Suffolk University Newslette (SUN), vol. 28, no. 1, 1999

Suffolk University Office of Public Affairs

Follow this and additional works at: https://dc.suffolk.edu/sun

Recommended Citation
https://dc.suffolk.edu/sun/213

This Newsletter is brought to you for free and open access by the Suffolk University Publications at Digital Collections @ Suffolk. It has been accepted for inclusion in Suffolk University Newsletter (SUN) by an authorized administrator of Digital Collections @ Suffolk. For more information, please contact dct@suffolk.edu.
Law School Dedication

The University officially opened David J. Sargent Hall during three days of festivities in September, marking a new era for the law school. The three-day celebration culminated in an academic convocation in the new building's grand hall, with Supreme Court Justice Stephen J. Breyer delivering the keynote address.

"This building was designed to help us provide the best possible legal education for our students, but it also presented an opportunity for Suffolk University to contribute to the community that has supported this university since its founding almost a century ago," said Suffolk University President David J. Sargent.

As a leader in innovative curriculum, Suffolk University Law School needed state-of-the-art facilities to back up its programs. Therefore, the new building was designed to take advantage of a full range of presentation, research and networking technologies. Sargent Hall offers all the technological advances a student will need to plug into the legal system of the 21st century: instant access to worldwide information databases; each classroom and library seat wired for laptop computers; moot court rooms equipped with advanced media capabilities.

"In order to make the most of the education-enhancing technology built into Sargent Hall, we as professors will be adapting the way we educate students," said Acting Dean William T. Corbett. "Through Internet and Intranet access and multimedia technology, we can make the study of law ever more comprehensive and accessible. One of our primary goals is to provide an 'access of opportunity' for all of our students, and we will continue to do that as we approach the next millennium."

Guests of the dedication toured the building and attended a gala reception, a Boston Massacre Trial reenactment, a black-tie fundraising dinner in honor of President Sargent, and a variety of high-tech lectures and demonstrations. The event was the largest gathering of Suffolk law alumni in the school's history.
EADLINERS

New Law School Dean Named

Robert H. Smith, a constitutional law authority and expert on the U.S. Supreme Court, was chosen in September to head the University's Law School. Dean Smith has been a professor at Boston College for 24 years. While at BC, he served as acting dean and associate dean for academic affairs. He also directed the Boston College Legal Assistance Bureau.

Dean Smith was chosen for the position after an eight-month nationwide search. He is a graduate of Wesleyan University and received his law degree from the University of Chicago Law School.

"Robert Smith brings to Suffolk University Law School a breadth of knowledge and experience and a deep commitment to the values and principles upon which the law school was founded," said President David Sargent. "He endorses the law school's history of providing access to excellence in legal education and is deeply committed to continuing the advancement of the day and evening divisions."

"I am particularly excited and honored to be appointed dean of Suffolk University Law School because I share its vision of legal education as integrating theory and practice in developing skilled, ethical and service oriented lawyers," said Smith.

Dean Smith succeeds Dean John Fenton, who stepped down for medical reasons last year after four years as dean. The dean officially assumed his duties in November.

Suffolk Launches New Corporate Education Partnership By Tony Ferullo

Christopher Robbins, director of corporate education, is in the business of helping other professionals improve their job skills. Now he is getting a little help from his friends – throughout the local higher education community.

Working closely together, Robbins and his colleagues have formed a partnership to assist people at all levels in the workplace to meet today's educational needs and prepare for tomorrow's challenges. In addition to Robbins, corporate education directors representing Harvard University, MIT, Boston College, Boston University, Bentley College and Babson College have united to comprise this unique group.

"Although we have just begun, this partnership has been quite successful," said Robbins, the creator of this corporate contingent. "With all of the great colleges and universities in the Boston and surrounding areas, it's difficult sometimes to differentiate ourselves from one another. In this particular case, we felt that by bringing everyone together we could become an even more powerful resource for leading businesses, government agencies and non-profit organizations."

According to Robbins, the bottom line is that knowledge is power. "Because of how the job market is changing on a global basis, the only way people can fully compete is being as knowledgeable as they possibly can," said Robbins. "We want people to maintain the highest level of performance so that they can help their organizations achieve its goals."

Corporate education provides many functions to a college or university, including increased enrollments. It also enables faculty members teaching a course, workshop or seminar to enhance their professional development. "One of the strengths is that the faculty acquire first hand experience working in the field and get to bring it back to their students in the classroom," said Robbins. "This program is a winning situation for people on the receiving end as well as the giving end – individuals in the workforce learn current information in the area of management development, while faculty members enrich their various skills as educators."

