Cavanagh Named History Chairman

by Joel Gavaghan
Dr. Norman Floyd will retire from his position as chairman of the History Department on July 1, 1973. This successor will be Dr. John C. Cavanagh, presently an associate professor of history.

Dr. Ronayne, Dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, confirmed Dr. Cavanagh's appointment. The SGA concurred and approved the nomination last Wednesday.

In reference to Dr. Floyd's retirement, his former chairman Dr. Ronayne stated that all his teaching and deanings expire at age 60. He noted that there are exceptions to this rule in cases where there are no suitable replacements. An exception is Florence R. Petherick, Chairwoman of the Humanities Department.

When interviewed, Dr. Floyd stated that he had received no official word concerning his retiring as department chairman. Using his 69 years as chairman, he said that it was his goal to save the structure of the department.

Commenting on the selection of Dr. Cavanagh as new chairman, Dr. Floyd remarked that he was pleased with the choice. He said that Dr. Cavanagh would revitalize "attacks on faculty" to times that all corners of the question further on this. Floyd felt that the new most 'dangerous attacks on the department' from other people were also mentioned but Floyd would not elaborate.

Dr. John Cavanagh

Dr. John Cavanagh began teaching at Suffolk in the fall of 1969. Cavanagh added that there is a "very strong faculty at Suffolk" that one can obtain a "very education" here. He also stated that the students at Suffolk are "quite comparable" to the students he has taught at Duke University and elsewhere.

In reference to the History Department, Cavanagh stated that he feels it is generally acknowledged that the lowering of these standards would not solve any problems contained therein. He termed the "poor image" of the department saying that in individual graduate students sometimes color the image of the department.

Responding to a question concerning student complaints about the department's high standards, Cavanagh said standards vary from teacher to teacher and that teaching methods also vary.

Dr. Cavanagh is 63 and a graduate of Boston University College where he majored in history. From there, he graduated from Duke University and Columbia University, obtaining his master's from Columbia in 1969 and his doctorate from Duke in 1970.

From 1965 to 1969, Dr. Cavanagh taught at the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences in the first full-time teaching position. Prior to that, he held a graduate position at Duke and at Dublin Preparatory School in Dublin, New Hampshire.

Before coming to Suffolk, Dr. Cavanagh spent some time as a graduate fellow at Harvard University, the University of Manitoba and the University of Toronto.

When questioned about his outside interests, Cavanagh emphasized his work in the classroom. He has taught in Broadway theater as well as on Broadway, in Italy and European travel as his major hobbies. Cavanagh was also announced by Dr. Ronayne that Dr. Leo Lobenstein, the Director of Psychological Services will retire from that position. He will be replaced by Dr. Kenneth Garn who has been in Psychological Services since 1969.

Garn, who has been a Clinical Psychologist since 1969, feels that his retirement is a good thing both for himself and the department. He said that the chairmen should retire at 65 to allow younger people to come up the ranks. He also welcomes the opportunity to work on some projects related to his field.

Dr. Garn has been at Suffolk since 1969. He graduated from Amherst College in 1966 and went on to obtain a masters in Counseling Education from Boston University in 1972. He obtained his Ed.D in Counseling Education from B.U in 1972. Before going to Boston University, Dr. Garn taught at the University of Maine in Lee, Massachusetts. He also was a Research Director and a Director of Testing.

In his new position, Dr. Garn hopes to guide some changes pending administrative approval. Among the possible changes are the elimination of an existing program, the hiring of a full-time secretary for the Department, courses might be taught at night and transferred to Summer night courses. There also may be part-time night counseling. Another change would entail giving credit for Reading Development courses.

Faculty OK's Changes in Calendar & Grading

by Bob Carr
The Faculty Advisory Committee, which is responsible for approving the revised school calendar and the new grading system, approved the revised school calendar and the new grading system.

The new calendar simply the reversal of the existing one would provide for a shorter fall term. The increased time for examinations will provide for a more comprehensive final exam. The revised calendar is favored by both faculty and students. Dean Michael R. Ronayne said he has never seen such widespread agreement on an issue. "It is one of the few times this institution has been for a change," he said.

A controversial issue has been added to the changes in the grading system. The consensus has been that the grading system simply the reversal of the existing one would provide for a shorter fall term. The two approved motions also will be discussed by the Joint Council on Student Affairs on Tuesday, February 13. Dean Ronayne said he plans to meet with the student government earlier in the week to discuss the two proposed motions. The SGA and the Joint Council came in the fall with three major proposals. The new calendar was opposed by the Board of Trustees. It meets in April.

