LETTERS

Response to ‘Parent Night’ rebuttal

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter to express my disagreement with the editorial that appeared in the Suffolk Journal on April 29, titled “Parent Night.” I believe that the content of the editorial is not only inaccurate but also offensive.

The editorial made several claims about the Suffolk Theatre Department, including that it is not producing high-quality productions. These statements are not based on fact. The Suffolk Theatre Department has a long history of producing excellent theatre productions, and recent productions have received critical acclaim.

Furthermore, the editorial accused the Suffolk Theatre Department of being out of touch with the community. This is also not true. The department actively engages with the community through various outreach programs and events.

In conclusion, I believe that the Suffolk Theatre Department is doing an excellent job and deserves more credit for their hard work and dedication.

Sincerely,
[Your Name]

I have no idea how to begin to describe what Norris is up to these days, but for a start let me say that he has been working very hard. He has been writing and recording, and his new album, tentatively titled 'Lone Wolf', is due out sometime later this year. Norris' music has always been a bit of a mystery, but with 'Lone Wolf' he seems to be getting closer to a defining sound. The songs are introspective and personal, yet universal, and the production is top-notch. So keep your eyes peeled for 'Lone Wolf' when it hits the stores, and get ready to be swept away by Norris' melodic and soulful voice.
