industry are open. But, he added, it depends on the ability of a person and his desire to work in the field.

The future of journalism, according to the newsletter, is tied closely to the mainstream of life. "Journalism is alive of government and social institutions," Hale said. "It is a vital part of us.

Hale urged those that work in television and radio to remember the famous words of Voltaire, who said, "I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend your right to say it.

Hale said that he is a kind of person who is interested in the American and his TV as is evidenced by viewers watching their television an average of two hours and 50 minutes a day. On the other hand, according to the Missouri native, people criticize the news the most when they don't like what they see on television.

Hale substantiated this by citing the two immutable rules on criticism of broadcast journalism, as defined by Wes Gallagher, General Manager of the Associated Press.

1. Criticism by the government rises in direct proportion to the amount of news broadcast, which reflects unfavourably to government policy.

2. Criticism by the public rises in direct proportion to the amount of news heard that does not fit the individual's ideas and notions about what news should be.

The newsletter also described how a newsletter is put together. He said that between 25 and 40 people are involved in the creation of a newsletter every day. And most stations rely on the wire services, newspapers, police and fire departments, radio and "handouts," as major news sources.

Hale said that, contrary to popular belief, jobs in the journalism industry are open. But, he added, it depends on the ability of a person and his desire to work in the field.

Poll indicates abortion approval

NEW YORK CITY The results of a nationwide poll conducted recently by the Abortion Research & Education Information Service show widespread approval of legal abortion.

The poll, conducted as part of the Council's research and educational activities and to further its efforts to provide information and assistance relative to legal abortion according to Richard Rothenberg, of SUFFOLK JOURNAL is believed to be the first of its kind in New York State, since 1970 of New York State's abortion laws were held.

The poll was mailed to about 1,700 women's news editors and some 900 editors of college publications in the United States. In certain cases, the editors were told in the respective publications.

The results, represented in percentages, are based on the responses of approximately 3,000 completed polls.

1. Assuming that legal abortion is performed by duly licensed physicians under medically sound, legal abortion, should a pregnant woman, who does not wish to carry her pregnancy to term, obtain a legal abortion?

2. If she is married and does not wish to marry the man and does not want a child, should she obtain an abortion legal abortion?

3. If she is married and does not wish to marry the man and does not want a child? Responses vary by region and geographic community.

5. Whether or not of a community? Responses vary by region and geographic community.

6. If it is desired, what must the pregnant woman do?

7. How would the pregnant woman react to the question of legal abortion?

8. If it is desired, what must the pregnant woman do?

9. The answers indicated clearly that there was widespread support for the legal abortion in a majority of the cases, and that the status of legal abortion in the respective states was not.

10. The choices listed in section 3 of this paper, which one would you prefer to have adopted technology?

13. Too much of the time we are on the left to try to pretend that developing countries are not already doing it, and don't need the kind of technology that is being provided. In Asia, in fact, they are trying to develop this technology and are doing it, and they are doing it at home and abroad, not at all the expense of the people, and not for a profit. Profit makes development possible only at the expense of the people. A class of bosses, a capitalist, a ruler, workers to labor in order to fill their own needs. Having been through this, the Chinese people will make every effort to prepare their country in a revolution in this process and thereby achieve a true revolutionary social order.

Cat Stevens
by Steve Croas

After canceling a sold-out second show, Cat Stevens cancelled the tour for a single performance. Cat can still be seen on the charts with his latest chart-topping single, "Brown Eyed Girl," which he performed at the 1971 Grammy Awards. The fact that he is currently at the peak of his popularity and is riding not only the success of his music, but the success of his performance, makes the concert truly a great night. The concert was held in Boston, and the audience was not disappointed.

The evening began with Mumford and Tom Jones. They were introduced as a "self-fashioned around the " - a statement which they unfortunately verified during the evening. Despite their performance, they were well received and were even brought back for an encore. After their short interlude, the formerly well-behaved audience became somewhat restive. It was not long afterwards, however, that they were once again brought back by two guitarists and a drummer to sing their songs and then said "Thank you." This may have been a welcome respite for some, but to others it was an introduction to what was to follow by many that evening.

The concert continued with "On the Road to Find Out." Followed by "Wild World," the crowd packed the Music Hall. During these songs, the audience sang heartily, two guillotine guitarists and a drummer. The sound system was not functioning properly, but the audience seemed to enjoy the show regardless.

The sound improved as the evening wore on, and the concert proved to be a good one. Many Ms. Stevens' fans. They invited fans to sing and dance with them on the songs that they knew. With a "Wild World," the audience appeared most of the songs that were played. After playing, Cat Stevens returned to the audience with one song. The crowd, applauding after once for more was advised to go home to listen to the radio.不同程度地, the audience seemed to enjoy the show.

