The Suffolk Journal will sponsor an open house next Thursday from 1:00 - 2:30 in RL 19.

Any interested people are asked to stop by. We need writers, copyeditors, graphics and layout people.

GIVE! GIVE! GIVE!
Give 'til you feel good at the A.P.O. BLOOD Drive today!

Give 'til you feel good at the A.P.O. BLOOD Drive today!

Scanners: a mind-blowing experience

In the age of instant information, scanners have become the new electronic beacon. They allow us to read all sorts of documents, from newspapers to textbooks, with incredible speed. But what happens when you scan a mind-blowing experience?

In this issue, we explore the world of scanners and their impact on our daily lives. We talk to experts who use scanners every day and find out how they are changing the way we do business. We also take a look at the latest developments in scanning technology and how they are shaping the future of the information age.

Set construction prohibits programs

Local universities respond to Reagan cutbacks

In a recent move, the Reagan administration cut funding to local universities, leaving them to fend for themselves. The cutbacks have caused a great deal of concern among students and faculty, who fear that the universities will be forced to cut programs and services.

In response to the cutbacks, local universities have taken action. Suffolk University, for example, has announced that it will increase its tuition by 10% in order to offset the loss of federal funding. Other universities have also announced plans to cut programs and services, including academic programs and student services.

However, some universities have managed to avoid the worst of the cutbacks. The University of Massachusetts, for instance, has announced that it will cut only 5% of its programs and services. This has been possible because the university has a strong endowment and a dedicated faculty and staff.

In general, the universities have been forced to make difficult decisions in order to cope with the cutbacks. They have had to prioritize their programs and services, and they have had to find creative ways to raise money.

The cutbacks have had a significant impact on the universities, but they have also had a positive effect. Many students and faculty have become more involved in their universities, and they have started to voice their concerns about the cuts.

In the end, the cutbacks have shown us that we need to be more proactive in supporting our local universities. We need to support them with our time, talent, and resources, and we need to speak up when they are facing financial challenges.

SGA member extinguishes fire

In a recent incident, a Suffolk University student extinguished a fire in one of the university's dormitories. The student, who is a member of the Student Government Association, was able to put out the fire with a bucket of water.

Local universities respond to Reagan cutbacks

In a recent move, the Reagan administration cut funding to local universities, leaving them to fend for themselves. The cutbacks have caused a great deal of concern among students and faculty, who fear that the universities will be forced to cut programs and services.

In response to the cutbacks, local universities have taken action. Suffolk University, for example, has announced that it will increase its tuition by 10% in order to offset the loss of federal funding. Other universities have also announced plans to cut programs and services, including academic programs and student services.

However, some universities have managed to avoid the worst of the cutbacks. The University of Massachusetts, for instance, has announced that it will cut only 5% of its programs and services. This has been possible because the university has a strong endowment and a dedicated faculty and staff.

In general, the universities have been forced to make difficult decisions in order to cope with the cutbacks. They have had to prioritize their programs and services, and they have had to find creative ways to raise money.

The cutbacks have had a significant impact on the universities, but they have also had a positive effect. Many students and faculty have become more involved in their universities, and they have started to voice their concerns about the cuts.

In the end, the cutbacks have shown us that we need to be more proactive in supporting our local universities. We need to support them with our time, talent, and resources, and we need to speak up when they are facing financial challenges.

SGA member extinguishes fire

In a recent incident, a Suffolk University student extinguished a fire in one of the university's dormitories. The student, who is a member of the Student Government Association, was able to put out the fire with a bucket of water.

Local universities respond to Reagan cutbacks

In a recent move, the Reagan administration cut funding to local universities, leaving them to fend for themselves. The cutbacks have caused a great deal of concern among students and faculty, who fear that the universities will be forced to cut programs and services.

In response to the cutbacks, local universities have taken action. Suffolk University, for example, has announced that it will increase its tuition by 10% in order to offset the loss of federal funding. Other universities have also announced plans to cut programs and services, including academic programs and student services.

