Groups grapple with conflicting schedules

by Wayne Diner

A student group on campus called the New Student Activities Association (NSAA) in the School of Fine Arts has been meeting in the auditorium to discuss potential conflicts affecting student organizations and the Student Government Association (SGA). A tentative schedule for the next week is set to take a look at the potential schedule problems, according to a student organization leader.

Groups on campus have been grappling with conflicting schedules that have come up for the upcoming week. The final week of classes for the fall semester is set for this week, and students are looking for a way to work together on these issues. A tentative schedule for the next week is set to take a look at the potential schedule problems, according to a student organization leader.

The SGA is the student government association, and it is responsible for managing student affairs on campus. The SGA has been fighting to set up a schedule for the next week, and students are looking for a way to work together on these issues. A tentative schedule for the next week is set to take a look at the potential schedule problems, according to a student organization leader.

March of Dimes rep addresses SGA

The Suffolk Student Government Association, SGA, is an organization that is dedicated to helping Suffolk students keep informed of the issues facing Suffolk students. The SGA has attempted to generate controversy and discussion because that will bring forth new ideas. Most of all, we hope this SGA addition will motivate you to become involved in the Suffolk Student Movement.

What do you think about the possibility of another four years of Ronald Reagan?

Poll and pictures by Karen Mulroy

The Suffolk Student Movement is one issue that the SGA has attempted to publicize recently. We have attempted to generate a feeling of oneness between all the student groups. We feel we are successful thus far since relations between the SGA, Program Council, and the Council of Presidents has never been better. A recent example was the Fall Concert which was co-sponsored by SGA and the Program Council and was a great success in many ways, especially in bringing the two groups together.

We, the SGA, are faced with the problems of reaching a commuting student body, thus we are constantly searching for new sources to keep you informed. This section will be reserved weekly to do just that. To reach you and keep you informed while giving you a say in university issues. Stay tuned with SGA for bigger and better things.

Hamilton, Piracini net two each for icemen

by Robert Olekarme

The Suffolk Men's Ice Hockey Team defeated the Hamilton College Bears 4-1 on Saturday night at the Mullins Center. The promotion was led by coach Kevin Hamilton, who scored two goals and two assists in the win.

The game started off with the two teams evenly matched on the ice. Both teams were showing their skills and competing fiercely for control of the puck. As the game progressed, Hamilton began to take over, scoring two goals in the first period and adding two more in the second.

The team's forward line led by Hamilton, Piracini, and two others were unstoppable on the ice, using their speed and agility to get through the Hamilton defense. The Bears were unable to keep up with the momentum and were forced to play a defensive game for most of the evening.

Despite the pressure, the Bears were able to get on the board in the third period, but it was too little too late as the team was unable to overcome the deficit.

The win was a much-needed boost for the team, who had been struggling in recent games. Hamilton's performance was particularly impressive, as he was a key player in both offense and defense. His leadership and skills set the tone for the rest of the team, who were able to follow suit and secure the victory.
The existing Ridgeway building which Suffolk hopes to replace with a larger one is under debate.

The stage is set for change

by Maria Marrelli

The stage was set at the Suffolk University Theatre on Monday night for a debate between three student groups who are proposing a new theatre and performing arts center. The debate was part of a larger project to renovate and expand the current theatre, which is located in the north end of the campus.

The groups, representing students in the Arts and Theatre, Performing Arts, and Music departments, have been working on the project for over a year. They have been planning and strategizing, and are now ready to present their ideas to the university community.

The debate was moderated by Professor Charles D. Anderson, chair of the Department of Theatre. The speakers were selected by a panel of judges, including Dr. John R. Reynolds, chair of the Department of Music, and Dr. John H. Reynolds, chair of the Department of Dance.

The debate began with an opening statement from each group, followed by a question-and-answer session. The speakers were then given time to respond to each other's arguments, as well as to questions from the audience.

The first group to speak was the Arts and Theatre group, which is proposing a new theatre that would be located on the north side of the campus. The group's proposal includes a 300-seat auditorium, as well as a smaller theatre and a backstage area.

The second group to speak was the Performing Arts group, which is proposing a new theatre that would be located in the center of the campus. The group's proposal includes a 500-seat auditorium, as well as a smaller theatre and a backstage area.

The third group to speak was the Music group, which is proposing a new theatre that would be located on the south side of the campus. The group's proposal includes a 200-seat auditorium, as well as a smaller theatre and a backstage area.

The debate was well-received by the audience, who were impressed by the enthusiasm and creativity of the speakers. The groups were able to present their ideas in a clear and concise manner, and were able to address each other's arguments effectively.

The debate was followed by a question-and-answer session with the audience, who were encouraged to ask questions of the speakers. The speakers were able to answer questions about the feasibility of the proposals, as well as their potential impact on the campus.