Griffin Fellows Participate in Unique Seminar

This fall thirteen Griffin Fellows are enrolled in a unique seminar on leadership and institutional change. The Griffin Fellowship Program is a special honors program of the Sawyer School of Management. The course, co-ordinated by Dean of Students Nancy Stoll and Associate Dean Elliot Gabriel, is a series of personal reflections on the seminar's topic. The seminar is being taught by people who lead and help create change at Suffolk. The presenters include President Sargent, Vice Presidents Flannery and Dennis, Deans Brennan, Ronayne, Stoll and Gabriel and Professors Giancola and Ornstein.

Through assigned readings and personal reflections, students are exposed to a range of views on the nature of effective leadership and methods for creating institutional change. The seminar atmosphere has allowed students to interact with the presenters and to learn about the topic in an intimate and personal atmosphere. A similar course is being offered to the CAS Archer Fellows in the spring.

Suffolk Launches New Corporate Education Partnership By Tony Ferullo

Christopher Robbins, director of corporate education, is in the business of helping other professionals improve their job skills. Now he is getting a little help from his friends – throughout the local higher education community.

Working closely together, Robbins and his colleagues have formed a partnership to assist people at all levels in the workplace to meet today's educational needs and prepare for tomorrow's challenges. In addition to Robbins, corporate education directors representing Harvard University, MIT, Boston College, Boston University, Bentley College and Babson College have united to comprise this unique group.

"Although we have just begun, this partnership has been quite successful," said Robbins, the creator of this corporate contingent. "With all of the great colleges and universities in the Boston and surrounding areas, it's difficult sometimes to differentiate ourselves from one another. In this particular case, we felt that by bringing everyone together we could become an even more powerful resource for leading businesses, government agencies and non-profit organizations."

According to Robbins, the bottom line is that knowledge is power. "Because of how the job market is changing on a global basis, the only way people can fully compete is being as knowledgeable as they possibly can," said Robbins. "We want people to maintain the highest level of performance so that they can help their organizations achieve its goals."

Corporate education provides many functions to a college or university, including increased enrollments. It also enables faculty members teaching a course, workshop or seminar to enhance their professional development. "One of the strengths is that the faculty acquire first hand experience working in the field and get to bring it back to their students in the classroom," said Robbins. "This program is a winning situation for people on the receiving end as well as the giving end – individuals in the workforce learn current information in the area of management development, while faculty members enrich their various skills as educators."

Griffin Fellows Participate in Unique Seminar

This fall thirteen Griffin Fellows are enrolled in a unique seminar on leadership and institutional change. The Griffin Fellowship Program is a special honors program of the Sawyer School of Management. The course, co-ordinated by Dean of Students Nancy Stoll and Associate Dean Elliot Gabriel, is a series of personal reflections on the seminar's topic. The seminar is being taught by people who lead and help create change at Suffolk. The presenters include President Sargent, Vice Presidents Flannery and Dennis, Deans Brennan, Ronayne, Stoll and Gabriel and Professors Giancola and Ornstein.

Through assigned readings and personal reflections, students are exposed to a range of views on the nature of effective leadership and methods for creating institutional change. The seminar atmosphere has allowed students to interact with the presenters and to learn about the topic in an intimate and personal atmosphere. A similar course is being offered to the CAS Archer Fellows in the spring.

Suffolk Launches New Corporate Education Partnership By Tony Ferullo

Christopher Robbins, director of corporate education, is in the business of helping other professionals improve their job skills. Now he is getting a little help from his friends – throughout the local higher education community.

Working closely together, Robbins and his colleagues have formed a partnership to assist people at all levels in the workplace to meet today's educational needs and prepare for tomorrow's challenges. In addition to Robbins, corporate education directors representing Harvard University, MIT, Boston College, Boston University, Bentley College and Babson College have united to comprise this unique group.

"Although we have just begun, this partnership has been quite successful," said Robbins, the creator of this corporate contingent. "With all of the great colleges and universities in the Boston and surrounding areas, it's difficult sometimes to differentiate ourselves from one another. In this particular case, we felt that by bringing everyone together we could become an even more powerful resource for leading businesses, government agencies and non-profit organizations."

