ward would like to see better communication between the city and the schools. He also expressed his concerns about the number of minority students in Suffolk, and for the future, the situation will improve. However, the councilman did say that many of the teachers in the school were of poverty
levels and had to use their own money
to buy clothes and other materials.
ward expects that school conditions
will improve in the future.

Students attend conference by Tom Downs

Suffolk students recently attended Northeast Regional Conference of the National Student Organization which was held in Lexington, Kentucky. The conference where students took in seminars on various topics relevant to running a student organization. In total, the conference included 2,000 students from 200 different student organizations.

Frosh VP walks out at SGA meeting

by Jolinda Matthew

Freshman/CPS freshman Robert Bowser walked out of Tuesday's Student Government Association meeting to protest what he claims are unfair treatment of freshmen students. The freshman believed that the SGA was acting as a liaison between the faculty and the administration and that the freshmen were being left out of the decision-making process. He accused the SGA of ignoring the concerns of the freshmen and of not being representative of the entire student body.

Phonathon reaches its mark

The Phonathon, a major fundraiser for the Student Affairs Office, has surpassed its goal of raising $100,000. The Phonathon, which is held annually, involves students making phone calls to alumni and friends to solicit donations. This year, the Phonathon has raised $115,000, far exceeding its goal.

Suffolk braves the storm

In the month of January, northeastern United States residents are faced with winter storms that bring snow and freezing temperatures. Students at Suffolk University are no exception. With the recent snowstorm that hit the area, many students faced challenges in their daily lives.

The ups and downs of elevator transportation

Editor: This winter, the Suffolk University campus experienced some difficulties with elevator transportation. The problem was not limited to one particular elevator but affected multiple elevators across different buildings.

Holiday shopping in the Hub

'I'll buy that'

By Amy Candel

... and the Hub was hopping and bustling in anticipation of the season. In fact, it was so lively that it was hard to find a place to stand still. The shoppers were all eager to get a head start on their holiday shopping, and the Hub was the perfect place to do it. You could almost hear the excitement in the air.

Nieman-Marcus: 'Things they didn't know they needed'

By Jan Bonac

... and the shoppers were all rushing from store to store, eager to find the perfect gift. The Nieman-Marcus department store was a haven for shoppers, with its selection of luxurious gifts and unique items. But the real surprise was discovering that they didn't know they needed!

Hello Dollies

By Marla Moore

... and the Hub was bustling with activity. The Hello Dollies were a popular attraction, and the shoppers were all eager to see what they had on display. The dolls were all so lifelike, and the shoppers couldn't help but fall in love with them.

Apathy — Who cares?

By Ken Dunette

... and the Hub was a scene of apathy. The shoppers were all going about their business, but there was a sense of disinterest in the air. It was as if no one really cared about what was happening around them.

Phoenix's 15th anniversary

By Ken Parent

... and the Hub was a scene of excitement. The Phoenix was celebrating its 15th anniversary, and the shoppers were all eager to be a part of the festivities. The stores were all decked out in red and black, and the air was filled with the sound of cheering.

Largest snowfall since '78

By John Lindsey

... and the Hub was a winter wonderland. The snow had started falling, and the shoppers were all bundled up, ready to brave the cold. The snow was falling softly, and the shoppers couldn't help but smile as they walked through the Hub.

Phasing them out

By Jan Bonac

... and the Hub was a scene of change. The Phasing them out promotion was getting underway, and the shoppers were all eager to see what was coming next. The Hub was getting a new look, and the shoppers were all excited to see what it would be like.

Irritable

By Jan Bonac

... and the Hub was a scene of chaos. The shoppers were all rushing about, trying to get their holiday shopping done. But the real problem was the irritable shoppers, who were all getting on each other's nerves.

Naughty and Nice

By Marla Moore

... and the Hub was a scene of holiday cheer. The Naughty and Nice promotion was in full swing, and the shoppers were all eager to get their hands on the best deals. The stores were all decorated with festive decorations, and the air was filled with the sound of holiday music.

Clicking around

By Jan Bonac

... and the Hub was a scene of action. The shoppers were all rushing from store to store, trying to find the perfect gift. The Hub was a maze of activity, and the shoppers were all determined to find what they were looking for.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Absence of Malice: entertaining but empty

By John Deitz

In any event, the film is no better, as the writing seems so much more reliance than the story. The dialogue, some of which seems to have been lifted straight from a glossy magazine, is so forced that it is difficult for the audience to see the characters who speak it. The story is not even as entertaining as it seems at first glance. The plot, it seems, is not as well developed as it could be. The result is a film that is neither entertaining nor well-crafted.

The Cars have moved out of neutral gear

By Tom Davies

TheCars have moved out of neutral gear and are now moving in a new direction, with their latest album, "Heartbeat." The album is a departure from their previous work, which was more in the punk rock genre. "Heartbeat" is a smooth, soulful album that shows a new side of the band. The songs are well written and the vocals are strong. The Cars have matured as a band and "Heartbeat" is a testament to that.

Too many gimmicks and not enough Stewart

By Molly Ann Hensley

When a scene starts to drag, you don't expect it to get any worse. In this case, it did. The last scene of the film was so bad that it made the audience cringe. The actors were wooden and the dialogue was trite. The film was a disaster and I would not recommend it to anyone.

Raiders take it to the end in a physical 26-6 win

by Jim Carroll

The South Florida Sun-Sentinel's Peter Walley says the South Florida Bulls defense is as tough as any in the nation, and the Bulls defense did not disappoint in Saturday's game against the University of Miami Hurricanes. The Bulls defense held the Hurricanes to only 26 points, and the defense also forced the Hurricanes to make several turnovers.

Men's B-ball wins; Women's loses; Hockey falls short

by Jim Carroll

The South Florida Sun-Sentinel's Peter Walley says the South Florida Bulls men's basketball team had a tough game against the University of Miami Hurricanes. The Bulls were able to hold the Hurricanes to only 84 points, but the Bulls were unable to score enough to win the game.

Charles River Spa offers facilities to students

With its new golf course, the Rosedale country club offers a great place to relax and unwind. The country club also has a swimming pool, tennis courts, and a full-service restaurant.

Football Picks

Just as the Savannah State Tigers beat the University of Miami Hurricanes 35-21 last week, the South Florida Sun-Sentinel's Peter Walley predicts that the South Florida Bulls will beat the University of Miami Hurricanes 28-14 this week.