University Theater

"Hill House...a haunting experience"
by Paula Kele

The Milling of Hill House, presented by the Suffolk University Theater, was definitely an experience for all theatergoers.

This production succeeded in making blood run cold and flesh crawl for anyone who has ever seen a professional theater for a "Hill House," one of the most unprofessional and blundering attempts at stage work since the last local PTA Thanksgiving pageant.

The play is about four people trapped in Hill House, an old man with an eerie past. The people have been chosen and invited to Hill House by Dr. Montague, who is gathering material for a book on psychic phenomena. Dr. Montague (Kevin Bernd) introduces them to write statements every evening at the last step of the white to the night. The plot hinges on the character of Eleanor, a neurotic, impulsive woman who blames herself for the death of her mother. The ending of the play at Hill House eventually culminates in a death. At all other characters in the play are expressions and serve little function to the plot.

The lead actor, Brenda Bernd, is chosen because of her psychic gifts. She portrays a role of a psychic, feline-type character. Her performance is highly convincing, resembling a bubblegum chewing candy from the 1950s. She expresses the plot of her every line with the same mannerisms, emotion, and total presence.

To summarize, and save Luke (Ján Kedves) wanders about the streets, while charming his castle. The character of Eleanor (Christine Czarnecki) fails to show any true conflict occurring in the story. She appears as a flat and boring character, unless she is having a Freudian breakdown. It is difficult to say exactly what type of play "Hill House" is. The plasticity of the play and the attractiveness of the audience with the Fringe Festival probably does not make sense. Then they are never quite sure whether to laugh or cry.

With the introduction of M. Montague (Christine Czarnecki) the play abruptly changes from drama to satire to see with every new line. The play is like an overgrown cartoon character. This scene was supposed to include comic relief at least the audience thought the play was a sketch. But then what is usual humor doing in the middle of a serious drama? "There are some good points of the play, the ending is effective. Eleanor, being told to keep her house and being compelled to stay put, pulls her head and draws the trigger. With the loud shot she and the other character become surrounded in time while the face of each character changes. One by one each character fades into the darkness while a recording of their voice is played in the background. Finally, the light leaves Eleanor's face. The set is also very good, but unfortunately an effective ending and a good set do not constitute a good theater. And "The Haunting of Hill House" in reality is a work of fiction."

Pink Floyd sets the controls for the heart of the sun
by Robert Jahn

To be honest I was afraid to go see Pink Floyd at the Music Hall November 11. About their albums are so excellent and I wasn’t sure they could possibly duplicate the incredibly complex sound of their unique style of electronic/psychological muscular space rock in concert, especially at the Music Hall.

Once it was just like walking into pure sunshine. The band’s performance was better than their records (which is to say "blandifying"), and the capacity crowd was so absorbed they hardly noticed the great array of Boston police that seemed to rain down on the audience of the 1968 Chicago Democratic National Convention.

Visibly belted, they found white trash enormous audiences that merely waited for the lights to swing, chattering and shadow tossing with each other throughout the show. But the show won out, with a performance like the four-man English group which exceeded all expectations. David Gilmour (lead guitar and vocals), Roger Waters (bass guitar and vocals), Richard Wright (organ, synthesizer, and vocals) and Nick Mason (drums) delivered music that was strong, clear and mind-bogglingly ranging in material from the mysterious and powerful "Set the Controls for the Heart of the Sun" to the psychotically intense "Careful With That Axe Eugene." The triphophonic "Echoes," a beautiful piece from their new album. Meddle.

The concert songs were long, flowing versions which improved on the originals, which is unusual for any band but Pink Floyd isn’t a usual band.

The quadraphonic sound system was obviously a major factor, controlled by a studio-like mixing sound, designed for their concert and resembling a starship control panel.

The machine balanced the guitars and drums from the front and sides with singing, moving synthesizer space, winds which coursed through the audience from speakers in the rear, producing an incredibly environmental effect.

The "laser-light show" also specifically developed for the band, was strikingly effective with its full spectrum of color, crystal and bat-like lights and colorful light. Strobing changing luminous glow. Floyd returned after an intensely gripping audience response, and performed an amazing space dust number, which will stay with people long after they hear lead guitar riffs, seemed a solemn tribute to the late Duane Allman, and the silent audience seemed to instantly understand it and feel quietly after.

Following the show, Floyd and their four musicians packed up their five tons of equipment between gates of beer and Southern Comfort-rapped with the press and bystanders, expressing their displeasure with Capitol records for releasing (without their permission) the Rattles album. An lp, of old tracks they consider best forgotten, especially once mainstay of their new unreleased music in the can. And they are already working on a new lp, which is remarkable for a band that only released last released months ago.

