Maintenance strike imminent

SU, union negotiations break down

A strike by Suffolk maintenance and custodial workers may occur at any time, according to Business Service Union Local 204 Agent Dennis English, who noted that negotiations between the university and the union have broken down.

The Finance Committee of the Board of Trustees rejected the "maintenance agreement" proposed by a federal mediator in negotiations between maintenance and custodial workers and the university, but negotiations on a new agreement would not yet be held.

The "maintenance agreement" would have required the university to pay the 25 percent of their medical insurance payments for the union workforce for the next 12 months. The workers would also have received eight cents per hour the first year, according to John F. Hanrahan, president of the union.

The current agreement called for an increase of 10 percent the second year.

University may not utilize all of Ashburton Building

The top floor of the Ashburton Place building may not be occupied in the near future, according to Reiss, who explained that the university has an agreement with the Board of Trustees to use the building for University Student Government (USG) activities and USG activities are occurring in the building.

However, this agreement is subject to change, and it is possible that the building will be used for other purposes in the future.

An open invitation

Editor's note: The following letter was sent to every member on the Suffolk University Board of Trustees.

Dear Trustees,

I would like to take this opportunity to cordially invite you to spend a day with the Suffolk alumni. The purpose of this important day is to welcome you into the family of Suffolk alumni and to share with you the excitement of our dynamic student organizations and to observe the effect that the vision of academic, service, and leadership can be had.

I believe this is a big project because you have some of your own days with your daily schedule, but I feel it would be worthwhile venture. Therefore, I especially ask that you spend a day to the life of a student that works in an organization. This is a unique opportunity for you to make the school function — the students.

Best regards,

by Lois Rose

Runners flowed through the streets of downtown Buffalo on Oct. 11 for the first time this fall. The race was the first of the year and the largest yet. The event was sponsored by the Buffalo Athletic Club and the city of Buffalo. The race started at 7:30 a.m. on the corner of Main and Washington streets. The route was a 10K course, which took the runners through the city's downtown area.

Among the runners were many who had participated in other races earlier this year. The event had a total of 737 runners, which was a large increase from the previous year. The average age of the runners was 39.5 years old, and 12 percent were women. The average time for the race was 36 minutes and 34 seconds. The winners of the race were春季

Expansion of the universe has scientists baffled

By George Miller

The universe is expanding. Scientists in the United States have found that the newly discovered "dark matter" is responsible for the expansion. The new discovery could help scientists understand the nature of the universe.

The universe is expanding. Scientists have long suspected that the universe is expanding, but the new discovery confirms their suspicions. Dark matter, which is thought to make up a large portion of the universe, is responsible for the expansion.

Although the discovery is exciting, scientists are still baffled by the nature of dark matter. It is thought to be made up of particles that are not yet discovered.

Guns fire over wargames

The first wargame that came to mind was a game called "Guns Fire Over Wargames." The game was designed to simulate a battle between two armies.

The game was popular in the 1970s and was sold in stores across the country. It was a hit with young boys and became a classic of its time.

The game was simple. Players would draw a map of the battlefield on a sheet of paper and then place their army's units on the map. Then, they would take turns firing guns at each other until one army was left standing.

The game was fun, but it was also educational. It taught players about strategy, tactics, and the importance of teamwork.

Despite the game's success, it was eventually discontinued due to changes in the market and the introduction of new games.

The game's legacy lives on, however. Many people still remember the fun they had playing "Guns Fire Over Wargames" when they were young.
Bruins add few faces in quest for Cup

For Carolyne Daly

The Boston Bruins' long quest for success in the Stanley Cup is about to be met with a new batch of players. The Bruins, who surprised the hockey world by winning the Cup in 1970, have added several new faces to their roster this year in an attempt to bring another championship to Boston. The new players include several high-scoring forwards and a few talented defensemen. The Bruins' management is hoping this influx of new talent will help them return to their winning ways and bring the Cup back to Boston.

NBA preview: the Sixers in the East

This is the first in a four part monthly series of previews of the Sixers that will appear in the Philadelphia Inquirer. The Sixers are the team to watch in the East.

by Jay Barret

There is no doubt that the Sixers are the team to watch in the East. They have a collection of big players, some of whom are among the best in the league, and they have the potential to be a very good team. They have a young and talented roster, and they have the potential to be a very good team.

Over the summer, the Sixers found themselves in a very precarious position. They had to make some tough decisions, and they had to make some tough choices. They had to let go of some of their star players, and they had to make some tough choices. They had to make some tough choices, and they had to make some tough choices.