According to Robbins, the bottom line is that knowledge is power. "Because of how the job market is changing on a global basis, the only way people can fully compete is being as knowledgeable as they possibly can," said Robbins. "We want people to maintain the highest level of performance so that they can help their organizations achieve its goals."

Corporate education provides many functions to a college or university, including increased enrollments. It also enables faculty members teaching a course, workshop or seminar to enhance their professional development. "One of the strengths is that the faculty acquire first hand experience working in the field and get to bring it back to their students in the classroom," said Robbins. "This program is a winning situation for people on the receiving end as well as the giving end – individuals in the workforce learn current information in the area of management development, while faculty members enrich their various skills as educators."

Griffin Fellows Participate in Unique Seminar

This fall thirteen Griffin Fellows are enrolled in a unique seminar on leadership and institutional change. The Griffin Fellowship Program is a special honors program of the Sawyer School of Management. The course, co-ordinated by Dean of Students Nancy Stoll and Associate Dean Elliot Gabriel, is a series of personal reflections on the seminar's topic. The seminar is being taught by people who lead and help create change at Suffolk. The presenters include President Sargent, Vice Presidents Flannery and Dennis, Deans Brennan, Ronayne, Stoll and Gabriel and Professors Giancola and Ornstein.

Through assigned readings and personal reflections, students are exposed to a range of views on the nature of effective leadership and methods for creating institutional change. The seminar atmosphere has allowed students to interact with the presenters and to learn about the topic in an intimate and personal atmosphere. A similar course is being offered to the CAS Archer Fellows in the spring.
Exciting News for SSOM Graduate Programs

SSOM’s MBA and MPA programs have been involved in exciting new developments. These developments include a new program, a re-accreditation and partnership with a professional association.

Suffolk has become the first business school in New England to offer an online MBA degree when it signed an agreement with eCollege.com, one of the largest online education providers in the United States. The new online format allows students to take classes anytime and anywhere. This program is aimed at people too busy traveling, too tied-down caregiving or too remote to attend a regular class schedule on a college campus. Students enroll on a part-time basis and can complete the Online eMBA program in as little as two years.

The MPA degree program has been re-accredited by the National Association of Schools of Public Affairs and Administration (NASPAA). The re-accreditation lasts for a period of seven years. SSOM Dean John Brennan sent his congratulations to the public management department and special thanks to Professors Terry Buss, Richard Beinecke, Sandy Matava and Associate Dean Susan Atherton for their extra effort during the process.

Finally, the Sawyer School in conjunction with the Massachusetts Society of CPAs has announced the establishment of an Accelerated MBA for CPAs. SSOM is now the MSCPA’s exclusive preferred provider for an MBA. The program of study is automatically shortened by one core course and, with 70 hours of CPEs in the past two years, two electives. Consequently, an MSCPA member can earn a Suffolk MBA in 10-16 months of study. *

Lou Connelly Receives Alumni Awards

By Tony Ferullo

It’s a good thing that Lou Connelly is a good sport. Especially when news traveled that the man who promoted Suffolk for nearly 30 years had been “scooped” — by the school’s Communication and Journalism department.

“The people around here did a good job of keeping this from me,” said Connelly, in the aftermath of receiving the Distinguished Alumnus Award by the Suffolk University Communication and Journalism department. “I had no idea that I was going to receive this award. They got me completely by surprise.”

The accolades, however, did not stop there. Two weeks later, Connelly was the recipient of the Outstanding Alumni Service Award by the Suffolk University General Alumni Association. “Like the communication and journalism award, this was also a great honor,” said Connelly, who graduated from Suffolk in 1957 with a bachelor of science in journalism degree, and received his masters in education degree from Suffolk in 1974.

Lou Connelly is the consummate public relations professional, well respected and admired by everyone he meets. “If we at Suffolk pride ourselves in being a family, then Lou is the uncle everybody loves,” said Bob Rosenthal, chair of the Communication and Journalism department. “He has touched the lives of many alumni, making a great impact on their careers.”

Karen Mancini, president of the General Alumni Association, has known Connelly for many years and considers him somewhat of an institution on Beacon Hill. “Lou is looked up to by everyone in the Suffolk community,” said Mancini. “He is a warm, caring and outgoing person who has been willing to go that extra mile for any organization associated with the school.”

In November of 1967, Connelly was appointed Suffolk’s first full-time public relations director and held that post for 29 years before retiring in June of 1996. He has continued working at the University in a part-time capacity as sports information director.