However, some universities have managed to avoid the worst of the cutbacks. The University of Massachusetts, for instance, has announced that it will cut only 5% of its programs and services. This has been possible because the university has a strong endowment and a dedicated faculty and staff.

In general, the universities have been forced to make difficult decisions in order to cope with the cutbacks. They have had to prioritize their programs and services, and they have had to find creative ways to raise money.

The cutbacks have had a significant impact on the universities, but they have also had a positive effect. Many students and faculty have become more involved in their universities, and they have started to voice their concerns about the cuts.

In the end, the cutbacks have shown us that we need to be more proactive in supporting our local universities. We need to support them with our time, talent, and resources, and we need to speak up when they are facing financial challenges.

SGA member extinguishes fire

In a recent incident, a Suffolk University student extinguished a fire in one of the university's dormitories. The student, who is a member of the Student Government Association, was able to put out the fire with a bucket of water.

Local universities respond to Reagan cutbacks

In a recent move, the Reagan administration cut funding to local universities, leaving them to fend for themselves. The cutbacks have caused a great deal of concern among students and faculty, who fear that the universities will be forced to cut programs and services.

In response to the cutbacks, local universities have taken action. Suffolk University, for example, has announced that it will increase its tuition by 10% in order to offset the loss of federal funding. Other universities have also announced plans to cut programs and services, including academic programs and student services.

However, some universities have managed to avoid the worst of the cutbacks. The University of Massachusetts, for instance, has announced that it will cut only 5% of its programs and services. This has been possible because the university has a strong endowment and a dedicated faculty and staff.

In general, the universities have been forced to make difficult decisions in order to cope with the cutbacks. They have had to prioritize their programs and services, and they have had to find creative ways to raise money.

The cutbacks have had a significant impact on the universities, but they have also had a positive effect. Many students and faculty have become more involved in their universities, and they have started to voice their concerns about the cuts.

In the end, the cutbacks have shown us that we need to be more proactive in supporting our local universities. We need to support them with our time, talent, and resources, and we need to speak up when they are facing financial challenges.

SGA member extinguishes fire

In a recent incident, a Suffolk University student extinguished a fire in one of the university's dormitories. The student, who is a member of the Student Government Association, was able to put out the fire with a bucket of water.

Local universities respond to Reagan cutbacks

In a recent move, the Reagan administration cut funding to local universities, leaving them to fend for themselves. The cutbacks have caused a great deal of concern among students and faculty, who fear that the universities will be forced to cut programs and services.

In response to the cutbacks, local universities have taken action. Suffolk University, for example, has announced that it will increase its tuition by 10% in order to offset the loss of federal funding. Other universities have also announced plans to cut programs and services, including academic programs and student services.

However, some universities have managed to avoid the worst of the cutbacks. The University of Massachusetts, for instance, has announced that it will cut only 5% of its programs and services. This has been possible because the university has a strong endowment and a dedicated faculty and staff.

In general, the universities have been forced to make difficult decisions in order to cope with the cutbacks. They have had to prioritize their programs and services, and they have had to find creative ways to raise money.

The cutbacks have had a significant impact on the universities, but they have also had a positive effect. Many students and faculty have become more involved in their universities, and they have started to voice their concerns about the cuts.

In the end, the cutbacks have shown us that we need to be more proactive in supporting our local universities. We need to support them with our time, talent, and resources, and we need to speak up when they are facing financial challenges.

SGA member extinguishes fire

In a recent incident, a Suffolk University student extinguished a fire in one of the university's dormitories. The student, who is a member of the Student Government Association, was able to put out the fire with a bucket of water.

Local universities respond to Reagan cutbacks

In a recent move, the Reagan administration cut funding to local universities, leaving them to fend for themselves. The cutbacks have caused a great deal of concern among students and faculty, who fear that the universities will be forced to cut programs and services.

In response to the cutbacks, local universities have taken action. Suffolk University, for example, has announced that it will increase its tuition by 10% in order to offset the loss of federal funding. Other universities have also announced plans to cut programs and services, including academic programs and student services.

