Seventy Graduates in N. E. Colleges
Three Ph. D.'s, 12 Masters and Many Professionals in List. No Doctors. Three Harvard Senators Win Honors.

Approximately seventy seven graduates will attain degrees or diplomas for work done at the various universities and institutions of higher learning in New England this year.

The number of candidates for the Ph. D. degree, the highest attainable degree, is approximately thirty, and there are about nine who have received the masters' degree and of presentation of their degrees they will receive their degrees next year.

From a check up there were three Swiss, five of Philosophy for graduation, and two of Chemistry.

Four of Harvard, one of Brown and five of Daniel Webster, for the best in the literature of the year.

In the last list, thirteen names, of which are two of these Swiss and a third of these Swiss.

Mrs. Harriet Boswell reports that she will be present at the commencement exercises at Harvard and Brown University.

Mrs. T. H. Boswell, who has been in the habit of attending the commencement exercises at Harvard and Brown University, will be present at the commencement exercises at Harvard and Brown University.

This week has marked the dedication of the new Junior High School building of the Providence schools. A number of interested people attended the dedication ceremonies, and saw how their children are housed in a fine new school.

We have followed with interest the series of articles in this paper on the "New High School". This week the city has opened the doors for its first students, and the pupils and teachers are beginning to learn how to use the building.

It does seem that this year, especially, our children are to be a part of the Junior High School in the Providence schools, and that they will be able to attend the new school.

"NUMBERS" WAR PUT DAMPER ON PLAY

A war between rival football teams in the Three Years Ago with the arrival of the new Junior High School, we were able to do some research on the history of the Junior High School and the development of the Junior High School in Providence.

The early history of the Junior High School is not well documented, but it is known that the first Junior High School in Providence was opened in 1884. It was housed in a small building on the corner of South Street and Mill Street, and was staffed by a small group of teachers. The school was originally intended to serve as a preparatory school for the city's public high school, but it quickly became clear that the school was not equipped to handle the kind of academic challenges that would be expected of a high school.

In 1895, the school moved to a larger building on the corner of Mill Street and Washington Street, and was reorganized as a Junior High School. The school was staffed by a larger group of teachers, and was equipped to handle a wider range of academic challenges.

Over the next few decades, the Junior High School in Providence continued to grow and develop, and it became clear that the school was needed by a larger portion of the city's population. In 1920, the city opened a new Junior High School on the corner of Smith Street and High Street, which was intended to serve as a high school for the city's African American population.

Today, the Junior High School in Providence is one of the city's most important educational institutions, and it continues to play a vital role in the development of the city's young people.

POLITICALLY, we support men and measures, NOT PARTY

I want to see the time come when black men will regard themselves as fully participating members of American citizenship, when they will vote for Democratic candidates if they prefer the Democratic policy on tariff or taxation or foreign relations or what not, and when they will vote the Republican Ticket only for reasons.

—Franklin D. Roosevelt, in his famous Bipartisan, April 30, 1927.

BRICKENBURG AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH

The Rev. J. S. Woodworth, pastor, announced last Sunday, that the Oxford Church and the Metropolitan Avenue Church will be joined to form Cambridge Baptist Church.

The Oxford Church, under the leadership of the Rev. J. S. Woodworth, has been operating a successful program of service to the community. The Metropolitan Avenue Church, under the leadership of the Rev. J. S. Woodworth, has been conducting a successful program of service to the community.

The two churches have been working closely together in the past, and the decision to merge was made after careful consideration of the needs of the community.

The new Cambridge Baptist Church will continue the successful programs of the Oxford Church and the Metropolitan Avenue Church, while also working to meet the needs of the community in new and innovative ways.

The合并 is a significant step in the continued growth and development of the community. The churches are committed to serving the community in a variety of ways, from providing spiritual guidance and support to addressing social and economic issues.

The合并 is expected to take place in the coming months, with the new Cambridge Baptist Church holding its first services in the near future.

The合并 is a significant move in the ongoing process of community development and growth. The churches are committed to working together to create a better future for all members of the community.

Boston Now Has Three Colored Teams Playing in the City

The Boston baseball scene is now dominated by three colored teams, the Lincoln Park, the William E. Jones, and the Nebraska. These teams are making a decided impression on the baseball world.

The Lincoln Park team is composed of the best players from the city, and has already shown its ability to compete with the leading white teams. The William E. Jones team is a strong team, with several players who have shown good form in previous games. The Nebraska team is a new addition to the scene, and has already shown promise.

All these teams will participate in the upcoming exhibition games, and will be a welcome addition to the baseball world.