“In this business, you must have a general curiosity of different things that are happening around you,” said Lou Connelly. “It has to be something inside you. You also need an open mind and a nose for news.” *
New Employees
Anne Condon, phonathon supervisor, Development
Timothy Connell, coordinator, UMS
Darren Costa, operator, Switchboard
Michelle Cox, administrative secretary, Dean’s Office - Law
Donald Curioso, technical director, Theatre Arts
Charlene DiCalagero, administrative coordinator, Right Question Project
Gina Duong, secretary, Finance
Irit Gat, intern, Counseling Center
Jennifer Goodhue, career resources assistant, Law Career Services
Paula Hartman, library assistant, Sawyer Library
Peter Herman, program assistant, NESAD
Leighton Honda, evening supervisor, Law Library
Sheila Keane, A & C technician, Sawyer Library
Carol Kiely, staff assistant, Human Resources
Alexander Kowalski, security officer, University Police
Aniko Laszlo, research assistant, Beacon Hill Institute
Patricia McDonald, development assistant, Development
Michael Millea, evening supervisor/receptionist, Undergraduate Admission
Brendan Murray, coordinator, UMS
Amanda Myers, coordinator, Registrar
Kiersten Okine, intern, Counseling Center
Stavroula Pappas, senior development assistant, Development
Elaine Pascale, coordinator ESL, Second Language Services
Ronald Perreault, academic computing specialist, Law PC Resources
Elizabeth Pregill, evening supervisor, Sawyer Library
Elise Lockhart, intern, Counseling Center
Angela Salstrom, project secretary, Law Registrar
Connie Sellers, senior reference librarian, Sawyer Library
Sarah Swan, program assistant, Dean’s Office - SSOM
Megan Threlkeld, library assistant, Sawyer Library
Alissa Truong, secretary, Graduate Admission
Stephanie Victoria, coordinator, Registrar
Cherisa Zafft, development assistant, Development

Open Enrollment
During this busy holiday season, it is easy to forget that this is also the time of the year for health and dental plan open enrollment. This is the only time of the year during which you can make changes to your health and/or dental insurance enrollment.

If you wish to continue your present coverage without any changes, you do not need to do anything. However, to enroll in a new health plan, add or drop a dependent in your existing coverage, complete the appropriate form for that plan.

This is also the time of the year to enroll in medical or dependent care flexible reimbursement accounts. If you have been in a plan in the past, you must re-enroll every year in order to continue participation.

Specific information on all plans is available from Human Resources at ext. 8415. Human Resources can only accept forms until December 23.

Alum Donates $150,000 for Science Lab
Frank Sajan, an 85-year-old alumnus who currently resides in a nursing home, donated $150,000 to Suffolk to open its first fully endowed science laboratory. The lab will be used to find methods for using hydrogen as a possible energy source. Greater use of hydrogen energy could help decrease dependence on the limited supply of fossil fuels.

Dr. Walter Johnson, Physics department chair, hopes that the new Frank Sajan Energy Resource Laboratory will aid students and faculty in conducting research on hydrogen as an energy source. Dr. Johnson expects that the lab will be the first step by beginning research and more follow-up can be done in the future by pursuing government grants to keep projects moving along.

The lab will be run by faculty and students. CAS Dean Michael Ronayne stated that students will participate in decision-making about what systems will be studied and how to go about the research. Dr. Johnson credits Dean Ronayne because of his science background with recognizing the potential use for this lab when suggested by Sajan.

Frank Sajan graduated from Suffolk in 1956 with a bachelor’s degree and in 1957 with a master’s, both in education. The Energy Resource Lab will be located on the third floor of the Archer building and is scheduled to be finished this month. An official dedication ceremony is slated for January.
R. Lisle Baker, professor, Law School. He spoke about his research on mediators to the 27th Annual International Conference of the Society of Professionals in Dispute Resolution in September in Baltimore, MD. His presentation was entitled “How Mediators Think – Insights from the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator and a Survey of Some New England Professional Dispute Resolvers.” His ongoing research is based on a survey of over 150 professional dispute resolvers predominantly from the Boston area.

Ken King, deputy director, Juvenile Justice Center. He gave a speech at the MCLE Juvenile Law Conference in October. His caselaw and legislative update gave an overview of recent laws and legislation affecting juvenile delinquency matters and explored trends and emerging issues in juvenile law practice.

Frances Burke, professor, Sawyer School of Management. She has been appointed to the “We the People...PROJECT CITIZENSHIP” by the Massachusetts Chapter of the American Society for Public Administration. Funded by the U.S. Department of Education, the PROJECT is a civic education program for middle school students that promotes competent and responsible participation in state and local government.

