Suffolk students want their MTV

By Nicole Peterson

Making a case for MTV

As the nation anxiously awaited the MTV Video Music Awards this past weekend, Suffolk students found themselves torn between their love for the medium and their desire for more diversity in programming. The event, held at the Prudential Center in New York City, featured performances from some of the biggest names in music, but it was the absence of diversity in the nominations and winners that captured the attention of Suffolk students.

"I think it's really important that we have a voice in the programming decisions of MTV," said junior Elise Thompson, a member of the Suffolk MTV Student Advisory Board. "It's frustrating to see the same types of videos being played over and over again." Thompson, along with other members of the advisory board, has been lobbying for more representation of underrepresented groups on the network.

"We want to see more diversity in the programming on MTV," said senior John Smith, another member of the advisory board. "It's important for the network to reflect the diverse communities it serves." Smith said that the lack of diversity in the programming is not just a problem for the network, but for the whole music industry.

"Diversity is important in all areas of the music industry," said senior Sarah Jones, a member of the Suffolk Music Industry Club. "It's important for artists to be able to express themselves in a way that resonates with people from all backgrounds." Jones said that the lack of diversity in the programming is not just a problem for the network, but for the whole music industry.

E/R fizzes, Miami Vice sizzles

By Kathleen Dancer

The other current series with a jazzy performance background is the television show "Miami Vice.
"Miami Vice" uses a lot of music, but some of the songs are not very good. In fact, the music can be very distracting at times. Some of the songs on the soundtrack are more interesting than others, but they are not all that great. The show's plot is also weak, and the acting is not very good. Overall, "Miami Vice" is not a very good show. It's probably best to avoid it.

The local Heavy Metal scene

By Marc Johnson

The local Heavy Metal scene is pretty weak. There are only a few bands that are worth listening to, and most of them are not very good. The music is usually too loud and the vocals are often unagreeable. The best band in the area is probably "Face Down," but even they are not very good.
Overall, the local Heavy Metal scene is not very impressive. It's probably best to avoid it.

Exterminate the Exterminator 2

By Joe Brown

"Exterminator 2," the sequel to the original "Ex-terminator," is not as good as the first one. The plot is not very interesting and the acting is not good. The special effects are also not very impressive. Overall, "Exterminator 2" is not a very good movie. It's probably best to avoid it.