Faculty OK's Changes

in Calendar and Grading

by Bob Carr

The Faculty Advisory Committee last Thursday, February 13, tentatively approved the revised school calendar and the new grading system.

The new calendar, simply the reversal of the existing one, would provide for a shortened winter break and the placement of the exams in May, a change from the current practice of placing the exams in April.

Dr. Ronayne said that in the revised calendar, the exams will be held in May, and that the new schedule will be in place by the beginning of the fall semester.

Dr. Ronayne also stated that there will be no change in the number of exams; however, the exams will be shorter and more focused.

The new grading system proposed by the Faculty Advisory Committee is a pass/fail system, with grades of C, D, and F being replaced by Pass, Fail, and No Credit.

Dr. Ronayne said that the new system would be easier for students and would eliminate the need for students to retake courses unnecessarily.

The new grading system will be implemented this fall, and students will be notified of the changes in the upcoming school year.

Amnesty

A Higher Morality?

by Dennis Vandall

President Nix on called a special press conference on January 31 and told the nation that: he would not allow a draft dodger who fled to foreign countries in order to escape military induction.

This is possible because no one can accurately know how many young Americans will be affected by this decision.

This address, Mr. Nixon told reporters that there would be no possibility of anyone being drafted who went to Canada or Sweden or someplace else and chose to desert their country because they had a higher morality.

When Mr. Nixon said a few hundred, his estimates were considered inaccurate by many. According to the U.S. Justice Department, there are still hundreds of outstanding draft dodgers who refuse to report. Nearly 45 percent of their numbers is considered to be fugitives.

The discrepancies of the figures are there for one of two reasons. Either Mr. Nixon is totally unknowable of the situation, or his statement is being used as a form of propaganda. Since the ignorance is the real reason must be the latter.

Mr. Nix on, in the last few weeks, been attempting to create a certain mood in the United States. He has been making more and more when the children of proper and war. He has praised the bravery of these fearless families. There is no reason why he should have done this.

The problem lies, however, in the creation of an atmosphere which is unfavorable to the returning draft dodger. It is true that the President has the right to grant amnesty or to exculpate of entirely. That power is given to him through a constitutional provision which gives him the right to grant a Nixon may have overstated his boundaries.

However, when he told the nation that there would be no draft dodgers, the Peace Corps.

Does the President have the right to determine the actions of one before the plan is concluded? If so, then it creates a mood of hatred among the American society, which are not even been tried in a court of law. As nationalization of the war, it will make the much more difficult for the court of law to find an impartial jury who will want to see the case before their eyes.

Is there a chance for pre-trial publicity? There is no doubt that Mr. Nixon's speech should have not been read at all.

Along with the President's announcement came an unspoken message. The tone told the people that even young Americans did have because of their higher morality they were less human.

Now, many Americans will act out their pseudo patriotic rages and condemn the draft evaders. The Supreme Court's previous recognition of a "higher law" will be negated. Mr. Nixon will all be done because Mr. Nixon prefers to get his advice from the principal and worst of all, from his emotions rather than conscious, realistic rationalism.

Population Expert Addresses Suffolk Audience
by Dennis Vandal

Suffolk students turned out in large numbers on February 8 and were told of the dangers that face the world if the population continues to grow at its present rate.

Dr. R. Greep, a professor at Syracuse University and a specialist in population studies, said that the present rate of population growth could mean the end of the world. He said that the world’s population is increasing at a rate of almost 1% per year, and that if this rate continues, the world’s population will double every 40 years.

The increase in population growth is not the only problem. The world’s resources are limited, and if the population continues to grow, there will not be enough resources to support everyone.

Greep also said that the population growth has put a strain on the environment. The world’s forests are being cleared at an alarming rate, and the oceans are being overfished. The world’s oceans are also becoming increasingly polluted.

Greep ended his talk with a warning to the students: “If we continue on this path, we will destroy our planet.”

PROBLEM CENTER NEWS

by Bob Potter

If you are a woman who is living in an apartment in the Boston area and are like most women living there, you will probably find that your kitchen is a mess. Many women find that their kitchens are cluttered, and they may even be afraid to use them. In this installment of our Problem Center column, we will be discussing some tips for keeping your kitchen clean and organized.

1. Make a list of everything you need to keep in the kitchen. This will help you stay organized and ensure that you have everything you need.

2. Use storage containers to keep your food organized. This will help you find what you need quickly and easily.

3. Use a trash can with a lid to keep your kitchen clean. This will help prevent pests and keep your kitchen smelling fresh.

