Comback dominate '80s top singles

by Greg Beeeman

In search of great singles, 1982 saw the year of the comeback. From either chart-toppers, past and present, there were a number of acts that either sold out or sold in. None of the acts on the Top 50 singles chart were new to the charts, but their recent releases were all new. The success of these acts was due to a combination of factors, including strong marketing campaigns, record label support, and the public's desire for familiar sounds. The year was marked by a number of successful comebacks, including those of Olivia Newton-John, Aretha Franklin, and Daryl Hall and John Oates.