However, some universities have managed to avoid the worst of the cutbacks. The University of Massachusetts, for instance, has announced that it will cut only 5% of its programs and services. This has been possible because the university has a strong endowment and a dedicated faculty and staff.

In general, the universities have been forced to make difficult decisions in order to cope with the cutbacks. They have had to prioritize their programs and services, and they have had to find creative ways to raise money.

The cutbacks have had a significant impact on the universities, but they have also had a positive effect. Many students and faculty have become more involved in their universities, and they have started to voice their concerns about the cuts.

In the end, the cutbacks have shown us that we need to be more proactive in supporting our local universities. We need to support them with our time, talent, and resources, and we need to speak up when they are facing financial challenges.

SGA member extinguishes fire

In a recent incident, a Suffolk University student extinguished a fire in one of the university's dormitories. The student, who is a member of the Student Government Association, was able to put out the fire with a bucket of water.

Local universities respond to Reagan cutbacks

In a recent move, the Reagan administration cut funding to local universities, leaving them to fend for themselves. The cutbacks have caused a great deal of concern among students and faculty, who fear that the universities will be forced to cut programs and services.

In response to the cutbacks, local universities have taken action. Suffolk University, for example, has announced that it will increase its tuition by 10% in order to offset the loss of federal funding. Other universities have also announced plans to cut programs and services, including academic programs and student services.

However, some universities have managed to avoid the worst of the cutbacks. The University of Massachusetts, for instance, has announced that it will cut only 5% of its programs and services. This has been possible because the university has a strong endowment and a dedicated faculty and staff.

In general, the universities have been forced to make difficult decisions in order to cope with the cutbacks. They have had to prioritize their programs and services, and they have had to find creative ways to raise money.

The cutbacks have had a significant impact on the universities, but they have also had a positive effect. Many students and faculty have become more involved in their universities, and they have started to voice their concerns about the cuts.

In the end, the cutbacks have shown us that we need to be more proactive in supporting our local universities. We need to support them with our time, talent, and resources, and we need to speak up when they are facing financial challenges.

SGA member extinguishes fire

In a recent incident, a Suffolk University student extinguished a fire in one of the university's dormitories. The student, who is a member of the Student Government Association, was able to put out the fire with a bucket of water.
SGA proposes constitution changes...

Every night is Saturday night at the Publik House.

PUBLIK HOUSE
FOOD-DRINK

1:2:30 Clubs/Organizations

Tues. Mar. 3

F134B
F134B
F134B
F134B
F134B
F134B
F134B
F134B
F134B
F134B
F134B
F134B
F134B

1 month

$15.00 plus tax

50 people donate blood

S.G.A. NEWS
THE S.G.A. AND THE IRISH CULTURAL SOCIETY

PRESENT

A ST. PATRICK'S DAY PARTY
MARCH 13, 1981
from 7 - 1:00 P.M.
at the Parker House
Tickets will be available March 9, 1981
in the Student Activities Office
Ridgeway 5

Students $3
Guests $5

Proper Dress Required

Featuring the Broken String Band
A light buffet will be served
Auditorium is for students’ use

For a week or so the auditorium programs and condone but not booked to be held in the Suffolk auditorium. After all is said and done, the SGA has decided that the auditorium belongs to the students of Suffolk College.

One of the first things that the SGA decided was that the auditorium belongs to the students of Suffolk College. This was a decision that was made after considerable thought and discussion. The SGA felt that it was important to make the auditorium a place where students could come together and enjoy a variety of programs.

In the past, the SGA has hosted a variety of programs in the auditorium. These programs have included concerts, lectures, and discussions. The SGA has also hosted a variety of events, such as movie nights and game nights. The SGA has always made an effort to ensure that these programs were well-attended and that they were enjoyed by students.

The SGA has also been involved in the planning and execution of these programs. The SGA has worked closely with the administration to ensure that these programs were well-organized and that they were held in a safe and comfortable environment.

The SGA has also taken steps to ensure that these programs were financially viable. The SGA has worked to ensure that the costs of these programs were covered and that any profits were used to fund future programs.

