Although the number of reported crimes at Suffolk is down —
Police feel crime is on the rise

by Jolynne Massey

Whites are more concerned than blacks or Hispanics about the security and well-being of their families at Suffolk University. In a survey conducted by the Suffolk Journal asking blacks, Hispanics, and whites if they felt more secure, seventy percent of whites felt secure compared to seventy percent of Hispanics and fifty percent of blacks.

Some Suffolk police officers feel crime is on the rise, although some Suffolk police officers feel crime has decreased. Only where there is a decrease in reported crimes does the Suffolk police department feel a decrease in crime.

Suffolk police officer Captain Paddock stated at the Suffolk police department meeting yesterday that while the number of reported crimes decreased, there is still a need for the police department.

Police still feel that there are more crimes going on than is being reported. The Suffolk police department feels that the number of reported crimes is down to about eighty percent of the number of crimes that are really going on.

Suffolk University ROTC program

Suffolk's ROTC program is one of the smallest in the country. It is smaller than most other universities in the country, but the program is still effective.

Suffolk's ROTC program has been around for over twenty years. It was established in 1960.

Suffolk's ROTC program is open to all students, regardless of their major. The program consists of three components: military training, academic training, and leadership training.

Military training is provided by the Army, Navy, and Air Force. Students are required to attend basic training, which includes physical training, basic military tactics, and basic military education.

Academic training is provided by the University, which includes courses in military history, military tactics, and military law.

Leadership training is provided by the Army, Navy, and Air Force. Students are required to attend leadership training, which includes courses in leadership theory, leadership practice, and leadership development.

Suffolk University ROTC program is a great experience for students who are interested in military service. The program is challenging, but it is also rewarding.

Women's Cross Country fares well

In Jim Cream's first year as head coach, Suffolk College's Cross Country teams have done well. The men's team set new meet records last weekend and the women's team finished fourth and second, respectively, against six teams in the Northeast Conference.