Myra Lerman, director, Dean’s Office – SSOM. She received a certificate of appreciation from the Massachusetts American Council on Education Office of Violence in November at the New England School of Law. Her remarks, which will be published in the New England School of Law Law Review, were entitled “Student Rights: Can We Create Violence-Free Schools that are Still Free?”

Valerie Epps, professor, Law School. She, Assistant Professor Lorie Graham and Adjunct Professor Jane Rocamora presented papers at the annual conference of the International Law Association held in New York in early November. Professors Epps and Graham spoke on “Self-Determination after Kosovo and East Timor.” Professor Rocamora spoke on “The Death Penalty in the World Community: Bringing the U.S. into the 21st Century.” Professor Epps also presented “Innovations in Teaching International Law: International Law Clinics.” The International Law Student Association also sent a delegation to the conference.

David Yamada, associate professor, Law School. In August, he organized and hosted a forum titled “Workplace Bullying: A Silent Epidemic,” featuring Gary Namie, Ph.D., founder of the non-profit Campaign Against Workplace Bullying. The program was attended by employment lawyers, women’s rights and labor advocates and Suffolk law faculty and students. In October, he published the first issue of College Daze, a small, independent newsletter on higher education and social change. For additional inforemation on the forum or a copy of the newsletter, please email Professor Yamada at dyamada@acad.suffolk.edu.

Continued on pg. 6

Michael Rustad, professor, Law School. His comments were published in a September Boston Business Journal article. The article explored law student demand for more coursework in intellectual property law. The author also discussed Suffolk’s concentration in high technology law and the new facilities available to law students at Sargent Hall.

Kathleen Elliott Vinson, director of Legal Practice Skills, Law School. In July, she was a member of the site committee that coordinated the national conference for the Association of Legal Writing Directors, held in Boston. At the conference, she presented “How Internet Novices can Use ‘Web Course in a Box’ to Design a Web Page.” She was also a speaker on a panel entitled “Using Technology: Personal and Institutional Costs and Benefits.”

Gail Coffler, professor, English. In June, she was one of six Melville scholars invited to participate in the first Melville Institute, a credit-course for Massachusetts public school teachers at the Whaling Museum in New Bedford. Sponsored by the departments of Education and English at U-Mass Dartmouth, the Institute will be an annual affair with a different theme each year. Professor Coffler’s lecture, entitled “Mongrels, Renegades and Castaways: Ahab’s Crew,” focused on the characters of Moby Dick.

Joseph McCarthy, professor, Education and Human Services. He was site coordinator for the fall meeting of the New England Historical Society which was held at Suffolk in October. He is currently chairing the Book Award Committee for the New England Popular Culture/African Culture Association.

He also presented a paper entitled “A Dialectical-Constructivist Perspective on Psychotherapeutic Success and Failure” at the 15th International Conference of the Society for Exploration of Psychotherapy Integration in Miami, FL in April.

Jonathan Haughton, assistant professor, Economics. He recently participated in a conference on Equity and Growth Through Economic Research in Africa (EAGER). The conference was sponsored by the US Agency for International Development (USAID) and the UN Economic Commission for Africa, and took place in Gaborone, Botswana from October 18-20. The 300 participants, including economists, policy makers, academics and business people, came from all over Africa. Dr. Haughton is the principal investigator of one of the EAGER subprojects, collaborating with researchers in Kenya, Tanzania, Ghana, Zambia and Madagascar in a study of excise taxation in these countries. *
Potpourri
By Kimberly Hall MacMillan

Let me begin with a note of apology and explanation. Some of you may have noticed that there has not been a hard copy of the SUN issued in some time. Others of you may realize that this is because I have been on maternity leave since September. My husband Don and I welcomed our first child on September 8. Her name is Katharine Sarah but we call her Katie. Because I have been busy changing diapers, the hard copy of the October SUN was not printed. However, I would encourage you all to check it out on the Human Resources web site at www.suffolk.edu/admin/hr. Past issues have been archived on the web site for the past two years...

Congratulations to two other new mothers at Suffolk who suffered through the unbearably hot summer. Judi Scalley and her husband David were blessed with their second daughter, Julia Anne, on July 24. Julia weighed 8lbs. 7oz. and was 20 inches long...

