Plath gets 'no respect' in "Bell Jar"

Editor

Plath's book is a powerful expression of her pain, but her work is sometimes misunderstood. The 'no respect' you're referring to comes from the fact that Plath's characters are often portrayed as self-centered and manipulative, which can be interpreted as disrespect.

Easter egg hunts and telling tales is day's custom

by Philip St. Clair

The Easter season begins this Sunday with the Feast of the Resurrection. Easter, the most religious of all Christian holidays, commemorates the resurrection of Jesus Christ, who according to the Christian faith was crucified and then rose from the dead. Easter is a day of joy and celebration, marked by special services in churches and the giving of gifts, such as Easter eggs.

The Easter egg hunt is a popular activity, especially among children. Eggs are decorated with bright colors and designs, and children search for them in gardens and fields. The hunt can be a fun and festive way to celebrate the resurrection of Jesus.

An oft-traveled road through time and space

by Philip St. Clair

In 840 B.C., King Solomon began the construction of the Temple of God in Jerusalem. This temple, one of the most important religious structures of ancient Israel, was designed as a place for the worship of God and served as a center for Jewish religious and cultural life.

According to Old Testament accounts, Solomon's temple was a magnificent structure, built with costly materials and ornate decorations. The temple's purpose was to serve as a place of prayer and a symbol of the divine presence among the people of Israel.

The temple was later destroyed by the Babylonians in 586 B.C. and again by the Romans in 70 A.D. However, the memory of Solomon's temple endured, and it became a symbol of the resilience and perseverance of the Jewish people in the face of adversity.

The construction of the temple was a laborious and challenging undertaking, requiring skilled craftsmen and vast resources. It is a testament to the dedication and faith of the people of Israel, who believed that the temple was a vital link between their community and the divine.

The temple's destruction was a tragic event that marked a turning point in Jewish history. However, the destruction also served as a reminder of the importance of faith and the enduring strength of the Jewish people.

The temple's legacy continues to this day, as a symbol of the enduring power of the Jewish people and their commitment to their faith.
Nemerov wins Pulitzer, scandal for his poetry

by Margaret Country

Mr. Nemerov was a newspaper editor in New York, who later became a poet. He was a close friend of T.S. Eliot, and his poems were often published in the same journals as Eliot's. Nemerov's poetry is characterized by its formal structure and its use of classical allusions.

In April 1970, Nemerov was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for poetry. However, the prize was embroiled in scandal, as Nemerov was accused of plagiarism.

The following is an excerpt from the Pulitzer Prize announcement:

"Nemerov's poetry is characterized by its formal structure and its use of classical allusions. His poems often explore themes of love, loss, and the human condition. Nemerov's work has been praised for its intellectual depth and its technical mastery."

It's the Pirates, Dodgers in the National League

by Joe Placenti

Pittsburgh is ready to meet its biggest rival tonight in the National League Championship Series. The Pirates and Dodgers will play the first game of the best-of-five series at Three Rivers Stadium in Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH - The Pirates are ready to meet their biggest rival tonight in the National League Championship Series. The Pirates and Dodgers will play the first game of the best-of-five series at Three Rivers Stadium in Pittsburgh.

The Pirates have a young and talented team, with stars like Andy Van Slyke and Barry Bonds. The Dodgers, on the other hand, have a veteran team led by Yogi Berra and Don Drysdale.

The series promises to be a heated one, with both teams battling for a spot in the World Series.

The second NBA season to be more exciting than first

By Stephen Thornberry

NBA fans, it's time for the second season of excitement. The league has set a new standard for the sport, and fans are ready for more.

The NBA has made some changes to the game, including a longer regular season and a new format for the playoffs. The moves have been well-received by fans, who are excited to see how the league will evolve.

The NBA is committed to making the game more exciting, and fans are elated to see the results. The league has also made some changes to the officiating, which has been a point of contention in recent years.

Overall, the second NBA season promises to be even more exciting than the first.
Champ remake comes up a winner

The Champ, directed by Fresco yeh, is a film that pushed the boundaries of the usual depiction of boxers. The story of the fighter, played by Joe Frazier, is a rare mix of machismo and sentimentality, and the performance by Frazier is powerfully gripping.

The film is set in the 1930s, and the story revolves around Frazier's character, who is a boxer with a reputation for being rough and tough. As he prepares for a big fight, he starts to develop a bond with a young boxer, played by a young boy named Joe. The film explores the complexities of their relationship, as Frazier tries to mentor the young boxer and help him succeed in the world of boxing.

The film is a remarkable achievement, and it is a testament to the power of film as a medium to tell stories that challenge the audience's assumptions and encourage them to think about important issues.

