A PROCLAMATION ON CIVIL RIGHTS WEEK
BY HIS EXCELLENCY FOSTER FURCOLD, GOVERNOR

The protection of basic liberties of American society is perhaps the greatest responsibility of our constitutional form of government. The executive, legislative, and judicial departments of this Commonwealth and of the nation are entrusted with this obligation which presents itself consistently in peace and in war, and in times of collective security as well as individual freedom.

Many of the great social changes which have swept over the course of World War II, and especially our state and national attitudes regarding racial and religious discrimination, have been influenced or brought about by the actions taken by legislatures and heads of state or by decrees of our highest tribunals. These acts and decisions have reflected both the moral growth of America and the necessity of adjusting the norms of our society to the high ideals to which it aspires.

This is a critical period in our history. Our security is challenged from abroad by scientific accomplishments of a serious and spectacular nature. Our liberties are challenged from within by the resistance of a minority in the land which ended segregation in the public schools.

In the final analysis, it is the men, women, and children of our Commonwealth and nation who will determine to what extent our cherished principles of freedom and equal opportunity are to have real meaning. They are the people who have come into contact with the often critical situations which demand an individual application of fair play, respect for religion, and regard for human dignity. In protecting the rights of others to enjoy those precious liberties, they strengthen and insure those priceless freedoms for themselves.

Now, therefore, I, Foster Furcold, Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in accordance with Chapter 194 of the Acts of 1952, do hereby set aside as CIVIL RIGHTS WEEK, December 8 to 15, 1956 in Massachusetts and request that the citizens of the Commonwealth cooperate in its observance.

America’s First Jetliners Will Shrink Nation
First Jet Service across U.S.A. from New England starts at Boston in mid-1959

One of the most significant advances in U. S. transportation to occur in January, American Airlines launches the first commercial jet service across the nation with 707 Jet Flags hips (shown above).

The most thoroughly tested airliners ever to enter service, the huge 600 mile-an-hour 707 Flagships will trim the nonstop time between Los Angeles and New York, where they will be available, to an incredible 4 1/2 hours.

American’s big four-engine jets will carry 115 passengers in both first-class and coach accommendations (64 in each) and will have considerable range carrying capacity. Their speed will shrink the nation another 40 per cent resulting in tremendous savings in time for passengers traveling between these major U.S. cities.

The principal improvement which may be noted by the public less than the savings in time is the superior comfort of the new airliners. American’s 707 Jet Flagships are longer, wider and roomier than the slower piston airplanes they will replace and are virtually vibration free because of the turbine engines.

Following the introduction of the 707 Jet Flagships on the transcontinental nonstop route between Los Angeles and New York, service will be expanded to include by mid-1959 San Francisco, Chicago, Dallas, Washington, D.C., Baltimore and Boston.