Denise Rodriguez-Malvo and her husband welcomed their second child, Suraj, on September 20. He weighed 7lbs and was 20 inches long...

Best Wishes from the Business Office and the whole Suffolk community go out to Dung Nguyen, manager of accounts payable. Dung married Robert Saunders on September 11. The reception was held at the Grand Chau Chau restaurant in Chinatown...

Congratulations also go out to the Creative Services department. They won the Best of Category Award for the printing of the summer 1999 Law School alumni magazine, Suffolk Law. The award was part of the Printing Industry of America's Premier Print Award competition, open to all magazines printed in the country. Last year, in the same competition, the law magazine won an Honorable Mention...

Three employees were recognized at the annual Student Services Awards Dinner. The dinner is an opportunity for members of the staff to recognize the accomplishments of their colleagues. Michele Rapp of Career Services was recognized for her work with graduate students. Carol Maggio was honored for her work in Athletics. Thelma Lake was recognized for her contributions to the division. Congratulations to all...

Kudos go out to all of those in the Suffolk community who participated in yet another successful FallFest celebration including Chris DeStefano, Dr. Tom Connolly, Dr. Vicki Karns, Billy York, Dr. Marilyn Plotkins, Don Curioso, Connie Liauw and anyone else whom we may have forgotten to mention...

The Business Office announced that Suffolk has recently entered a corporate rate agreement with the Tremont Boston, a Wyndham Grand Heritage Hotel, located at 275 Tremont Street in the heart of the theatre district. Rates start at $129 and are available for corporate or personal use. For more information, please call Annette Gentile at ext. 8406...

A reminder from Campus Mail Services: All faculty and staff should check addressing on all incoming mail that they are receiving to be sure that it is properly labeled. For everyone who has moved, please be sure to notify vendors, newspaper and magazine subscription offices of any changes in your mailing address. Notification may be made in writing or by telephone...

The Suffolk University Chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP), after being dormant for several years, is being reconstituted and organized. Any interested faculty, adjunct and full-time, should contact Blair Bigelow, professor of English, or Robert Rosenfeld, master lecturer in Philosophy...

Congratulations to John Gilpatrick on being named an assistant hockey coach for Suffolk. John is the Suffolk hockey player who was paralyzed in a hockey game in January 1996. John needs only three courses to complete his degree in sociology. Best of luck in your new venture...

Unfortunately, we have some sad news to pass along this issue as well. All of our best wishes go out to CAS Associate Dean Susan Thayer. Susan's husband suffered a stroke earlier this fall. Our thoughts are with the entire Thayer family during his recovery period...

Many of you also heard that Mary Heffron, who retired from Suffolk in 1997 after 34 years of distinguished service, suffered a cerebral hemorrhage in mid-October. Mary's progress has been slow and steady. Her physical condition is encouraging, however, her short and long term memory can be aided by sending cards and even photos to her at New England Rehabilitation Center, 2 Rehabilitation Way, Room 319A, Woburn, MA 01801. All of our thoughts and prayers are with Mary for a speedy recovery...

It is with deepest sympathy that we announce the passing of Maureen Connelly, wife of Lou Connelly. Lou worked as Suffolk's director of public relations for 29 years before retiring in June of 1996. He currently serves as the University's sports information director. Maureen and Lou were married for almost 40 years and sent all five of their daughters to Suffolk. The sympathy of the entire Suffolk community goes out to the Connelly family at this difficult time...
Yesteryear

October 10, 1990. Rosalie Warren, who began her college education at 75 is shown here, at the age of 90, being honored by Suffolk University. In the background is a Georgia O'Keefe print donated to the University in Rosalie Warren's honor by the family of her late husband. In the foreground, joining Rosalie, are some of her favorite professors: Fred Wilkins (English), an unidentified woman, Dennis Outwater (Philosophy), Alexandra Todd (Sociology), Joseph McCarthy (Education and Human Services), Rosalie Warren, Ken Greenberg (History), John Holley (Sociology), Steven Spitzer (Sociology), Jack Demick (Psychology), an unidentified man, and Robert Webb (Psychology). Rosalie is still going strong this year at age 99.

(Each issue of The SUN will dig into the past for some photographic Suffolk memorabilia. If you have any historic or memorable photo send it to us at One Beacon Street.)

The Suffolk University Newsletter
Attention: Kimberly Hall MacMillan, Human Resources
8 Ashburton Place, Boston, Massachusetts 02108-2770

Visit our web site at:
http://www.suffolk.edu/admin/hr