Has the heart gone out of Valentine's Day?

By Cruikshank

A couple of years ago, a couple of newspapers ran articles about how Valentine's Day had lost its meaning in the modern era. The articles claimed that people were too busy with work and technology to appreciate the traditional symbols of love and affection that Valentine's Day represents.

I disagree. Valentine's Day is not about technology or work. It's about love and romance. And while the modern world may have changed, love hasn't.

Valentine's Day is a celebration of love. It's a day to show someone that you care about them. It's a day to remind yourself of the importance of love in your life.

So let's not let the modern world take away our ability to feel love. Let's keep Valentine's Day alive and well.

The Suffolk Journal needs you!

We have openings for writers in every department from news to sports.

We also need people for the following positions:

- Photography Editor
- Production Manager

If you are interested in becoming involved with an award-winning college newspaper please come down to RL 19.