Perfectly boring Couple

Perfectly boring Couple is a film that explores the challenges of relationships in a humorous and thought-provoking way. The story unfolds as a couple, played by a married couple, try to navigate the ups and downs of their relationship.

The film is a satire on the complexities of modern relationships, and it is a reminder that, while love is a powerful force, it can also be a source of frustration and conflict.

Overall, the film is a thought-provoking and entertaining exploration of the challenges of relationships, and it is a must-see for anyone interested in the complexities of love and marriage.

SOMETHING ABOUT

In The Champ, yeh's direction is exemplary, with a great use of lighting and cinematography to create a sense of atmosphere. The performances are also outstanding, with Frazier giving a particularly powerful and nuanced performance.

In Perfectly boring Couple, the actors deliver a range of emotions, from the humorous to the heartfelt, which makes for an engaging and entertaining viewing experience.

Overall, both films are commendable achievements, and they are a testament to the power of film as a medium to tell stories that challenge and inspire us.
Local band making good

by Karen Haley

A little band of guitarists, singers and drummers, who call themselves the Local Band, has been making a lot of noise in the local music scene. Their brand of folk rock is gaining popularity, and they are making a name for themselves.

The band consists of four members: Bob, the lead singer and guitarist; Mike, the drummer; John, the bassist, and Susan, the keyboard player. They met in college and have been playing together for over a year.

Bob, who writes most of the band's songs, says that their music is a reflection of their lives. "We write about the things that matter to us," he says. "Love, friendship, and the struggles of everyday life."

Mike, who has been playing the drums in the band for two years, adds that their music is a way for them to express their emotions. "It's like therapy," he says. "When we're playing, we feel like we're on top of the world."

The band's latest album, "Local Vibes," was released last month and has been well-received by both critics and fans. The album features a mix of folk rock, blues, and pop, and includes a cover of "Imagine" by John Lennon.

The band is currently preparing for a tour that will take them across the country. They hope to continue to grow and to reach new audiences with their music.

Crazy like a fox: Licata's portrayal of Gogol's madman

I am at a loss for words to describe the performance of Frank Licata as the madman in the play "The Devils Advocate." His portrayal was so convincing that it left me with a sense of unease.

Licata played the role of the madman in a production of the play at the local theater. His performance was so realistic that it was difficult to tell whether he was acting or not.

I found myself looking at the audience when he was on stage, thinking that he was really a madman. His movements were so erratic and his speech so disjointed that it was almost like watching a real madman.

Licata's performance was so convincing that it made me wonder how he was able to get into character. I asked him about it after the show and he explained that he had spent a lot of time studying the role.

Licata said that he had to get into character in order to portray the role accurately. "I had to understand the character's mindset," he said. "I had to know what he was thinking and how he was feeling."
That's entertainment? Oscars again dull

by Bill Franco

It is the eve of Oscar night, the day on which the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences bestows its annual honors upon the film industry. The event is usually a high point of the film year, a night of glamour and celebration, but this year it has been overshadowed by the controversy surrounding the Academy's voting process.

The Academy has faced criticism for its lack of diversity in recent years, with many of the nominated films and performers being of non-white or non-English-language origin. This has led to a growing demand for change, with many calling for the Academy to make its selection process more transparent and inclusive.

The Academy has responded by introducing some changes to its voting rules, including the introduction of a new category for diversity and inclusion. However, many feel that these changes are not enough, and that the Academy needs to do more to ensure that its awards reflect the diversity of the film industry.

In the meantime, the Oscars continue to be a source of controversy. Some have suggested that the event should be canceled altogether, while others argue that it should continue, but with a greater focus on diversity and inclusion.

Live Krekel knocks 'em dead

by Dave Malin

Krekel, the popular comedian, has a new act that is causing a stir in Hollywood. His latest routine is a commentary on the Academy Awards, and is drawing praise from fans and critics alike.

"Krekel takes on the Academy Awards in a way that is both humorous and insightful," said one critic. "He manages to poke fun at the industry without being harsh or bitter."

Give funds to the YAF... or else!

Dr. John T. Hinderlie

The world has been one big joke for the Youth America for Freedom (YAF), and now they are getting serious. This week the YAF has thrown a national fund drive called "Give Funds to the YAF... or Else," and is charging a deposit to those who don't support the group. The YAF, which consists of a group of college students, is working to support YAF sponsors like the United States Presidents Committee for the Arts and Humanities, the National Committee for the Arts, and the National Endowment for the Arts. The YAF is asking for $10.00 per member, and is demanding that those who don't pay up have their names deleted from the YAF roster.
