As for now

What I want for Christmas
by John Ashbee

As for now: What will you be hoping for this Christmas? Will you be hoping for the same things as everyone else? Will you be hoping for toys and games and clothes and gifts for you, or will you be hoping for something different, more abstract? Something that is not tangible, that cannot be touched or seen or heard?

Perhaps you will be hoping for peace, for a world free of war and conflict. Perhaps you will be hoping for health, for a life free from illness and disease. Perhaps you will be hoping for love, for a relationship that is strong and fulfilling.

But what about the hope that you will be hoping for? What about the hope that you will be hoping for that is not simply for yourself, but for the world as a whole?

Perhaps you will be hoping for a better world, a world where justice is done and where all people are treated equally. Perhaps you will be hoping for a world where the earth is protected and where the environment is preserved. Perhaps you will be hoping for a world where the poor are helped and where the needy are supported.

As for now, I hope that you will be hoping for something more than just for yourself. I hope that you will be hoping for a world that is better than the one we have now.

Signed...

Ralph Waldo Emerson

Congratulations on a job well done

Dear Editor:

I have just read Ugo Rizzoli's column, "Whirlwind," on the Suffolk Journal's homepage. I enjoyed reading it and thought that it was a great piece.

I would like to add my congratulations to the Suffolk Journal staff and to the students who contribute articles to the newspaper. I think that the newspaper is an important part of the campus community and that it provides a valuable service to students, faculty, and staff.

I believe that the Suffolk Journal is doing a great job of providing a voice for the students and that it is helping to foster a sense of campus community.

Sincerely,

Dana L. Robbins

'The Verdict': A compelling study

By R. Scott Reddy

Paul Newman dominates 'Verdict' junket

Paul Newman (l) and James Mason (l) match wits in 'The Verdict' (Tim DownPhotos)

HEN Paul Newman was being interviewed in London last week for the junket tour of 'The Verdict', it was evident that the star was 'in character'. At the press conference in the Savoy Hotel, he was at pains to avoid saying 'I', preferring instead to say 'we' or 'The Verdict' when answering questions. This was not surprising, as the film is a study of a New York County judge, a role that Newman took on as recently as 1973 when he played the part in the Broadway play of the same name. The movie is directed by Sidney Lumet, who also directed the stage production.

In the role of Judge Henry Wade, Newman is required to deal with a case that is about to go to trial. The judge is an alcoholic who is in danger of losing his job if he doesn't stop drinking. Newman's performance is riveting, and he is able to convey the depth of the character's addiction and the toll it takes on his personal life.

The film is a study of power and control, and Newman is able to bring to life the complex nature of Judge Wade. The movie is a study of the legal system, and Newman is able to bring to life the complexities of the legal profession. The film is a study of the human condition, and Newman is able to bring to life the complexities of the human experience.

Hoopsters beat S. Maine in OT thriller

by Paul Doncaster

The Ben Casey was the only underdog that could beat the Rams. From the time they stepped onto the court, they knew that the Rams were the team to beat and they had to play hard in order to win.

In the first half, both teams played hard and were evenly matched. The Rams led by 1 point at halftime, 30-29. The game was intense and was played at a high level.

In the second half, the Rams came out strong and dominated the game. They had a lead of 10 points at one point, but the Patios came back and made a comeback, bringing the score to 61-60.

The game went into overtime, and the Rams had the lead again, leading by 4 points, 73-69. The Patios fought back and tied the game at 73-73. The Rams then sealed the game with a 3-point lead, 83-73, and won the game.

The Rams beat the Patios and the fans were ecstatic. The Rams were happy and excited to have won the game. The Patios were disappointed and sad to have lost the game.
