WILL saves students' sanity by finding library books

The college's special finding service, which helps students locate books on the shelves, is a much-appreciated service. The WILL (Wheaton Library Finders) service is run by a group of rotating students and is open from 10 A.M. to 10 P.M. Monday through Friday. It is a great help to students who are searching for a particular book and do not want to waste time looking for it themselves.

As a result of this service, students have been able to find books that were not on the shelves, as well as books that had been misplaced. WILL has also helped students to locate books that were previously thought to be lost. The service is particularly useful for students who are taking classes that require the use of certain books, and who may have difficulty obtaining them.

The WILL service is run by a group of rotating students who are assigned to it on a weekly basis. They are responsible for searching for books that students have requested, and for returning books to their proper location. The service is open from 10 A.M. to 10 P.M. Monday through Friday, and is a valuable resource for students who need help finding books.