The SGA has always been committed to providing a variety of programs for students. The SGA has always believed that it is important for students to have a voice in the planning and execution of these programs. The SGA has always been committed to ensuring that students have a say in the future of the auditorium.

The SGA has always been committed to providing a variety of programs for students. The SGA has always believed that it is important for students to have a voice in the planning and execution of these programs. The SGA has always been committed to ensuring that students have a say in the future of the auditorium.

The SGA has always been committed to providing a variety of programs for students. The SGA has always believed that it is important for students to have a voice in the planning and execution of these programs. The SGA has always been committed to ensuring that students have a say in the future of the auditorium.
An unsettling taste of morning T

Internal Revenue: They get their man

Are we really what we do and do not eat?

PBC and TKE agree to co-sponsor March party

Officials speculate on cutbacks

Ridgeway piano fire extinguished by student
Suffolk closes out strong - 64

By Dick Brown

The women's basketball team, after winning its first game of the season and losing its second, closed its 1979-80 season with a second straight win. The team went on to win its third straight non-conference game to finish with a 9-14 record.

The team's win over the Westfield State Owls was 64-57. The Owls had a 17-6 lead at the end of the first half, but the Jaspers managed to pull ahead in the second half. The team's lead grew to as much as 22 points in the second half, but the Owls fought back to cut the lead to 11 points with just over five minutes left in the game.

The team's win over the Owls was a significant one, as it marked the end of their non-conference games. They will now focus on improving their conference record as they look to make a run in the conference tournament.

The team's next game will be against the Union Dutchmen, who are currently struggling with a 3-16 record. The team will need to stay focused and continue to play their best if they want to have a chance of winning.

The Journal is in need of sportswriters

Stop by RL 19

Finishing 9-10

“We’ve proven we can win” - Corbett

The team's victory over the Owls was a significant one, and it was a testament to the team's resilience and determination. The team's coach, Corbett, was pleased with the team's performance and believed that it was a sign of things to come.

“The team's victory over the Owls was a significant one, and it was a testament to the team's resilience and determination. The team's coach, Corbett, was pleased with the team's performance and believed that it was a sign of things to come.”

Women's final record: 7-7

Rams end season with two stunning victories

By Long Spence

The women's basketball team finished the season with a 7-7 record after two stunning victories over the Westfield State Owls and the Union Dutchmen. The team played well in both games, and their performance was a testament to their hard work and dedication.

The team's victory over the Owls was a significant one, as it marked the end of their non-conference games. They will now focus on improving their conference record as they look to make a run in the conference tournament.

The team's next game will be against the Union Dutchmen, who are currently struggling with a 3-16 record. The team will need to stay focused and continue to play their best if they want to have a chance of winning.

The Journal is in need of sportswriters

Stop by RL 19
The Citizen Kane of Polish socialism

Cronenberg blows the lid off the modern horror genre

The Citizen Kane of Polish socialism

Art & Entertainment

The Citizen Kane of Polish socialism

Cronenberg blows the lid off the modern horror genre

Film

Clips

The Journal is looking for a circulation manager.
The Journal is looking for a circulation manager.

Program Council Events

Coming March 9th from 12:22 in the cafeteria.

THE AMAZING HAYES
enjoy a bit of magic and comedy

FILMS
MARCH 12 — Night of the Living Dead
1 pm - in RL2
MARCH 26 — Clockwork Orange
1 pm - in F338 A&B

UPCOMING EVENTS
March 27: Welcome Back Party
April 1 — Shear Madness
April 9 — K9 Demonstration
April 10 — Red Sox Game

MEETINGS:
Program Board — Friday
2 pm in PCR

The Program Board has adopted new guidelines for any organizations that would like to co-sponsor an event with us. For more information contact The Program Council Office in RL2 or The Student Activities Office.

ATTENTION ALL ORGANIZATIONS:
Please contact the Program Board with events that are being planned so that we can avoid planning simultaneous and conflicting events.