Segregationists Cowed Senator George

Clarence Mitchell

Tells Unitarians

BOSTON — Senator Walter George of Texas, in his re-election against ex-governor Herman Talmadge of Georgia, Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington Bureau of the NAACP, has stated, is due to the fact that the Senator does not "dare" to run because to win he "would have been required to prove that he is just as much in favor of racial segregation as the meanest backwoods politician in his state." Mr. Mitchell suggested that the Senator was "too old and perhaps too dignified to do that kind of job.

Pre-segregation groups in the southern states have held court not only over their state representatives in Congress, but also over many of the bills and treaties passed by the Government of the United States, an official of the NAACP declared here today.

Under the sponsorship of the Unitarian Fellowship for Social Justice, Mr. Mitchell spoke to delegations to the 21st annual meetings of the American Unitarian Association, taking place in St. Louis.

"The fate that has befallen Senator George is a warning to all Americans who like to think of their country as run by intelligent consideration of the issues rather than on the basis of race hate. It is also a reminder that what happens in one state can have a profound effect on the lives of all the United States citizens who have never been outside the borders of Massachusetts or California," he said.

Mr. Mitchell said that the three Congressional committees over which representatives who were politicians rather than statesmen had a vital concern with the welfare of the whole country. He said that the present Congress had been changed by the State Foreign Relations Committee

Missouri architect Frank Lloyd Wright has been chosen to build the new $15 million, 3-year-old school at the Eliot, Isaac Wilson Taylor Post, G.W.V.H., of the Boston AMVETS Post.

Parking in a garage.

You may have seen a sign that says "No Parking in the garage." This is a common practice in some areas to discourage drivers from parking in the building where they work. It can be frustrating to find a parking space, but it's important to follow the rules to maintain order in the parking area.

Last year this columnist had the pleasure of examining a donate of the Boston Public Library. It was a fine collection of black newsmen, delivered at the latest in the history of this newspaper. The collection was sponsored by the various black newspapers of the United States, and was enacted by the efforts of Phillips Brooks, Henry Crown, and others. In the present generation it is indeed exceptional to find a black capital city with a black newspaper that is more than a mere organ of opinion. The Boston Public Library is indeed a treasure house of black literature.
