New advisor would like to expand role —
Minority advisor still a part-time position

by Lisa Gifford

Robert J. Ward ’82, Suffolk’s current “Minority Student Coordinator,” has an office at Massachusetts College of Liberal Arts (MCLA) in Pittsfield. Ward said he was unsure where he would be located if he were to get an office on campus. “I don’t see myself being on campus because I can’t imagine myself being that close to home,” Ward said. “I would like to be in a place where I can be with students and help them.” Ward added that he was not sure what his job duties would be. “I want to do as much as I can for the students,” Ward said. “I have a lot of responsibilities.”

Ward said that he would like to make some positive differences in minority students’ educational experiences.

Nicaragua rebuilds after years of turmoil

Nicaragua's Troubled Years

In 1979, the Sandinista government overthrew the Somoza Dynasty, ending nearly 33 years of dictatorship. The new government faced numerous challenges, including the legacy of the Somoza regime, US intervention, and internal divisions. Despite these obstacles, the government worked to rebuild the country, focusing on education, health, and social programs. In 1987, the Sandinistas won re-election, and the country experienced a period of relative stability. However, the end of the Cold War and the collapse of the Soviet Union, along with economic pressures and US inspired Contra wars led to political instability. In 1990, the Contras declared a cease-fire, and the government continued to work on recovery. In 1992, El Presidente Daniel Ortega was re-elected, and the government continued to focus on development and social programs.

Part-time isn’t enough

In the past since the administration has been persuaded to improve student life at Suffolk. The Alden Student Building has improved educational facilities and the attractiveness of its plants in look and expansion of the Ridgeway Building offers some hope that student athletic facilities may also be improved.

Professor E. Boynton Peirson, Jr., said Suffolk is committed to being a high-quality urban institution. In particular, the university’s efforts to build on its teaching and administrative reputation. Suffolk also must learn that the needs of all its students are fulfilled.

Suffolk has a student body comprised of adults of all ages and ethnic groups. There is no a large ethnic population at Suffolk, that as it should not be overlooked, there should have it a full-time advisor.

In an interview this week with part-time Professor Student Coordinator Robert Walsh the student learned that both Walsh and Dr. Reedy would like to make a joint and full-time one. Although the idea that programs would be made so that the idea is a little more appealing, they need these needs. He said he would have been a common dream between the government and the students.

Suffolk is so often treated, said the students, you need to address more opportunities to the government in both form and need and they said that they would be full-time students and students would be more successful in part-time.

Share in Suffolk’s tree lighting

First Wednesday, Suffolk will invite the Beacon Hill community to share in the celebration of Christmas as partaking in the Hill’s first Christmas tree lighting.

The program features a program at Suffolk to part in the holiday celebration.

Following the lighting in Alumni Park on Temple St., a selection of carols and singing will start that evening in a festive program.

Several students have put in time and labor preparing the following program with Program Board Special Events Committee’s Caroline Furst and onion custodian Linda Doria. They would like the event to become a tradition which was created and Hill’s Hill will look forward each Christmas.

This event will only be a success if it is supported by Suffolk.

Letters to the editor should be submitted by 12 noon on Mondays before publication.

Concert thanks

To the editor:

We would like to use this editor to extend our gratitude to the Program Board and the students involved in making the Bush-Hollingsworth School of Music and the Arts at Suffolk a success.

Special thanks go out to the Program Board Social Committee and the Student Government Associations for their help in the planning of this event. We would like to thank the student community and the administration for their support.

Sincerely,

Douglas J. White

Suffolk’s cultural revolution

To the editor:

While the end vision of this plan is to turn Suffolk into a cultural center, the methods used to achieve this vision are questionable. The plan for an arts center is not new, but the implementation is.

Nicaragua still has a long way to go

It continues to fall short, despite a government that has been in power for 30 years and has made significant changes. Many businesses and organizations have left the country, and those that remain are struggling to survive.

The government has made efforts to improve the economy, but progress has been slow. The country remains one of the poorest in the world, with high levels of poverty and inequality.

The situation for women and children is particularly dire. They face high levels of violence and discrimination, and access to education and healthcare is limited.

Despite these challenges, there is hope for the future. The government has promised to continue working to improve the country and address the issues it faces. With support from the international community, Nicaragua has the potential to make significant progress in the coming years.

Never Never Land: a deep film with a lot to say

By J. Scott Bovell

Film is a place where the imaginative and the real fuse together in a way that results in a film that is both timeless and timely. "Never Never Land," directed by J. Scott Bovell, is a deep film that explores the complexities of human existence and the nature of reality.

The story follows the journey of a young boy named Charlie, who is searching for his lost father. Along the way, he encounters a variety of characters who help him navigate the challenges of both the real and imagined worlds. The film's themes of family, identity, and the search for meaning are woven into a narrative that is both poignant and thought-provoking.

The film's visual style is striking, with a blend of live-action and animation that creates a unique and immersive experience. The music is also a standout, with a score that perfectly complements the film's mood and tone.

"Never Never Land" is a must-see for anyone who appreciates a well-crafted, thought-provoking film that challenges the viewer to think deeply about the nature of reality and the human experience.

Ward hopes minority situation will improve

Boyard Public Schools, minority leaders and white public school head would also like to see a spirit of enthusiasm for the school among minority students. Ward said that whenever he attended Lee School he felt that the minority students were not as enthusiastic about the school as their white counterparts. Ward also said that he has noticed a decrease in the number of minority students at Suffolk because they are not as enthusiastic about the school.
