PBC motion out of order

by Laura Babcock

In a surprise move, the President of the PBC, James S. O'Brien, announced that the Board of Directors had voted to remove a key member of the PBC's executive committee. The decision was met with shock and surprise by members of the organization, who had expected a different outcome.

"This is a difficult decision," O'Brien said in a statement released to the media. "However, after careful consideration, we feel that it is in the best interests of the PBC to take this action." The member in question, a long-time PBC executive, was widely respected and well-respected within the community.

The news was met with shock and disappointment by many members of the PBC, who had worked closely with the member for years. "I can't believe they did this," said one PBC member. "He's been a great asset to the organization." Other members expressed fear that the move could have a negative impact on the PBC's ability to function.

O'Brien promised that the organization would work to ensure a smooth transition and that the decision would be made in the best interests of the community. "We are committed to the PBC's mission," he said. "We will continue to work hard to serve the needs of our community."

Surveys shows ‘Rats’ a good place to meet people

Suffolk University’s annual survey of student life has revealed that the Rat has become a popular place for students to meet each other.

The survey, conducted by the Office of Student Affairs, found that 70% of Suffolk students had visited the Rat at least once in the past semester.

The Rat, located in the heart of campus, is a popular hangout for students and is often crowded with people.

The survey also found that students who frequent the Rat are more likely to be involved in extracurricular activities and have a higher GPA than those who do not.

The survey was conducted online and was open to all Suffolk students.

The results of the survey will be used to improve campus life and make the Rat a more enjoyable place for students.

Easie vs. Southie — the game that almost wasn't

By Barry Fell

Bears may have won the Battle of the Bulges last week, but no one's safe when it comes to the annual Thanksgiving Day football game. This year, theEasie Bears took on the Southie Spartans in a battle of wills and brawn.

The game was a thrilling one, with both teams putting in all they had. The Easie Bears came out on top, but it was a close call. The Spartans fought back hard, but the Bears held firm, securing their victory with a last-minute touchdown.

Next year, the Easie vs. Southie game is sure to be just as exciting. Mark your calendars now for the Battle of the Bulges 2023!
Students react to new coach

Front and center - Suffolk women's basketball coach Herb Headlee.

Headlee isn't new to the coaching game. He served an 11-year term at the University of Southern Indiana from 1976 to 1987. During his tenure, the Screaming Eagles won three national championships and four regular season titles. Headlee remains active in the sport, currently serving as an assistant coach for the Division II Kentucky Surveyors.

Suffolk women's basketball will look to continue the success of the past two seasons, which included an NEC regular season title and a trip to the NCAA tournament. The Rams enter the season ranked No. 7 in the preseason poll.

The Rams have high hopes for the upcoming season, and Coach Headlee has set ambitious goals for the team. "Our goal is to win the NEC title and make a run in the NCAA tournament," he said.

A Typical Play

Coach Headlee: "We need to improve our defense and get more scoring from our guards. We have a good mix of experienced players and some talented freshmen. We're looking to compete with the best teams down the road."

Ping pong tournament champion

Suffolk student athlete Steve Johnson has been named the winner of the ping pong tournament at the University of Southern Indiana. Johnson, a senior majoring in business administration, defeated his opponents in a thrilling final match to claim the championship.

Johnson's victory caps a successful season for the Rams, who finished second in the NEC regular season. The Rams advanced to the NCAA tournament, where they were upset in the first round.

Johnson hopes to continue his success in future years. "I've been playing ping pong for over 10 years, and I'm still improving," he said. "I'm looking forward to competing at a higher level next season."

Kurosawa and Godard return in form

By Jeff Parmet

When the Japanese director Akira Kurosawa and the French director Jean-Luc Godard agreed to make a joint film, "Red Beard," they were already at the height of their careers. Kurosawa, known for his brooding, moralistic films, had made "Throne of Blood" and "Red Beard." Godard, a radical filmmaker, had made "A bout de souffle" and "Pierrot le fou." Their film, "Red Beard," was a critical and commercial success, and it cemented their reputations as two of the greatest filmmakers of their time.

But the collaboration between Kurosawa and Godard was not just about making a film. It was also about pushing the boundaries of what cinema could be. The film was shot in the early 1970s, a time of great social and political upheaval. Kurosawa and Godard were both interested in exploring the themes of power, culture, and identity.

The film is a conversation between two filmmakers, each with a different perspective on the world. Kurosawa's influence is evident in the film's epic scope and its use of long takes and slow pacing. Godard's influence is evident in the film's intercuts and its use of non-linear storytelling.

"Red Beard" is a film about the clash of cultures, the clash of ideas. It's a film about the relationship between the past and the present, the East and the West. And it's a film about the relationship between the individual and the collective.

In many ways, "Red Beard" is a film about the challenge of making art in a world that is changing so rapidly. It's a film about the struggle to create something new, something that will endure.

For Kurosawa and Godard, "Red Beard" was a chance to explore their ideas, to experiment with their craft. It was a chance to push the boundaries of what cinema could be. And in doing so, they created a film that is still relevant today, a film that continues to inspire filmmakers and audiences around the world.
