"Survival Incorporated" doom boom

By Mark Michael

As if a wave of unexpected cultural metamorphosis were washing over us and shattering the order of the universe as we knew it, sudden and startling elements of "survival" incorporated into a metaphor of doom and gloom have taken hold in our collective psyche. This phenomenon, which can be termed "doom boom," has emerged as a powerful force, influencing our daily lives and challenging our understanding of the world around us.

Doom boom is characterized by a proliferation of survival-themed goods, services, and narratives. These offerings range from practical survival kits to esoteric survival philosophies, each aiming to prepare us for the imminent collapse of societal structures. The central tenet of doom boom is the belief that the end of the world is near, and thus we must stockpile and brace ourselves against the impending apocalypse.

The origins of doom boom can be traced back to the rise of the 1990s, a decade marked by economic uncertainty, political instability, and environmental concerns. As the world faced the threat of nuclear war, environmental degradation, and economic collapse, the idea of survival became a central concern. This trend gained momentum in the 2000s, with the rise of the Internet and social media, allowing for a rapid spread of doom boom ideas.

The impacts of doom boom are multifaceted. On the one hand, it has spurred innovation in the development of new technologies and infrastructures designed to sustain humanity during a catastrophic event. On the other hand, it has fueled a culture of fear and pessimism, leading to a widespread rejection of alternative narratives and solutions.

As we navigate through the turbulence of our current social and political landscape, it is crucial to critically examine the forces driving doom boom and to consider the ways in which we can cultivate a more resilient and hopeful outlook. By doing so, we can work towards building a more sustainable and equitable future for all.
What to see (when there’s ‘nothing’ to see)

In a city renowned for its array of entertainment opportunities, there are times when there’s nothing to see—or rather, we think there’s nothing to see. But in truth, there’s always something to see if you know where to look. And even if you don’t, we can help you find it.

Babson cools Suffolk’s winning fire

by Ben Kline

In the game of the Babson hockey team and the Suffolk varsity in recent weeks, Suffolk has shown the ability to cool the winning fires of Babson. Suffolk has shown the ability to take the edge off Babson’s scoring am

The Babson hockey team has been on a roll recently, scoring high against most teams. Suffolk, however, has been consistent in their defensive play, limiting Babson’s scoring opportunities.

In their most recent game, Babson faced Suffolk in a tense battle. Babson had the upper hand for much of the game, with multiple scoring opportunities, but Suffolk’s goalie kept the ball in play, preventing any scoring.

Babson’s attack was relentless, with players pressing hard for the goal. Suffolk, on the other hand, defended their goal with determination and skill, keeping Babson at bay.

Despite Babson’s efforts, Suffolk’s defense held firm, and the game ended in a scoreless draw. This result is a testament to Suffolk’s strong defense and ability to keep the ball in play, preventing any scoring.
