Professor Homer recalls 35 years

by Lila Grifflm and R. Mcvany

As Sufolk University celebrates its 35th year as an independent college, President William F. Homer looks back on the institution's growth and evolution. Homer has been a member of the Sufolk faculty for 35 years, first as a professor of history and then as the college's president. In 1958, he was appointed chairman of the Political Science Department and later became chairman of the History Department. In 1966, he was appointed dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, and in 1970, he became the college's third president.

Homer has been a strong advocate for Sufolk University and has worked tirelessly to ensure its continued success. He has been a leading figure in the development of the college's curriculum and has played a key role in the college's growth and expansion.

Homer has been a member of the college's faculty since 1953 and has taught courses in American history and political science. He has also served as the college's dean of students, director of admissions, and director of development.

In recognition of his many contributions to the college, Homer has been honored with several awards and recognitions. In 1991, he was presented with the college's Distinguished Service Award, and in 1996, he was named a fellow of the American Historical Association.

Homer and his wife, Barbara, reside in Boston and have two children, John and Jane.

Possible lawsuit against rock group

by John Atkins

A possible lawsuit may be brought against the rock group AC/DC for playing loud music during a recent concert. The group is accused of causing a disturbance, which led to a complaint being filed with the local police.

The group is scheduled to play a series of concerts in the area, and residents are becoming increasingly concerned about the noise levels. Some have even asked for the concerts to be rescheduled or cancelled.

The group's management is said to be in contact with the authorities to try and resolve the issue.

Possible work study abuses

by Professor Homer

Several students have complained that they are being paid less than the minimum wage for their work study jobs. Some have also reported that they are not receiving fair compensation for their efforts.

The college's work study program is designed to provide students with hands-on experience and to help them develop job skills. However, several students have expressed concerns about the fairness of the program and have asked for it to be reviewed.

The college administration is currently investigating the reports and will take appropriate action if necessary.

New Council takes action

The SGA's new council took its first action today by passing a resolution that was presented at last week's meeting. The resolution, which was sponsored by Representative Mike Tood, was designed to improve the council's role in handling campus issues.

The resolution, which was passed unanimously, calls for the council to meet more frequently and to actively participate in the decision-making process. It also calls for the council to establish a more effective means of communicating with students.

Representative Tood said that the council's actions were a step in the right direction. "This resolution is just the beginning," he said. "We have a lot of work to do, but I'm confident that we can make a difference."

Mendez offers Springfest thanks

Dear Editor:

Thank you for allowing me to write to Springfest Committee. I would like to take this opportunity to express my gratitude for all those who worked so hard throughout Springfest. It is not only the planning committee, but also the students who worked hard, who we should be thankful for. If anyone needs a volunteer for Springfest, I would love to help in any way I can.

Sincerely,
Mendez

Bad weather vs. the baseball team

Academic

Bad weather can be a significant challenge for any sports team, especially when it comes to outdoor activities like baseball. The Suffolk baseball team faced such an obstacle when a recent spell of inclement weather disrupted their practice schedule. The team had to adapt their training and game strategies to cope with the unfavorable conditions.

Knocking on Heaven's Gate

Heaven's Gate. It's a movie, and a novel, and a strange, strange story. The novel, Heaven's Gate, is by 19th-century American writer Bret Harte, and the movie, Heaven's Gate, is by 20th-century American director Sam Peckinpah. The novel and the movie are both about a man named John Marston, who is a rancher and a cowboy in the American West.

In the novel, Marston is a man of many faces. He is a rancher, a cowboy, a soldier, and a man of the land. He is also a man of the law, and a man of the church. But most of all, he is a man of the American West. Marston is a man who is in love with the land, and with the people who live in it. He is a man who is in love with the law, and with the church. But most of all, he is a man who is in love with the American West.

In the movie, Marston is a man who is in love with a woman named Jo. Jo is a woman who is in love with the land, and with the people who live in it. She is a woman who is in love with the law, and with the church. But most of all, she is a woman who is in love with the American West.

The novel and the movie are both about a man named John Marston, who is a rancher and a cowboy in the American West. But they are also about love, and about death, and about the American West.