The future looks pretty ray for Floyd, and for their fans.

Malik Hakim

according to his philosophy. When he arrived in the morning, he saw many programs designed to help the people in the community but they were too disconnected to be effective. Hakim organized many of these programs under one title called "Bloodline, Inc." Brother Hakim (Kevin Bernd) of great help to the black community and, in the words of Brother Malik, "Malik is the bloodline of Ali Bubu."

Hakim has relied on great success on his philosophy of avoiding racial prejudice and working on trust between blacks and whites and he has been seen as the one great hope for establishing better relations between the races. Hakim has been labeled a crusader for the black people.

Inherent in America is a sense of White Nationalism—he believes that "the black must be degraded and subjected to death through a sense of social discrimination. He has made clear to his people that there is some thing to be proud of and that being black is good.

On September 23, 1971, Boston police succeeded in arresting Hakim. Two police officers approached him near his car and guns. The officers were not uniformed and searched and did not identify themselves, Hakim ran and then jumped into a three-foot ledge and injured himself seriously.

Muscles were painfully torn off his knees and Hakim found himself cradled. A doctor at the hospital where he was being cared for expressed the desire to operate on the muscles which involved setting pins in his knees to keep his legs together. Before doctors had a chance to perform the operation, he was taken to Charles St. and reportedly let there without medical attention or care. Complaints were made by the staff at St. and they were not equipped to care for him, so instead of sending him back to the hospital, authorities merely transferred the ill to Norfolk County House of Correction.

Governor Francis Sargent, in the meantime, has signed papers which will send Hakim back to Massachusetts.

Since Hakim left Massachusetts, authorities seem to have no

"Hi1l House"...a haunting experience

by Paula Kelly

The "Hilling of Hill House" presented by the Suffolk Union on September 21, 1971, was one of the most unprepared shows I have ever attended. My seat was directly in front of the stage, the stage was on a platform, the platform was off stage, and the programs were nowhere to be found.

The play succeeded in making blisters on my feet. Who ever heard of a play that went on for three hours? Who ever heard of a play that went on for three hours and fifteen minutes? Who ever heard of a play that went on for three hours and fifteen minutes and was not worth the money spent? Who ever heard of a play that went on for three hours and fifteen minutes and was not worth the money spent and was not worth the trip to Massachusetts to see it. Who ever heard of a play that went on for three hours and fifteen minutes and was not worth the money spent and was not worth the trip to Massachusetts to see it and was not worth the time wasted in the train station waiting for the train to arrive. The plot hinges on the character Eleanor, a neurotic, insipid woman who believes herself to be the depth of her mother. The events that occur in "Hilling of Hill House" seem to be the ultimate expression of Eleanor's self-deception and denial.

The Last Movie

By Francis Ford Coppola

The Last Movie by Francis Ford Coppola will hopefully be the last movie about him. It is a movie that may not interest you, but it will be interesting to people who have been following his career. The movie is about a character played by Jack Nicholson in a small, isolated town. He is a retired film director who has been working on a project to make a movie about the town. The movie is a reflection of his own life and career, as he struggles to find the inspiration to create a new work of art.

The scene is set in a small town in the desert, where Jack Nicholson's character is a film director who is struggling to find the inspiration to make a new movie. He is joined by a group of friends who are also struggling with their own personal demons. The movie is a reflection of their lives and their struggles, as they try to find the motivation to create something new.

The overall mood of the movie is dark and introspective, as the characters grapple with their own demons and struggles. The movie is a powerful exploration of the human condition, and will resonate with anyone who has ever struggled with their own personal demons.

The Last Movie is a profound and moving work of art, and is sure to be remembered as one of the great films of our time.

On being here

The staff of the Journal invited the Afro-American Club to submit material to the paper figure students a more balanced view of the total student community. For this opportunity, we, the members of the Afro-American Club, say thanks.

Nothing much happens around the school relating to Black students that isn’t already known despite some claims from SGA to the contrary. To this end we have decided that our contribution to the Journal would be different from their expected "political news of young Blacks.

We also hope that white students, administrators, etc. can gain some "understanding" from the readings and visuals which will appear in future. Once again we would like to express our gratitude for this opportunity of expression.

OPPOSITES

Understand that black is true and take it as white. Understand that black is right and white is wrong. Understand that white is weak and black is strong. Understand that white is sufleration and black is strength. Understand that black is life and white is death. Understand that black wins all glory while white wins all shame. Understand that blackness is reality and whiteness but a game. Understand that black was here first and will be last. Understand that white herself has future and lies about your past. Understand that before we were sold as slaves the black man walked in temples of glory while the white man crawled in caves.