At some point in their lives, women run into these problems. To combat these problems and give women good information, the Women's Health Council published our book, "Women's Health: A Guide for Women." This is an excellent book covering 12 different topics, ranging from anatomy and physiology to reproduction and mental health.

Jack Parr: Quick Improvement

Many praised the hit single "Good Vibes" from the Paul O'Neill show. However, the latest episode has received mixed reviews. Some critics felt that the episode was lacking in substance, while others praised the show's musical numbers.

The episode featured a musical number where the band performed a cover of a classic Beach Boys' hit. The performance was well-received, with many praising the band's harmony and the song's classic feel.

The band continues to tour and perform, with many dates scheduled throughout the year. Keep an eye on their website for the latest updates on their upcoming shows and events.
BUSTED: An Experiment

by Tom Maurolo
(Father of Tom Maurolo, a Sociology Department Undergraduate Fellow)

This is a day to day hour to hour account of my experiences while incarcerated at the Connecticut Correctional Department. I, together with 20 probation and parole female felons and eight female all from Massachusetts, were transported from Boston Correctional Authority in the state of Massachusetts, via a simulated prison on a school bus to a cell block in the Connecticut Correctional Department.

We all gathered in the bus and there were designated specific seats for us to take, which seemed out of place. I was still the beginning of many unexpected events. They explained to us that he had been duly authorized by the Governor to put us in the prison in Connecticut, where we would be treated the same as inmates. We could only talk to the person beside us. Lights at the back of the bus were dimmed and mustn’t be used. I almost didn’t expect it so soon.

We arrived at the institution and were held the following day to the reception area all locked up in cells. The girls were taken to another area at this time. Then our names were called and one of the officers would bring one of us to another room. We didn’t know what was going on, and the process of being brought down was locked up, then being taken to a cell and locked in.

“I decided to degrade myself into a robot.”

The night seemed to be going very slow being locked up, all the sounds of loud noise woke us up and the guard yelled out to us to get off and fix our beds. It must have been around 6:00 o’clock. We weren’t sure why they had the time, they simply went on. My earliest recollection was the sound of the light bulb creating lighting for the time by different activities by the guards and the daylight through a little window in the hall. It’s amazing how humans can make hay while they have at any particular moment.

We were all very excited now because we would be getting out of our cells for breakfast. I stood next to my door just waiting, but after standing there for 30 minutes I got discouraged and laid down again. I felt dejected and the End would be the beginning of the scenes. I had a guard yelling to me. “Get those shoes off! Do you do that at home?” I just took them off and laid down again. I felt depressed. Moments would pass in silence. The guard left and I decided then to degrade myself to the point that would adhere to the wishes of the institution. I was on my way to get along and keep my nose clean.

“I spent 6 hours in that hole with nowhere to sit and nothing to look at.”

My second night was very long, I couldn’t sleep at all. My cell wall, that was the only two inches of space to think about how time worked and my identity was something to be...I was just singing and banging with the metal fence and a little smile which proved to be the only thing getting through the typical moment. A new guard asked me if I was nervous, because I was standing there. I didn’t know what to make of it. I stood on the table in front of me. I was just there. I thought I was in a dream. I wanted a cigarette. To make a long story short, I had to take a stand. I asked for a cigarette and was very proud of myself.

An hour later the guards should that we were going to have a half hour exercise period all together in the recreation room. The happiness exhibited at this point was astonishing. We jumped up and stood next to our doors wanting for the guard to open the doors so we could go outside. We opened the doors but only one guard. We looked at him and at him but there was nothing said. I wouldn’t understand anything at this point. But I knew I would not read all.

While the whole population was together enjoying themselves, I was in my cell, dressed and barefoot. Finally unlocked and given a piece of paper and the guard came down to me and left. I opened my paper and found out that someone was in trouble. And there was a piece of paper with me.

“Strangers in the Night” together with the other girl next to me. She stopped me to who was involved in what I was singing. She was being embarrassed by my cell wall with the better. The louder I sang the better the wall. I felt my aggression. I was being exhausted by my actions and I didn’t realize how loud I was being. I didn’t care about the finished thing, I just wanted to be stayable for me. I wanted to be seen and I was very proud of myself.

An hour later the guards should that we were going to have a half hour exercise period all together in the recreation room. I was greatly involved in what was happening. We were set in the simulated prison in that hole with no where to sit and nothing to look at. I was standing there. I didn’t know what to make of it. I stood on the table in front of me.
