‘La Cage’ is the best of times

By R. Scott Hreha

Staged in the Off-Broadway Theatre de Lys, ‘La Cage aux Folles’ is the story of two French men—a middle-aged rent boy and his lover, a former nightclub performer—who have lived together for 20 years. The play is set in a house on the rue de la Bourdonnais in Paris, France. The house is owned by Alphonse, a male housekeeper who works for the couple.

Alphonse is a middle-aged man with a round face and a bushy mustache. He is wearing a black suit and a white shirt. His hair is short and gray. His voice is deep and resonant. He speaks in a slow and deliberate manner.

Alphonse is the manager of the house and is responsible for preparing meals and cleaning the rooms. He is also responsible for making sure that the couple is comfortable and happy. He is a loyal and devoted partner.

The play begins with Alphonse and his lover, Georges, discussing their plans for the future. Georges is a middle-aged man with a round face and a bushy mustache. He is wearing a black suit and a white shirt. His hair is short and gray. His voice is deep and resonant. He speaks in a slow and deliberate manner.

Georges is the owner of the house and is responsible for making sure that the couple is comfortable and happy. He is a loyal and devoted partner.

As they talk, we see the couple preparing a meal in the kitchen. Georges is busy chopping vegetables, while Alphonse is helping him by setting the table. They work together in harmony.

突然，乔治打破了沉默，对阿尔丰斯说：“你知道吗？我一直在想，如果有一天我们的生活能变得更好，我会怎么做？”

阿尔丰斯笑了笑，回答道：“我会很高兴的，乔治。我一直在想，如果我们能在一起，我们就能做更多的事情。”

乔治点了点头，继续准备饭菜。阿尔丰斯则站在一旁，看着他。

How not to lose control

by Stuart Donohue

A common question we get from freshmen is, "How do I know if I am in over my head?" It's hard to pinpoint a specific point where you've had enough, but there are some general guidelines you can follow. The key is to keep a balance between your studies and your social life. If you feel overwhelmed, take a step back and reassess your priorities.

If you're struggling to keep up with your coursework, consider seeking help from a tutor or a study group. You can also reach out to your professors for guidance. Don't hesitate to ask for help if you're feeling lost or unsure of yourself.

Another way to avoid burnout is to take breaks. Make sure to schedule some time for yourself, whether it's a weekend getaway or a night out with friends. This will help you recharge and come back to your studies feeling refreshed.

Finally, don't be afraid to take a break if you're feeling burnt out. Sometimes, it's best to step away from your work for a little while to clear your mind and come back to it with a fresh perspective.

Stranger things have happened

by Anne Redmond

We've all heard the story of the person who suddenly found themselves able to read minds or control objects with their thoughts. It's one thing to hear about these experiences, but to actually witness them in person is something else.

The incident occurred on a quiet afternoon at the library. As the sun shone through the windows, casting a warm glow over the stacks, a sudden commotion caught the attention of everyone present. A young woman, who had been engrossed in a book, suddenly stood up in a trance-like state, her eyes glazed over. She walked over to a nearby table and began to build a tower with blocks.

When the tower was complete, she turned to the people around her and spoke in a soft, melodic voice. "I can read your thoughts," she announced. "You're thinking about your own thoughts, aren't you?"

The crowd was stunned into silence as the woman continued to move the blocks, each movement perfectly timed. Suddenly, the tower collapsed, sending the blocks tumbling to the floor. The woman looked at the remains of her creation and smiled. "That's how it's done," she said, before returning to her book.

Although the incident was brief, it left a lasting impression on those who witnessed it. From that day on, the library was known as the place where the paranormal activity occurred. And although many believed that the woman was a fraud, one thing was clear: the world was a stranger place than anyone could have imagined.
