NAACP Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins beams as he accepts $10,000 check for the Association from Mollie Dickson, an $2,000-old retired resident of Oakland, Calif. When she presented the check in San Francisco on Sept. 1, Mrs. Dickson said she was making the gift in God's name to fight against the disgraceful abuse of American democracy. Mr. Wilkins said he could not remember any single gift to the NAACP from an individual as large as Mrs. Dickson's. "Your gift as an expression of your desire to restore love and brotherhood is on the highest level," Mr. Wilkins said in thanking Mrs. Dickson for her generosity. By gift, he declared, "will serve to enlarge others to the extreme."

THE ESTABLISHMENT

The situation in South Africa is now at a turning point. This is a critical moment in the history of the country. The ANC, previously a marginal force in the political landscape, has now become a significant player on the national stage. The government's response to this challenge will determine the course of the country for years to come.

The ANC has been active in the political arena, organizing mass protests and demonstrating against the apartheid regime. The government has been quick to react, implementing crackdowns and arrests to quell the dissent. However, these tactics have only served to galvanize the ANC and its supporters, who continue to call for an end to the system of apartheid.

The ANC's legitimacy is increasingly recognized both domestically and internationally. The organization has been able to attract a wide range of supporters, including students, workers, and other marginalized groups. This support has been a key factor in the ANC's ability to challenge the government's authority.

As the situation in South Africa unfolds, it is clear that the ANC's actions have thrown into question the government's ability to maintain control. The ANC's success in organizing and mobilizing opposition is a significant development, and one that cannot be ignored.

In conclusion, the ANC's growing influence in South Africa presents a challenge to the government. The ANC's ability to attract support and organize resistance is a testament to its strength and determination. As the situation continues to unfold, it will be important to monitor the ANC's activities and to consider the implications for the future of the country.

THE FACTS

By Columbus Tribune

African American students apply and pursue hazardous occupations like mining. Every minute of their lives they are exposed to danger from explosions and other hazards. A disaster such as occurred in 1968 in the South would be compounded
by the effects of discrimination and poverty. This disastrous situation is a call to action for all of us who care about the future of our society.