SO understand, young black man, who is the opposite of you. Understand so that you will know what you have to do. Understand that black is the beginning of white's end. Understand that whiteness is your enemy and blackness is your friend. Understand that the height and weight of your mental depth. Understand that you’re the original man as quiet as he is quiet. Understand that black will rise and white will fall. Understand that while you’re nothing and black equals all. Understand that our climate is hot and theirs is cold. Understand that you’re young and they’re old. But all’s die. Understand, young black man, who is the opposite of you. Understand so that you will know what you have to do. Understand that black is love and white is hate. Understand why our freedom cannot wait. Understand that white is war and black is peace. Understand that black is beauty and white the beast. Understand that black is happiness while white is sorrow. Understand that I was a slave yesterday but you’ll be free tomorrow.

The list of political martyrs continues to grow among a group of so-called political enlightenment. Not content with the condition of slavery to which Black people are subjected to today, (mental slavery), the single most destructive force in the world (America) continues to instigate (persecute) and execute any Black person who by way of helping his or her people speaks the truth.

Malcolm X, WEB Dubois, Franz Fanon, Martin Luther King Jr., Eldridge Cleaver, Marcus Garvey, George Jackson, to name a few. The search for excommunication of America by people who would help Blacks out of the speechless situation existing at the bottom of the hill with billions on their backs, ready to take their place in the long chain of human sacrifice, are yet two more victims of American capitalism.

Sister Angela Davis and Brother Malcolm X are the next targets.

Their only crimes (despite the INFORMATION passed out in newspapers) are knowing too much and dedicating their lives to the cause.

Brother Malcolm will most surely be extricated from Boston to Missouri, where he is wanted on several bogus charges which could keep him in prison for the rest of his life (a very effective measure since people seem forget yesterday’s heroes).

Stories about Malcolm and his plight have appeared in all Boston newspapers and most television stations have carried accounts. Whether Brother Malcolm X will be saved is obvious. NO! The government wants him out of the picture and will take any means to keep him out of any Black community.

The Afro-American Club is appealing to all students, however, to add the legal defense fund for Malcolm X. The only way that we can prove whether this so-called legal system works is to put Malcolm’s case before these courts and plead for his case.

If Malcolm cannot even be tried before the courts for lack of a legal defense, then everywhere will have had yet another bitter taste of justice.

Financial hassles

The recent dealings of the Afro-American Club with the Student Government Association were nothing more than a circus. The Afro-Club is probably the only student organization in this school which solely deals with elements outside of the University community because of our inherent mission of black people. We should see our allegiance to our community and therein lie our priorities. Though this so-called governmental body would con-template bargaining or playing political football with this allegiance, there is no separating us from our community is insured. This is the sole reason this club to aid Black students in the school and members and further the ties between Black students and the Black community.

Last year the Afro-Club extended a large sum of money and time in an attempt to make Afro-American Week a program of some substance with real meaning to Black and white students. We sponsored seminars, exhibits, and several other cultural programs.

Despite the fact that our exhibit took place in the main lobby, one member of SGA questioned the need for more funds for the program on the grounds that he didn’t know what Afro-American Week was.

The Afro-Club is a new organization in the school, having been formed just a few years ago and it is only reasonable to assume that it is still somewhat in the development stages. This year the club is planning to sponsor its community improvement programs hence the need for a larger budget.

A $7,500 DEPOSIT without any guarantee want to singer Neil Young to appear at Suffolk. And the Afro-Club asked for a mere $2000 to carry out a year’s worth of programs of social, economic and cultural value. The Political Science Club asked for $1000 to bring Ralph Nader to Suffolk (they were refused, naturally). And Neil Young would only sing for a couple of hours of a price equal to the entire combined budgets of several clubs.

Winter Soldier II

In Barry Brador’s 1964 comic series "Winter Soldier," a character named John Nixon has founded an organization called the Winter Soldier Bureau to investigate the activities of the American military in Vietnam. Nixon has been depicted as a former soldier who returned from the war disillusioned by the actions he witnessed and decided to expose the truth about the war.

Nixon’s organization, the Winter Soldier Bureau, has conducted public hearings and published reports on the human rights abuses committed by the U.S. military in Vietnam. The Winter Soldier Hearings were held in 1966 and 1967 in Washington, D.C., and later in other cities, providing a platform for veterans, their families, and others to testify about the atrocities they witnessed.

The hearings were significant because they provided a forum for frontline soldiers to speak out about the violence and the ruthless tactics used by American forces in Vietnam, challenging the official narrative of the war.

These events were pivotal in raising awareness about the human cost of the war and contributed to the growing anti-war movement in the United States. The stories told at the hearings helped mobilize public opinion against the war and contributed to the eventual defeat of U.S. military involvement in Vietnam.
